5. Verses 3-6. What was the spiritual effect in those days, of the observance of the ceremonial law of Moses.

7. Verses 3-6. When and why was the Mosiac ceremonial law abolished?

8. What is the sacrifice which every Christian is under obligation to offer up daily?

9. Verse 7. Should money given to build churches be regarded as an investment, and may we expect any financial returns?

10. Verses 8, 9. What practical lessons may we learn from the way these men organized, and from the vigour of the leaders in seeing the organization was effective?

11. Verses 10, 11. What is the practical effect of a proper ceremony for special church services, such as the laying of a foundation stone, or the opening of a church?

12. Would it be a good thing for the church to re-establish band music in its services? Why or why not?

13. Verses 10, 11. Point out its appropriateness and say what psalm they sang together.

14. Should there or not and why, be room and opportunity for spontaneous shouts of praise, as in this case, in the most carefully prepared church ceremony?. (This is one the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

15. In political and other meetings, the people are encouraged to show their appreciation and express their feelings, why should it not be the same in religious gatherings?

16. Verses 12, 13. Why did some of these people shout for joy, and some for sorrow?

17. About how many years was it since the former Temple was burned?

18. Were those that sorrowed and those that rejoiced both right? Give your reasons.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"Yes—if you will have me, sweet. You shall go back to my country with me as my wife." He, too, held out his arms, but Ramona did not come to him. A swift and sudden fear blanched her face, made her heart stand still. In all her love for this man, in all her desire to escape from the coils of the tragedy that surrounded her, she had not thought of marriage. In truth she had not given the manner of their going thought at all. She loved Barton; she hated Ormiston for what he had done to her. It seemed but natural that she should desire to flee from the wrath of the one, hand in hand with the other. She loved this man, whom she had held within her arms, night after night, as she might have held a suffering child. It seemed enough. But since she and Barton had talked together, she had begun to perceive that the latter's austere Puritanism knew naught of love, save of that between man and wife. It was indeed no new thought to her, for it had been her own training as well, and she was happy that he held her so tenderly in his heart, so high in his esteem; she would not, indeed, have had it otherwise, but—he did not know the truth. She was a common woman, plaything of a man who, whatever his feelings toward her, had made her his mistress, not his wife.

Looking back over the events of the past two years, she realized in one devastating flash all the harm that Ormiston had done to her. Barton's feelings toward her were honest, sincere, this she well knew, nor would any such alliance as that which had existed between Ormiston and herself have been possible for either of them. Her wish to get away, to leave behind her the dreadful past, had robbed her of understanding. Her one desire had been to escape. Now that Barton's words brought the truth home to her, she found herself confronted by a new and greater difficulty. He wished her to go with him as his wife. Did she dare marry him, with this black horror lying between them? Within a few hurrying moments she must make her decision, and the necessity for making it had come upon her unawares. Should she accept him, telling him nothing, or should she let him know the truth. The future of both of them rested upon her words, yet she knew not what to say.

"Your wife!" she gasped, lowering her eyes. Then to herself, as though to protect them both from some impending fate—"Ah—no—no—no."

Barton did not hear her, but her agitation, her sudden change of manner, told him that something was amiss.

"Will you marry me, Ramona?" he asked, very earnestly, now that a feeling had crept into his mind.

Still she found herself unable to answer him. The pendulum of decision swung this way and that, reacning no conclusion.

"Marry!" she exclaimed, turning toward him with an air of utter helplessness. "Marry you! Santa Maria!"

Barton allowed his hands to fall at his sides. It was true, then, that he had been mistaken, after all. She had wished him to take her from Port Royal, but it was not love that had prompted her to ask it. She had offered him friendship and he had mistaken it for love. His fears had kept him silent, until the appeal of her eyes, her words, had loosed his tongue, still he had no thought of blaming her for that. But the revulsion in his feelings left him cold, formal, constrained. He drew himself up, concealing his hurt beneath a certain pride.

"If I have presumed," he began, but she interrupted him, terrified.

"Ah, no, no. It is not that." It seemed to her doubly cruel that he should now accuse himself, lay the blame upon his own failure to understand.

"Though I am but mate of a trading ship," he went on, not without a trace of bitterness, "in my own country I am accounted a gentleman."

At this she came near to weeping. As though such trifles mattered now.

"Oh—John—John—I know. You need not tell me that. Jesu! how can I ever make you understand?"

"What is there to understand?" he asked, completely mystified.

She turned to him with a sudden resolve. Her conscience told her that the time had come to speak.

"This," she said, then met his eyes. In them she saw respect, admiration, love. Her courage failed her. She could not sweep them away. It was to brutal, too wrong. There was no question in her heart of her right to them; nothing that she had done could she have avoided doing, nor was the guilt at her door. And it was her dearest, her only possession, this love that he had given her. To destroy it, now, would be to destroy herself. She could not bring her lips to speak that which was in her heart. In pitiful confusion she hesitated, her eyes seeking his.

Barton, still concerned with the fear that he himself had in some way been found lacking, continued his self-defense. He took her hands in his and drew her toward him.

"If I have seemed dull, and have not understood, it was only that I could not believe you cared for me. It seems wonderful past belief. Ramona—tell me—do you love me—truly—do you?"

She still attempted to resist him, though but feebly, for the tenderness, the passion, in his voice swept away the defenses she had been so desperately rearing.

"Ah—my dear—you know nothing of me," she whispered.

"I know that I love you. Is it not enough?"

"Yes—it is enough." She could fight herself no longer, now that she must fight him as well.

"And—you—do you love me?" he asked, his face very close to hers.

"John—John—can you not see?" Her blushes, the helpless way in which she crept into his arms, might well have answered his question. He held her close, rejoicing in her nearness.

"And you will go back with me, as my wife"

Again this terrible question. She could no longer avoid answering it.

"I will do anything you wish, John," she said, and lay very white and still against his breast.

Barton kissed her reverently, yet with no lack of ardor. It would have been small compliment to her charms, had he failed to be swayed by them. When their lips met, all her doubts, her fears were swept aside, consumed, in the fires of her love. She had hung over him all these weary days, waiting for this supreme moment. Now that it had come, her mind no longer performed its functions. Emotion, unreasoning, told her only that they belonged to each other, that the force which drove them into each other's arms was a greater force than all the logic with which she had thought to keep them apart. She abandoned herself utterly to him, and to her love, doubly intense, because throughout all these leaden years love had been denied her. For a long time she lay trembling within his arms, scarcely able to breathe, fearful even now that some turn in fate might take him from her. Barton, too, felt the supreme motion of the moment, and in some vague way it came to him that she had suffered, and that he had comforted her and wiped her tears away.

After along time she spoke. Her voice was very tender, but there still clung to it some suggestion of fear, deadening the hope that rose in her heart. Perhaps, if the good God willed, the future might prove more kind to her than had the past. She resolved that, should the chance of happiness be granted her, she would spend all the remaining years of her life in proving herself worthy of it.

"Do you believe, John," she asked, glancing up at him with tear-dimmed eyes, "that all things are made right between those who greatly love?"

"Is it not set down in the Good Book?" replied Barton gaily. "'Love covereth all trangressions.' But what have we to do with such matters?" No thought of transgression on the part of this tender and pure-minded child had crossed his mind, a fact which bore witness to both the cleanness of his soul and his instinctive recognition of the purity of hers.

She gazed at him quite happily now. The question that he had asked, "What have we to do with such matters?" she felt no longer demanded an answer. He had quoted to her from the book that she well knew formed the basis of the religion of his people. "Love covereth all transgressions." If he believed that, ther was no reason why she should not do so as well.

"When one loves much, John," she told him, as though in answer to his question, "it makes one afraid."

"When one loves much" he laughed, his arms close about her, "naught else matters. Come—forget your foolish tears. To-day we will set out together."

"Where will we go, John?" After all, it mattered little, she reflected, once they shook the dust of this place from their feet.

"To church, first of all, that our love may be blest in the eyes of God. After that, it would perhaps be best to wait, in the hope that my comrades may return from The Havana."

The thought of waiting, here, in this place, so fraught with dangers for them both, filled Ramona with dismay. She wished to leave the Indies, with all their bitter recollections, without further delay.

"Let us not wait," she said earnestly. "I have no love for this country. It was here that my father was killed. I shall not be happy until I am safe away."

He made light of her fears, not understanding their cause.

"Of what are you afraid, dear heart?" he asked, his arm about her. "No one shall harm you." With a happy smile he drew her toward one of the windows. Through the trellis of vines the glory of the dawn swept in upon them, brilliant gold and rose against a turquoise sky.

"See—a new day, by God's blessing," he said, his eyes sweeping the horizon. "Our wedding day. In my country men think much of God and His works. Let us give thanks to Him for our great happiness." He took her two hands in his and bowed his head. The action was full of simple dignity. John Barton had been raised, as all men of his time and faith were raised, to see the hand of the Almighty in everything about them, and to accord Him a profound yet child-like reverence. Presently, he spoke. "Lord, who ruleth over all things, grant Thou to this woman, and to me, Thy humble servants, grace, that we may serve Thee justly and righteously in all our ways. Amen."

ENDS PAIN !

That is what Zam-Buk does when applied to a cut or scratch. It also stops the bleeding, draws out all the soreness, and finally grows new skin over the injured part.

Mr. Victor Lawson, of Magrath, Alta., writes: "I scratched my hand badly with a rusty nail. The wound pained terribly until I applied Zam-Buk, but this balm ended the pain almost as soon as applied, and healing soon followed."

Zam-Buk is antiseptic, and prevents any possibility of festering or blood-poisoning. It is equally good for eczema and all skin troubles, chronic sores and piles. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

Fluent Women Novelists.

Several women novelists beat the men as public speakers. Mrs. Bailey Reynolds is a beautiful speaker; Mrs. Humphry Ward is equally fine: Lucas Malet says just what she desires to say, and Sarah Grand might get a seat in the cabinet if she were a man, says the London Answers.

What It Was.

The small boy was the first to answer the telephone. The person on the other end of the wire was a friend of his mother, and the following conversation ensued: "Is this Mrs. Blank's residence?" "No, ma'am; it's Mrs. Blank's little boy.'

Rich and Poor.

If you desire not to be too poor, desire not to be too rich. He is rich not who possesses much, but who covets no more, and he is poor not who enjoys little, but he who wants too much.

Modern Plays.

"The average modern play," said a playwright, "calls in the first act for all our faith, in the second for all our hope and in the last for all our charity."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Medicinal Value of Apples.

People ought to know that a good thing is to eat apples just before retiring for the night. Persons uninitiated in the mysteries of the fruit are liable to throw up their hands in horror at the visions of dyspepsia which such a suggestion may summon up, but no harm can come even to a delicate system by the eating of ripe and juicy apples before going to bed. The apple is excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digested shape than any other fruit. It excites action of the liver, promotes sound and healthful sleep and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. This is not all. The apple prevents indigestion and throat diseases.

CROWD OF SOLDIERS ON A RUSSIAN CRUISER?

This photo is timely just now when the Germans are forcing their way to the Gulf of Finland. It illustrates the voyage of a batch of Russian soldiers to France on board an auxiliary cruiser. Before the vessel sailed a member of the Provisional Government came on board and addressed the men, wishing them the best of luck. Hearty cheers for the Allies were afterwards given. The picture shows the member of the Provisional Government leading the cheering.

RAID BY SHELL LIGHT.

Boyd Cable Draws a Vivid Word Picture.

"The hour chosen for the raid was just about dusk. There was no extra-special preparation immediately before it. The guns continued to pour in their fire, speeding it up a little, perhaps, but no more than they had done a score of times in the last twenty-four hours. The infantry clambered out of their trench and filed out through the narrow openings in their own wire entanglements.

"Out in front a faint whistle cut across the roar of fire. 'They're off,' said the forward officer into his 'phone, and a moment later a distinct change in the note of sound of the overhead shells told that the fire had lifted, that the shells were passing higher above his head, to fall further back in the enemy trenches and leave clear the stretch into which the infantry would soon be pushing.

"For a minute or two there was no change in the sound of battle. The thunder of the guns continued steadily, a burst of rifle or machine gun fire crackled as spasmodically.

"Men gulped in their throats or drew long breaths of apprehension that this was the beginning of discovery of their presence in the open, the first of the storm they knew would quickly follow. But there were no more shells for the moment, and the rattle of machine gun fire diminished and the bullets piped thinner and more distant as the gun muzzle swept around. The infantry hurried on, thankful for every yard made in safety.

"But at the attacking point the infantry were almost across when the storm burst, and the shells for the most part struck down harmlessly behind them. The men were into the fragments of broken wire, and the shattered parapet loomed up under their hands a minute after the first shell burst. Up to this they had advanced in silence, but now they gave tongue and with wild yells leaped at the low parapet, scrambled over and down into the trench. Behind them a few forms twisted and sprawled on the broken ground, but they were no sooner down than running stretcher bearers pounced on them, lifted and bore them back to the shelter of their own lines.

"In the German trench the raiders worked and fought at desperate speed, but smoothly and on what was clearly a settled and rehearsed plan. There were few Germans to be seen, and most of these crouched dazed and helpless, with hands over their heads. They were promptly seized, bundled over the parapet, and told by word or gesture to be off. They waited for no second bidding, but ran with heads stooped and hands above their heads straight to the British line, one or two men doubling after them as guards. Some of the prisoners were struck down by their own guns' shellfire, and these were just as promptly grabbed by the stretcher-bearers and hurried in under cover.

"Up and down the selected area of front-line trench the raiders spread rapidly. There were several dug-outs under the parapet, and from these gray-coated figures crawled with their hands up on the first summons to surrender. These, too, were bundled over the parapet. If a shot came from the black mouth of the dug-out in answer to the call to surrender, it was promptly bombed. At either end of the area of front line marked out as the limits of the raid strong parties made a block and beat off the feeble attacks that were made on them."

Botha Warns Traitors.

A grave warning against propaganda aiming at the political independence of South Africa has just been issued broadcast by General Botha. His statement follows:

"Members of the South African party must not allow themselves to be misled by false and misleading propaganda for independence. The proposal is now being made merely to win votes at the Provincial Council elections by an appeal to sentiment, and not to the sound sense of the people.

The proposal is wholly impracticable, and is moreover very dangerous, for in the present war conditions it can only lead to bitterness, division, race hatred, and even civil war.

There is in South Africa a strong English population whose Motherland is now engaged in a life and death struggle. It is not surprising that they regard this movement as treasonable and disloyal. It is unjust and dishonorable to make such an attempt at this moment, and the dishonor is all the greater as the proposal is only intended to catch votes for a particular party.

My warning is intended very earnestly, because I foresee in this movement nothing but ruin for South Africa and disastrous consequences for the South African people. I appeal above all to our pioneers and the fathers of our people to follow the safe way of honor, along which a great future awaits us."

A Heroic Sailor.

The log of the wireless operator of the British trawler Floandi, which was sunk in the Adriatic Sea when Austrian cruisers attacked a fleet of mine drifters, has been placed on exhibition in the London National War Museum. It contains the entry which the wireless operator, Douglas M. Harris, was making at the moment when he was killed by a shrapnel bullet. Harris had continued to send and receive messages while the trawler was being riddled by shells.

Decline in Ostrich Industry.

As illustrating the decline which has taken place in the ostrich industry in South Africa it is interesting to note that, according to the results of an official census, the number of birds in the union has fallen from 746,657 and 776,268 in 1911 and 1913 respectively to 399,010 in 1916.

Straw Hats.

The straw-hat trade of Luton and Dunstable and other places in the neighborhood depends upon the fact that the straw used for plaiting is grown on adjacent chalk land. The plant has great affinity for the silica in the chalk and flints, and uses it for coating the outside of the stalk with its beautiful glass-pipe covering.

Power Plants in Bombay.

Ten power plants for agricultural purposes were erected in the Bombay Presidency during the year 1915-16.

How Deaf Mutes Feel Music.

Deaf mutes love music. It thrills them. They feel it, says the Popular Science Monthly, by placing their hands and elbows on a piano while the teacher plays it. The vibrations not only give sensations which enliven the body, but they actually stimulate them. The parts most sensative to vibrations are the chest, head, lungs and feet. "An exciting feeling comes up through the floor," is the way one deaf boy describes it. "Without music I would be lonesome," wrote a little Italian deaf mute. "It gives me a strong shock through the feet to the head," stated another. Others when asked to explain their sensations said, "I feel it in my temples and in my legs," "I feel it through my whole body," and "I feel it in my chest and lungs."

According to teachers of deaf mutes, musical instruction is more important as an educational factor for the deaf child than it is for the hearing.

St. Augustine Nights.

By night (in St. Augustine) you may hear the negroes sweeping the streets, doubly darkling over their surface and softly gossiping together. Theirs are not the only black voices you hear, for their casual race seems to have no more stated hours for sleeping than eating. Their mellow murmurs, especially when the nights are warm, rise in what seems perpetual joking, as if from their humorous pleasure at being alive together in the same amusing world, and if you have no worse conscience than the talkers their voices will lull you again to the slumbers they have broken. It is as if a swarm of blackbirds carrying news of the spring northward had swept chuckling through the trees and fluttered the fans of the palms and the leaves of the magnolias with such comment in their course as would naturally occur to blackbirds.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

The Fertile Rock.

Gibraltar is often called a barren rock, yet it has 456 species of indigenous flowering plants. Castor oil plants, daturas and daphnes attain the dignity of trees and geraniums and heliotropes the proportions of hedges. These floral delights often conceal cannon and other armaments. The few snakes that are found are small and harmless. Lizards several inches long are often seen.

Licorice Root.

Several thousands of tons of licorice root, which is considered a pest and worse than worthless by the natives generally, are annually gathered in Turkey for exportation to this country for use in the manufacture of chewing and smoking tobacco as well as for flavoring confectionery and beer.

Home Discipline.

Mrs. Pintz—Is she good to the children? Mrs. Quinn—Very. She lets them do everything their father doesn't want them to do!

Self indulgence deprives a man of everything that might make him great.

Know Your Business.

In the American Magazine James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, says:

"Any one wishing to acquire comprehensive knowledge of his business or of any specific subject must not try to store his mind with endless details about other things. For example, I have tried to learn all I could about the steel business in its mining, manufacturing, selling and transportation branches, but to enable me to carry business information in my head I have not attempted to retain in my mind minute detailed data about politics or baseball.

"Absorb what to you is essential—that is, everything pertaining to your field of endeavor. Abolish from your mind nonessential, extraneous subjects. No human brain has cells enough to store up all the facts about all subjects under the sun. Don't clog your brain cells with impedimenta. Feed them only with vital material, with things that will enhance your usefulness in your sphere of activity by increasing and improving your stock of needful information."

Pattern Coins.

Pattern coins and trial pieces are now guarded with the greatest care by the mint authorities, and the government does not permit them to be owned by private persons—that is, those patterns made since the year 1837. Before that time the government sanctioned the sale of certain specimens, but when it was discovered how many of all the different varieties were in the possession of coin collectors an attempt was made to confiscate them wherever found, but this resulted in failure.

A twenty dollar brass trial piece struck from dies of a twenty dollar gold piece at Denver mint was the first coin of any denomination to be made there. It was presented to the State Historical Society of Colorado and at once took its place among the many rare trial pieces and pattern coins which are nowadays highly prized by coin collectors.—Magazine of American History.

Buy This Canadian Cocoa

Now-a-days Canadians must stand by each other. Canada needs to keep all the money in the country that is in circulation. Every time you buy a foreign article made abroad, out goes that much money into some foreigner's pocket. Inversely, every time you purchase a Canadian made product, that much money stays in the country, to your own benefit and the community at large. Without question, Canadian goods are equal if not better than foreign. If you have not patronized your home market, start to-day and begin by trying

Value of Responsibility.

Greater than the value of contact with facts is the value of responsibility. In a man's life it is the arrival of some responsibility which arouses the powers and makes durable the qualities of manliness.

The effect of responsibility is instantaneous. It is like a magnet in its power to charge the individual with the faculties needed for the matter in hand. A light is generated among the fragments of information. Even after a systematic education these fragments seem to lie in the mind in a chance order until this light appears and shows them ready for use; then abilities develop which never would develop, even with practice, without responsibility.

Walnuts as Food.

The ancients held the walnut in high esteem. Mortals could and did exist on acorns, but walnuts were so delicious in taste and flavor, so palatable and nutritious, that they were revered as food only for the gods to dine upon. Modern investigation and modern customs have popularized the uses of the walnut to such an extent that it is now regarded not only as a luxury, but as a food of great nutritive value. A chemical analysis of the nut shows that it is six times as nutritious as meat. No vegetable or fruit, with the possible exception of the olive, can be compared with the walnut as a strength giving and fat producing food. All nuts are possessed of elements of nutrition, but the highest in rank is the walnut.

REAL LIFE INSURANCE.

Its Cost Is Simply the Price of the Prevention of Disease.

"Real life insurance," says the North Carolina state board of health, "is not the kind on which you have to pay annual premiums as long as you live in order to hold it or for your family or some one else to get the benefits only when you are dead. Real life insurance is that which insures you against death—preventable sickness and a premature departure from this world—and allows you to enjoy the benefits while you yet live. Furthermore, it promises you long life and a happy one, a healthy life and a prosperous one. It may be had by anybody, and, like other kinds of insurance, he who puts most in it gets most out of it.

"Real life insurance has its price. The adoption of correct living habits—moderate eating and drinking, regular work and play, plenty of rest in the fresh air and a disposition not to worry—is the price of a long, happy life, free from diseases of the kidneys, heart and arteries, the diseases that sneak in upon a man's life when he is not aware.

"Then there's another source of attack you need protection against—typhoid fever. Homes with pure water, screened doors and windows, clean premises free from flies and anti-typhoid vaccination is the price you pay for protection against typhoid. The price against malaria is whatever it takes to prevent mosquitoes from breeding and from biting you after they have bitten people with malaria.

"Security against tuberculosis, bronchitis, grippe, colds and pneumonia is to be had mainly at the great price of preventing people from spitting in public places. It is to be had also by living on friendly terms with fresh air day and night, by avoiding overheated homes or offices, by creating a resistance to cold by a daily cold water bath about the neck and shoulders and by proper living habits.

"After all, the prevention of disease is the price of real life insurance. If we invest liberally and wisely in the means and methods of preventing sickness we may expect handsome returns in a long, useful, happy life."

EDISON IS AN INVENTOR.

Thomas A. Edison has always disliked the term "discoverer" as applied to himself. "Discovery is not invention," he once remarked to an intimate associate. "A discovery is more or less in the nature of an accident. A man walks along the road intending to catch a train. On the way his foot kicks against something and, looking down to see what he has hit, he sees a gold bracelet imbedded in the dust. He has discovered that, certainly not invented it. He did not set out to find a bracelet, yet the value of it is just as great to him at the moment as if, after long years of study, he had invented a machine for making a gold bracelet out of common red metal.

"Goodyear discovered the way to make hard rubber. He was at work experimenting with india rubber, and quite by chance he hit upon a process which hardened it—the last result in the world that he wished or expected to attain. In a discovery there must be an element of the accidental, and an important one, too, while an invention is purely deductive.

"In my own case but few, and those the least important, of my inventions owed anything to accident. Most of them have been hammered out after long and patient labor and are the results of countless experiments, all directed toward attaining some well defined object.

"All mechanical improvements may safely be said to be inventions and not discoveries. The sewing machine was an invention. So were the steam engine and the typewriter."

The Way to Bake Beans.

To make baked beans soak one and one-half pints of small white beans overnight in soft water. In the morning drain and parboil, but not enough to crush the beans. Place in the bottom of a bean pot several slices of bacon (salt or fresh pork), then put in about half the beans, over which sprinkle salt, a heaping spoonful of brown sugar or New Orleans molasses, then more slices of the bacon. Over this place the rest of the beans, with the salt, sugar or molasses and bacon on top. Cover with soft water and bake at least eight hours, though they are better if baked all day. Add soft water as needed.

Agriculture in Japan.

According to the latest investigations made by the department of agriculture and commerce, the number of families in Japan engaged in agriculture is 5,448,292, of which 1,728,692 families cultivate their own land, 1,507,520 families are tenant farmers, and 2,202,080 familes are working partly on their own land and partly as tenant farmers. The land owning farmers are 32 per cent of the total. The percentage is small as compared with 62 in the United States and 58 in the Netherlands, but is large as compared with 13 per cent in England.

Diplomacy.

"Papa, when you are a diplomat you try to make the other fellow believe everything you say, don't you?"

"Not exactly, my son. You try to make him believe just the opposite of what he thinks you really intend to say, and even then you are lying to him."

Devoted to Duty.

"Are you ever coming to bed?" he called out.

"I don't know," she replied. "I promised Mrs. Jones that I'd keep track of her husband while she is away, and I'm going to know what time he comes home if I have to stay up all night."

TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYERS.

Every one is familiar, of course, with the ordinary torpedo boat, a swift vessel of from 400 to 600 tons in displacement, carrying no defensive armor, but armed with tubes for discharging the deadly torpedoes.

To counteract these wasps of the sea, according to the Popular Science Monthly, a type of vessel was designed of about double the size of torpedo boats, a little greater speed and in addition to torpedo tubes, armed with rapid fire six to twelve pounder guns, for the avowed purpose of destroying torpedo boats. Lately all the great nations have stopped building torpedo boats as originally designated and are building torpedo boat destroyers.

Recent engagements have developed the fact that torpedo boat destroyers are used almost wholly as torpedo boats. So they are really battleship destroyers. To defend the capital ships from torpedo attack the dreadnaughts and battle cruisers are armed with secondary batteries of rapid fire guns from four to six inches in diameter. One well placed shell from a gun of that size will ordinarily put a destroyer out of business, as the destroyers have no defensive armor whatever.

Shoes of an Army.

The old saw about an army moving on its belly is all wrong. An army—horse, foot and gun—moves on its feet, and marching and walking—as the average civilian, not a policeman or a postman, understands walking about his daily vocation—are two very different things. An infantryman on his feet carries about sixty pounds of dead weight, forty-five pounds or so of pack, eight pounds or so of rifle and the rest in ammunition or separate equipment. He cannot choose his own gait, and he has to negotiate all kinds of ground—winter roads corrugated with frozen ruts, slippery trails of mud and water, rocks, hot sand. And more than half the time a change of shoes is for him a luxury. He is very apt to keep the same pair on night and day, wet or dry. If his shoes are not right or if his feet are not sound he cannot last a week with a moving command, and it is entirely possible that he will even have trouble in a trench.

Jarred the Rainbow.

It is usually supposed that the downpour of rain that sometimes follows a flash of lightning is due to the coalescence of fine drops on losing their electrical charge, but a Finnish observer concludes that the thunder jars the drops together. Near Vasa a heavy thunderstorm came up from the east late one afternoon, and, as the sun was unclouded, a brilliant double rainbow appeared in the east for half an hour, arching from horizon to horizon. At each roll of thunder the rainbows seemed to be much shaken, the wedge being displaced and the colors blurred. This could not be due to the lightning, and it seemed that the same cause might enlarge the raindrops and disturb the rainbow.

Buttermilk.

Buttermilk is more wholesome than ordinary milk for the reason that it is already curdled, and the curds taken in the stomach are broken into minute particles, whereas ordinary milk is taken in the stomach and it forms large, hard curds, which often escape digestion. The acid forming bacteria of buttermilk combat the growth of putrefactive poison forming bacteria in the colon.

High Cost of Battleships.

A modern giant battle cruiser will cost approximately $20,000,000, a superdreadnaught can be built for $18,000,000, a scout cruiser for $6,000,000, a destroyer for $1,300,000, while ordinary submarines cost $600,000 each for the smaller type and from $1,000,000 to $1,200,000 each for the larger boats.

No Discount.

"You ought to cut my hair cheaper," said the baldheaded man to the barber, "because there's nothing much to cut."

"H'm! In your case we don't charge for cutting the hair; we charge for having to search for it."

The Doones of Exmoor.

It was long contended that the story of "Lorna Doone," by Blackmore, had no foundation in fact, but now it is declared that the picturesque region of Exmoor really contained a family of Doones, the originals in romance, if not of disgrace, of the people described in the book.

His Ambition.

Gladys—And what is the height of your ambition. Dick (after a careful survey of her)—Well, dearie, I should say that it was about five feet three.

If the small circle D E F represents the amount of Bovril taken, then the large circle A B C represents the Body-building power of Bovril—proved in an independent series of experiments on Human Beings carried out by a well-known British Physiologist to be from 10 to 20 times the amount of Bovril taken

To-day more than ever you need to hold the fortress of your health intact. The nation needs your work. The nation cannot afford that you should fall out of the fight. Maintain your health with Bovril.

The wonderful body-building powers of Bovril give you more strength to resist the attacks of illness. You are sure of being nourished if you take Bovril.

Body-Building Power of Bovril 10-20 times the amount taken

Modern Improvements.

Patient—Doctor, I'm having an awful lot of trouble with the gas in my stomach. Doctor—Yes, yes; I know. Those old fashioned fixtures are giving people a lot of unnecessary trouble these days. Just step into the next room, and I'll have my engineer wire you for electric lights.

Playing For Bigger Stakes.

"Why didn't you accept the Browns' offer to take us in their car to the party?"

"I thought I'd wait. They have just an ordinary auto, and the Watsons have a limousine. They might offer to pick us up."

The lady of a good family was showing her ancestral home to her small son. She pointed with special pride to a bust of her father.

"And that, Bobbie," she said, "is your grandfather."

Bobbie looked somewhat perplexed.

"Is that all there was of him?" he asked.

Constipation Relieved by Food

MAN was provided with the weapon to fight constipation right in his food. The weapon is the natural waste in the cereals. Any doctor will tell you that the long muscular digestive tube is precisely designed to be incited to action by means of waste, and not by irritating drugs.

Dr. Jackson's

is an entirely drugless, full-nutrition food with the proper amount of natural waste. It positively relieves constipation or we return your money.

Roman Meal is composed of entire berries of wheat and rye with wheat bran and flax seed (rendered absolutely tasteless and odorless by electricity).

Roman Meal is different from ordinary bran-foods. The irritating effect of bran used alone, which may cause intestinal catarrh, is counteracted in Roman Meal by the soothing effect of the flax, which also lubricates the digestive tract. Do not stir Roman Meal porridge except while mixing meal and water, or you positively spoil it.

Roman Meal retains all of the natural food elements; and all of them are needed. It is the opposite of the highly milled cereal foods and flours which are robbed of their precious blood regulating salines, also indispensable food elements known as "vitamines."

The United States Government's Health Service will send you a most interesting booklet written by three well-known scientists. Their experiments show the importance of full-nutrition foods.

Just write a letter and ask for booklet entitled, "Bread as a Food." Enclose five cents and address your letter: "Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C."

When you have read this booklet you will realize how precious Roman Meal, the whole grain, full-nutrition food will be to you. At all grocers.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Acquittal and a Conviction

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

When my uncle Charles Dingley was found dead one morning in his bed I as his nearest male relative was at once summoned. I went to his room which had been left untouched in every particular, and by the bed on which the body lay I found a bottle about two inches high and one inch square, around the four sides of which was pasted a label with the usual "Poison" warning printed on it.

There was nothing in my uncle's affairs to indicate that he had had any intention of committing suicide. He had not been very well for a few days, but there was nothing serious the matter with him. He might have been murdered and the bottle placed at his side to give the impression that he had taken poison. There were no marks on the body to indicate that he had been murdered.

The establishment of the facts in the case did not appeal to me. My uncle was dead, and whether he had been murdered or murdered himself made little difference to me. To put detectives on the case would cost money, but who would be the gainer? The authorities came to the house, made a perfunctory examination of the body and its surroundings and reported that the deceased had come to his death by means of poison administered by himself.

I went through the house myself looking for a clew. I had found a tumbler on the table with the poison and in the kitchen pantry found a dozen others of the same shape and make.

That fact indicated that the tumbler had come from the pantry. Dishes containing different kinds of food—mostly left over—were in the closet, one of them being a saucer of preserved peaches. It had apparently been knocked over, and a little of the juice had been spilled on the floor. It occurred to me that whoever had taken down the tumbler from the shelf had done so in the dark and had put his hand against the dish of peach preserves.

If he had done this some of the juice, if it had got on his fingers, might have adhered to them. I found faint, cloudy smears on the tumbler and, putting the tip of my tongue on them, thought I could detect saccharine matter. Examining the label on the poison bottle carefully, I found stains that I inferred might be the same as the cloud on the glass.

I locked up the tumbler and the bottle of poison, but had no desire to go any further with my examinations. I saw nothing to be gained by unearthing the mystery.

Fate decided, however, that it should be unraveled, or, rather, it should come out that there was no mystery at all. I was engaged to a girl who had discarded a former lover. Herman Goodsell hated me and brought about a suspicion that I had murdered my uncle. But this did not occur until my uncle had been buried. The will when opened disclosed the fact that my uncle had left a lot of money and every cent of it to me. Then our enemy began to get in his fine work whispering here and there, till the police felt obliged to take cognizance of the reports and arrested me for murder.

The first thing I did was to engage an attorney and through him obtain the exhumation of the body for the purpose of having the finger prints taken. This was done. Then I had the tumbler that had stood by my uncle's bed examined with a microscope. A faint yellow substance was found on it, which contained a finger print. By treating the label of the poison bottle chemically a very clear finger print was obtained.

I had no idea how the accusation against me had started until my fiancee told me that she had probed the matter and traced a beginning to her former lover. This put me on my mettle to thwart him, and I named him as one of my witnesses to be subpoenaed for my trial. I gave my lawyer a list of questions to ask him, most of which had been furnished me by my sweetheart. When the case was called he was one of the first witnesses to take the stand, and my attorney soon showed malevolence on his part in this: That he had gone about spreading the reports that I had murdered my uncle. This had nothing to do with the case, but was intended for revenge.

When my real defense came up my attorney made short work of the matter. He had the tumbler and the label of the poison bottle in court, copies of the finger prints on them and a finger print of my uncle's thumb and two forefinger tips. They tallied exactly.

Goodsell was in court when I received my vindication. Under my instruction he received a tongue lashing that he was not likely to forget. My advocate showed how little evidence there had been against me, how it had been worked up by Goodsell and his reasons for having started the suspicions against me which had led to a needless and expensive trial. Goodsell cringed under it. Indeed, my acquittal was his conviction. When my counsel had ceased speaking my accuser left the courtroom and has never shown his face in the place since.

My uncle's bequest was a surprise to me, for I supposed he had little or nothing of value to leave and what he had would go to another branch of the family.

A Caution.

Reginald—I love you, Madeline. For you I would give up family, position, wealth. Madeline—Hold, Reginald! Giving up family is all right. I fain would be spared a mother-in-law. Give up your position if you can get a better one, but please hold on to your wealth. We may need it.

Helpful Shortcomings.

"Your husband is quite a trial."

"Yes, but his shortcomings are useful in a way. After viewing him at close range our cook says she would never risk getting married. And we'd hate to lose her, that's a fact."

True.

"He still has the first dollar he ever made."

"Well, that's better than owing now to somebody the last dollar you ever will make."

Her Explanation.

Mamma—Hazel, I thought I told you not to eat your candy till after dinner. Hazel—I'm not eating it, mamma; I'm only sucking the juice.

Her Preference.

"The doctor says he'll remove my appendix for $1,500."

"Oh, George, I'd much rather have a touring car."

There is nothing more pitiful than a life spent in thinking of nothing but self.

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why English Labor Men Offered Strong Support to War Against Germany

WILLIAM HARD tells in The Metropolitan how the British Labor party swung from being an anti-war party to a pro-war party. The British Labor party is a great force in politics, and in Arthur Henderson, according to Mr. Hard, it has a leader the most highly placed and the most politically powerful in any country in Europe, except Russia. The British Labor party has a paid membership of 2,250,000.

The British Labor party falls into two parts. One is the trade union part, the other the intellectualist part, so-called. The first has 2,200,000 members, the second about 42,000, composed of three Socialist groups, joined by middle class people, as well as the working class. These groups are the Independent Labor party, the British Socialist party and the Fabian Society. From the Independent Labor party, having 30,000 members, come the conspicuously pacificist, so-called Labor members of Parliament, like James Ramsey MacDonald and Philip Snowden, so often referred to in the news as Labor members when they do not represent the great Labor party at all. They are not trade union leaders like Henderson, Ben Tillett, and James Sexton. And their presence in Parliament leads to misapprehensions in other countries.

Not even John Burns, who resigned from the Asquith Government at the beginning of the war, as a protest against it, was a Labor member. He was elected as a Liberal. Labor has been thoroughly supporting the war in England. Mr. Hard was at the great meeting of British Labor representatives when the six Labor members of Parliament who had taken office in the new Lloyd George Government were called upon to justify themselves. David Kirkwood, who engineered a strike in Glasgow, was called upon. He told how he was deported by the government of which the Laborites were members. Cries of "Henderson" filled the hall when he had finished. But Kirkwood's strike was an outlaw strike, Henderson showed, forbidden by Kirkwood's own trade union, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. The chairman called Mr. Bevin, dockworker, of Bristol. Could the Labor members sit with Lord Rhondda, coal baron, in the face of the conditions in the South Wales mine fields, where a strike was imminent? Had not Lord Rhondda refused to reveal his costs? Was he not hourly growing richer? And "if it is treason in war time to give an order for a strike, it is equally treason to give a just provocation for a strike." Was Henderson in good company? But how should he remedy the situation by resigning? asked Henderson. He was there "to see this war through." And, when the vote came, the entrance of the Labor members into the government was approved by the British Labor party, through its delegates, by 1,849,000 to 307,000.

On August 1, 1914, Mr. Henderson issued an anti-war manifesto. August 3 Germany presented its ultimatum to Belgium, and the next day invaded that country. August 7 the resignation of James Ramsey MacDonald as leader was accepted by the Parliamentary Labor party. The party had wavered in its opposition to a declaration of war, but MacDonald had not. MacDonald was succeeded by Henderson. He who had issued the anti-war manifesto within a week was leading the Laborites in the direction of unbending war. Henderson is an iron founder by trade. He is a professional politician, who was an alderman and a Mayor before Labor selected him for Parliament. He is a Wesleyan, who has not missed a watch night service in thirty-seven years, a temperance man, crusader against liquor and gambling, a human brotherhood man, an internationalist, when internationalism is feasible. He is the typical British Nonconformist.

"It was felt that as Belgium was called upon to defend her existence against the attacks of a guaranteeing power, this country, being also a guaranteeing power, was bound to stand by those whom it had sworn to protect or else be forever regarded as morally decadent and unreliable," he told Mr. Hard, explaining the sudden change of view in British Labor circles on the outbreak of the war. "We threw ourselves into the breach. Seeing that the world's order is not yet so stable as to make all nations, great and small, the guarantors of collective peace, we took upon ourselves the duty of enforcing our judgment against a wrongdoer."

It is interesting to note what The London Daily Mail, a Northcliffe publication, has to say about the Labor leaders.

"The country, which loves the hack politician far less than it did of old," says The Mail, "and it never loved him very much, sees that these Ministers are all good, sound, direct men. The wire-pullers, naturally enough, do not like them at all, and are going about saying that Labor has an excessive representation in the National Government and is getting too much. We do not think anything of the kind. One Englishman is as good as another, and the day is long past when a seat on the front bench was the prerogative of a certain type or class. Far from believing that Labor has supplied too many Cabinet Ministers, we look cheerfully and quite confidently to the day when it will have many more. And if we are told with bated breath that a Labor Cabinet is a possibility of the future, then we reply without hesitation that we are quite ready for it. We are satisfied that whenever it does come, as, no doubt, it will in due course, it will be as good as any other government we have ever had."

Our Government.

We customarily speak of this republic as a new nation, although our senate has been in continuous existence as a legislative body since 1789. How many nations have maintained unchanged a system of government for a longer period? What a distinction it would be—for a republic—to present the oldest structure of government on earth, and we are well in the forefront of that race now. Look over the nations and see.

Demonstrating the first pneumatic tire—Michelin in the Paris-Bordeaux Race, 1895.

MICHELIN

The Pioneer 22 Years Ago

The World's first pneumatic automobile tire was made by Michelin 22 years ago. At that time Levassor (Panhard), Benz, De Dion—in fact, all of the famous automobile pioneers—said that an air filled tire, made of cloth and rubber, was a madman's fantasy.

None of these great men would give Michelin's revolutionary ideas a trial, so he built the crude car illustrated above, and on it triumphantly demonstrated the utility of his great conception.

Just as Far Ahead Today

The Michelin Universal Tread Casing combines the advantages of non-skids of both the raised tread and suction tread types, and in addition possesses the long life and resiliency which has always characterized Michelins.

The Michelin Universal has behind it Michelin's 85 years experience in manufacturing rubber, and Michelin's 22 years' experience in making and selling pneumatic tires—both exclusive advantages which are at once the envy and admiration of the tire world.

Just give this tire a trial—that is all we ask

CZAR AND KAISER.

Both Titles Mean the Same and Are Derived From Caesar.

It seems strange that two words so different in sound and spelling as czar and kaiser are the same. Both are but changes made in the course of nearly 2,000 years in the word caesar.

All the Roman emperors took their title from the first emperor—our old friend of schoolboy days—Julius Caesar. When Charlemagne founded the holy Roman empire and was crowned emperor, he took the name caesar or, in the frankish form, kaiser. When the modern German empire was established in 1871 the German emperor, William I., grandfather of the present kaiser, took the same title—kaiser.

Similarly the rulers of the eastern empire at Constantinople, successors to the old Roman empire, called themselves caesar. Every petty chieftain or prince in the territory surrounding the eastern empire copied the custom and called himself caesar or czar. In the course of time, however, the greatest of these, the czar of Muskovy, conquered the other czars until he was the sole or practically the sole ruler called czar. However, the king of Bulgaria, when a few years ago he had himself crowned as king, took the title of czar

The Gordian Knot.

As the old legend goes, the father of the Greek King Midas, once king of Phrygia, was originally a poor peasant. The people of Phrygia being much disturbed, an oracle had informed them that a wagon would bring them a king who would put an end to all their troubles. Not long after this saying, Gordius (Midas' father), suddenly arrived in the midst of an assembly of the people, riding in his wagon. At once, to the great surprise of Gordius, they made him king. In his gratitude Gordius dedicates the wagon to the god Zeus, and it was placed in the acropolis at Gordium. The pole of the wagon was tied to the yoke by a knot of bark and a second oracle declared that whoever untied that knot should reign over all Asia. It was Alexander who untied the knot by cutting it with his sword, thus assuming himself to be the man referred to by the oracle.

Wooden Pipes For Water.

In these days of iron and cement it makes one sit up to read the report from the New England waterworks on wood pipe for water supply. They claim it is preserved and not rusted or corroded by water; it is not corroded by any substance or destroyed by acids or salts; its carrying capacity is 20 per cent greater than cast iron pipe and remains constant, while that of metal pipe decreases with age; it does not taint or affect fluids going through it; it does not burst if frozen, the elasticity of the wood preventing it; it requires less labor and experience to lay in place than metal pipe; it can, when service pipes are not taken off, be laid in shallower ditches than metal pipe, for it is not easily affected by frost; while more or less joints show slight leakage when the pipe is first filled, they soon swell up and give less trouble in the end than cast iron pipe.—Los Angeles Times.

Heavy Bombardment On The Flanders Front

Field Marshal Haig's Report Gives Little Idea of What Is Occuring---Both British and German Statements Refer to the Artillery Activity---Petrograd Reports Sinking of Two German Torpedo Boats.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, October 19.—Field Marshal Haig's report from the Flanders front to-day gave little idea of what is occurring in this important fighting area. Only the activity of the German artillery at certain points was mentioned. Berlin's statement, however, indicates that an extremely heavy bombardment is in progress in Flanders, the area where the big gun fire is intensive taking in the front occupied by the French near Houtsolst Wood on the British left flank as well as the lines to the south held by the British themselves. Recent reports have made it apparent that the British airmen have been unusually active, flying far behind German lines and handling roughly the enemy formations that attempted to penetrate behind the British front. The clear weather prevailing has facilitated these important preliminary operations.

Two additional German fighting craft have met disaster in the area of naval operations around the Gulf of Riga.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 19.—Two German torpedo boats were sunk in the mine fields in Moon Sound yesterday, the War Office announces.

BERLIN, via London, October 19.—Two Russian infantry regiments totalling 5,000 men, were captured on Moon Island, in the Gulf of Riga, it is officially announced. The island is now completely in the possession of the Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 19.—Many bombs were dropped yesterday with satisfactory results on Varssenaere airodrome, Flanders, by naval aircraft, says an official announcement given out here to-day. All our machines returned safely.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 19.—The French last night attacked the German lines on the Aisne front after a heavy bombardment. The War Office reports that German positions were penetrated and that one hundred prisoners were taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, October 19.—Russian officials here had no despatches to-day on the removal of the Russian Provisional Government from Petrograd to Moscow, but said that the plan of moving the seat of the Government conceived some time ago undoubtedly had been hastened by the German advance in the Riga territory. Ever since the removal of the capital was first discussed Russian officials here have reiterated that the Kerensky Government felt it would work with fewer hampering influences in Moscow than in Petrograd, which is the centre of the opposition. The German advance, Russian officials here say, undoubtedly has strengthened the extreme Radicals in the Council of Soldiers and Workmen's delegates.

NO CHANCE FOR AN IMMEDIATE PEACE

Germany's Present Political Crisis Has No Significance as Far as Ending the War is Concerned is London's Opinion—Merely a Political Squabble.

(By Arthur E. Mann.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, October 19.—Germany's present political crisis is due to a purely political squabble and has not significance from the standpoint of peace, according to the first belief expressed in best informed quarters here to-day. Socialists activity in Germany, it was declared, is due principally to the fact that the Radicals have been stung into energetic measures by attacks on them by the Conservatives, and the pan-Germans have been fighting hard for control after having tried Michaelis as Chancellor and found him wanting. British observers to-day pointed out that the repeated mention of Prince Von Buelow and Foreign Secretary Kuehlmann as successors to Michaelis might be regarded as convincing proof that the Kaiser does not intend to form a "Peace Government." The War Lord knows that men of the type of Von Buelow and Kuehlmann could never conduct negotiations with England because England would be unwilling to deal with such men whose records have been shown up, and who stand as much discredited with England as Von Bernstorff now stands with the United States. The feeling here to-day is that there is not the slightest chance for peace before another spring and summer campaign with American might added. However, England expects Germany to make her most desperate drive for peace this winter.

ALL MEN IN CLASS ONE MUST REPORT SAYS THE REGISTRAR

TORONTO, October 18. — "Every British subject in Canada who comes within the ages in Class 1 under the Military Service Act must report," stated Mr. Glyn Osler to-day. The registrar has received a great number of letters from men who have been placed in Class E and other classes by the medical examination, desiring to know if they have to report.

"There will be no chance for them to report after November 10. After that date they are liable to prosecution, and will have to show why they didn't report. A man is not exempted from military service until the tribunal has dealt with his case. Then he may only be exempted for a month to settle some particular business, or he may be exempted for several months, or he may not be exempted at all. The fact that he is in a certain class physically is no guarantee that he will not be called upon for service. Every man must report or after November 10 show why he should not meet the penalties under the Act."

The rain did not interfere with the attendance of Class One men under the Military Service Act at the Armouries to-day, and a new record for a single session was set up when twenty-five candidates were examined. The majority of them were from the rural districts, and the standard of physical fitness was very high, seventeen being placed in A Category. When the Board adjourned for luncheon there were already several men waiting for the afternoon session, which was not scheduled to open until 3 o'clock.

The percentage of Class A men was appreciably increased yesterday as a result of the three sessions of the local Medical Board when, out of a total of fifty-five men examined no fewer than thirty-nine were graded as fit for the trenches, 71 per cent. of the total being placed in A Category. This is a considerably higher percentage than the average maintained so far, which, up to yesterday noon, was 57 per cent. Yesterday afternoon's session was probably a record breaker from the view point of Class A men. There were twenty-two examined and exactly eighteen, or 82 per cent. were placed in A category. Another man was pronounced fit for home service and only three were rejected outright.

The figures for the morning were published yesterday. At the afternoon session the results were as follows:

At night fifteen were examined, with the following results:

CONFERENCE AT OTTAWA

Eastern Ontario Liberals Meeting at Capital To-day—Decision of Premier Murray Will Have An Effect

TO-DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—The decision of Premier Murray not to enter the new Union Cabinet was made known to the deputation this morning through the press, and will undoubtedly have a moral effect upon to-day's proceedings at the Liberal conference. There is no doubt that Mr. Murray's decision to remain the Liberal Premier in Nova Scotia is very gratifying to the Opposition leader. Sir Wilfrid and Premier Murray are very old and close personal friends, and the prospect of losing his active support in the coming campaign was viewed by him with regret. Sir Wilfrid has delayed issuing his manifesto until after the Unionist platform.

A .K. Maclean, M.P. for Halifax, who is the second choice, is said to be on his way to Ottawa to confer with the Premier. The name of Hon. W. S. Fielding has also been mentioned. The attitude taken by Mr. Fielding's paper, the Journal of Commerce, toward the union, however, is interpreted here by many as an indication he is not a probability for the position.

Sir Robert Borden's manifesto, issued last night, contains the reiteration that Labour will be represented in the Cabinet. To-day Senator Robertson is in the city. He is the Labour representative to the Upper Chamber, and it would not be surprising if he were given the Labour portfolio from that branch of Parliament. J. G. O'Donohoe, K.C., of Toronto, who is solicitor for the Trades and Labour Congress, has been an aspirant for the position, but he left for Toronto on Wednesday of next week, at which believed to be closed so far as he is concerned.

THE LIBERAL CONFERENCE.

The results of to-day's conference of Eastern Ontario Liberals will have something to do with the framing of the Opposition manifesto. A further conference of Western Ontario Liberals is to be held at London, probably on Wednesday of netx week, at which Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be present. Whether F. F. Pardee, the Western Ontario leader, will be on hand or not is not known here. From Western Ontario reports are filtering through to the effect that Mr. Pardee may be a Unionist candidate and that Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works, will be present at his nomination at Sarnia, which was to have taken place on the 17th.

One of the chief points of difference between the Unionist and Opposition manifestos will be that portion of the platform which will deal with the carrying on of the war. Moreover, where the government manifesto is general in character, the Opposition manifesto will be merely specific. For instance where in the Government platform reduction of the tariff may be formed in that plank which refers to increased agricultural production, Sir Wilfrid will likely lay down a definite proposal along the lines of the Liberal tariff resolutions previously moved in the House. Where the Government promises in general terms consideration of the needs of the returned soldiers, he will make specific promises in the way of pensions, etc.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will go to Montreal on Monday night and will communicate to his friends there the views expressed at to-day's Liberal conference. The drafting of the war plank of his manifesto will depend upon the combined result of the conferences.

CONFIDENCE IN LAURIER.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—An expression of confidence in the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the feature of this morning's session of the Eastern Ontario Liberal candidates and other prominent Liberals who gathered to consider the situation. The resolution, which was moved by H. B. McGiverin, the Liberal candidate for Ottawa, and seconded by A. C. Hard, candidate for Leeds, expressed "admiration of the life and work of the greatest Canadian, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and desired to express the hope that he will long continue as leader of the great Liberal party."

TO-DAY'S GATHERING.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Forty odd Liberals from that part of Ontario east of Cobourg and including it, gathered at the Museum Building this morning. The deputation, which consisted of

Union Government Announces The Policy It Intends To Follow

MISS MARGARET BURDEN—Of Toronto, who on Wednesday became the bride of Major W. A. Bishop, V.C., Canada's distinguished airman. The bride is the grand daughter of the late Timothy Eaton.

Platform Outlined Relates to the Prosecution of the War and to the Consideration of Problems That Will Arise During its Progress.

ADEQUATE TAXATION

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—After consultation with his colleagues the Prime Minister has issued the following statement with regard to the formation and personnel of the new Government, and with respect to policy so far as there has been opportunity to consider it:—

The present Union or National Government has been formed with a desire to give representation to all elements of the population who support the purpose and effort of Canada in this war. Representative men of both political parties are included in its personnel; and it is intended forthwith to give to Labour special representation, upon the principle already followed with regard to agriculture. Impressed by the urgent necessity of putting aside all minor considerations, of sinking all party differences, and of presenting a united front at this solemn and momentous juncture in the nation's history, the members of the Government have come together in the duty of service to the national interest.

War Foremost in Policy.

The lines of policy which will be followed chiefly relate to the prosecution of the war and to the consideration and solution of problems which will arise during its progress, or which will supervene upon the conclusion of peace. They may be outlined as follows:

1. The vigorous prosecution of the war, the maintenance of Canada's effort by the provision of necessary reinforcements, the immediate enforcement of the Military Service Act, and the most thorough co-operation with the Governments of the United Kingdom and of the other Dominions in all matters relating to the war.

Civil Service Reform.

2. Civil service reform, with a view to extending the principle of the present Civil Service Act to the outside service, and thus to abolish patronage and to make appointments to the public service upon the scale standard of merit. The Civil Service Commission has already been directed to make a report to the Prime Minister as to the necessary steps for that purpose. Such arrangements will be subject to the existing regulations which give preference in appointments to returned soldiers who are duly qualified.

Woman Suffrage; Tax Profits and Incomes.

3. The extension of the franchise to women, with suitable provisions for enabling married women to determine their nationality, and to obtain naturalization notwithstanding marriage.

4. Adequate taxation of war profits and increased taxation of incomes, as necessitated by the continuance of the war.

Land Policy.

5. A strong and progressive policy of immigration and colonization, accompanied by suitable provisions to induce settlement upon the land, to encourage increased agricultural production, and to aid in the development of agricultural resources.

6. Effective arrangements for demobilization, for the care and voca-

HUNS SPENDING MILLIONS TO SWAY NEUTRAL OPINION

Lavish Expenditure Has Been Made to Spread German Propaganda in Neutral Countries—Newspaper Subsidized and Influenced

PAID PEACE AGITATORS

(By Webb Miller.)

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Germany to-day is pouring vast amounts of money into neutral countries for propaganda designed to sway public opinion, according to authoritative information here. The expenditures for this work will total more than eight million dollars on the present scale of lavishness. Much of the money is spent in subsidizing and influencing newspapers. In a number of cases the Germans bought newspapers outright and managed them from behind the scenes. Large amounts are also being paid agents to keep peace agitation going.

A MEXICAN INCIDENT.

It was learned to-day that on one occasion the German Minister to Mexico, Von Eckhardt, subsided a Mexican newspaper by furnishing it news print paper and securing for it, tolls free, the German communique and other "German made news" in return. This newspaper was to feature the German communique on the first page and to bury allied official reports inconspicuously on an inside page. German made editorials were also to be carried.

In the year before China entered the war authoritative information is that Germany spent $2,000,000 in that country through her agents, seeking to influence the Chinese public against Japan and the allies. One of the mistakes made was the blundering translation into Chinese of a pamphlet designed to promote anti-ally feeling. The clumsy wording of the pamphlet aroused the indignation of the Chinese.

FRANK JENNE SAYS.

Did you know that there was character in neckwear? That subtle something so apparent to the eye, so significant, yet so difficult to define and desirable. That character makes its presence felt in the cravats I am showing, in an extremely satisfactory degree. For neckwear to accentuate the snappy style of your new suit, or to impart quality to any attire. "Come to me."

NOT ONE CATEGORY A MAN HAS YET SAID HE'LL SERVE

Eighty-four Men Out of a Total of Eighty-Five Who Have Registered Here Have Filed Their Claims For Exemption

NO SIGNS OF A RUSH

Not one Category A man had reported for service under the Military Service Act here up to 11 o'clock today, the sixth day upon which the local postoffice has been ready for registrations.

In fact only one man in any category has expressed himself as ready to serve. As already announced, he is a Grade C III. recruit.

Up to the same hour to-day eighty-five had registered, only eighty-four of these claiming exemption. By far the greatest number were Category A men.

From present indications the Exemption Tribunals and the military prosecutors are going to be the busiest men in Canada during the month following Nov. 8th.

The post office was open last night for the benefit of Class One men, and while there were no signs of a rush the registrations were more numerous than on the previous night. Twenty-one in all registered and exactly twenty-one filled in exemption blanks. The majority are claiming exemption on the grounds of ill-health and infirmity, that they are more useful in their present occupation or that they are the sole support of a widowed mother or of other dependents. So far there have no "conscientious objectors."

Although in some of the Toronto papers draftees have been urged to pin their medical history sheets to their exemption claims Postmaster Edgar says he has received no instructions to this effect and consequently has been allowing the applicants to retain their medical sheets.

The post office will not be open tonight and Class One men will have to register during the regular office hours for the present. There had only been two registrations to-day up to the time the Examiner called.

The tardiness of the men in making their reports is something which the authorities find hard to understand, as the course of procedure is clearly defined. B and C men are assured

A CREDIT TO THE COUNCIL.

The action of the City Council, Wednesday night, in unanimously voting the sum of $5,000 to the Red Cross Fund, will be praised by most and will not probably be criticised by the few. The splendid appeal of Red Cross work, and the need for more financial support seems to have been recognized when one of the most financially careful members of the Council proposed the vote of $5,000. And it is hoped that it is a reflection of the sentiment of the city at large. Peterborough's civic contribution is all the more creditable when it is placed alongside the smaller gifts of other Canadian municipalities. It is greater, in proportion to our population, than most of the other cities of Canada. In Guelph the city council voted only $3,000, and the dissatisfaction with this inadequate amount is so strong that there is a demand upon the council to reconsider its action, and vote a larger amount. Waterloo County Council has set a fine example to the loyal County of Peterborough. Although Waterloo County contains a very large percentage—perhaps fifty per cent.—of German population, or population of German descent, the County Council voted $10,000 to the Red Cross Fund, a most creditable thing when one reflects how many of the ratepayers must have, more or less, natural and inevitable sentimental sympathy with the Central Powers, whose defeat we are striving to compass.

The need for the support of the merciful and mighty work of the Red Cross is greater by far than it was a year ago. Canada and Great Britain have more men in the fighting zone and fiercer fighting with correspondingly greater casualties is going on. We must not let our soldiers suffer from lack of surgical, medical, or nursing attention, as they must do if the funds to be provided are not increased. We want to think over these things. We are living at home, in peace and comfort and safety, which we owe to the spirit and sacrifice of our soldiers. We shall be greatly wanting in humanity and in interest for the comfort and care and cure of our soldiers, many of them our fellow citizens, if we fail to put a true value upon Red Cross work, and fail to give substantial recognition of our duty.

Major Bishop, the champion aerialist of the allied air fleets, has made himself an arch-Bishop.

MORE THAN CABINET UNION NEEDED.

The news reports tell us that the only man in Windsor, Ont., who did not claim exemption from the operation of the Military Service Act, was a French Canadian. This is not surprising, nor even remarkable. The French Canadians are our fellow subjects, as brave fighters as their transatlantic compatriots. A French Canadian domiciled in Western Canada would naturally take to fighting for the cause of liberty and for the liberation of the home land of his ancestors. He has not been subjected to the traitorous influences that have been at work for years upon the French Canadian population of Quebec.

It is more than morally certain that if the people of Quebec had not been subjected to the propaganda of Nationalism, which is against Canadian participation in Britain's wars, the recruiting response from Quebec would have been as proportionately generous as from other points of Canada.

For years, the anti-British cult of Nationalism have not only been permitted to insidiously poison the popular mind in Quebec, but has been officially encouraged by the government, taking into the cabinet and keeping there, three Nationalist fire eaters.

While the effect of this permitted and officially encouraged virtual anti-recruiting campaign has helped keep down Canada's tale of soldiers, it has done more than that— inflicted more permanent national harm— by intensifying race antagonism and destroying the spirit of unity among our people, which is indispensable to true national growth and achievement. It has helped to keep the two main racial elements of Canada apart; helped herd them in separate folds. It has not only injured national and imperial interests, but it has adversely affected commercial interests to such an extent, that wide-awake business men of Quebec and Ontario have organized for the restoration of a "bonne entente," which would never have been destroyed, but for the extremists who have plotted personal or organized aggrandizement at the expense of national harmony by aggravation of racial and religious antipathies.

A true, real union government is comparatively a thing of a day, organized for a specific object; and of a necessarily temporary character. But what we want is national unity, which can only come from national harmony, and that can only come, and slowly, too, from throttling the voices of whatever tone, or speech, that have been uttering discordant sentiments and creating mutual suspicions and distrust.

THE UNION GOVERNMENT.

It does not appear that the Union Government is yet an accomplished fact. The Maritime provinces, including Sir Robert Borden's bailiewick, is not yet represented by any new timber in the Union Cabinet. For that and other reasons, thinking, sober—and possibly dull-witted—people are slow to "size up" the new arrangement, and cannot go into ecstacies which seem to seize a great many emotional or enthusiastic persons.

A Union Government seems to be a necessity if Canada is to have an administration that will unify our people to the point of adequate participation in war-winning. But from present appearances and from the point of dispassionate regard it does not seem that either in personnel or policy it is anything to rave over, as some persons and journals are doing. While it has a great deal of good ability it cannot be described, like Grenville's cabinet, as a "ministry of all the talents." It has within it, however, sufficient ability, if wisely directed, to accomplish the putative object of its formation—to help Canada help win the war. Any way it is the only government we have, and we must make the best of it. We have to take it on trust, and if it lives up to expecaion, if it fills the bill, it is entitled to what it will receive, cordial and popular support. But before the government is definitely formed, until it declares its policy and shows how it proposes to deal with national problems, we must be excused from going into extravagant jubilation over it. We should be sane and steady and fair.

An example of somewhat extravagant panegyric of the new government is found in an article by "Ralph Connor," who lets his imagination—the imagination of the fictionist, rather run away with him. He gives Sir Robert Borden praise of the highest; puts him in a niche above an inspired patriarch of Scripture history.

Personally, Sir Robert Borden is an estimable man, but the political character given him, and the achievements credited to him are not quite in line with the estimaion in which his war adminisraion is held, not by his poitical eenemies, but by his party friends and colleagues. His "courage" and "patience" are praised in connection with the formation of a Union government, though in his past career, especially during the past three years, he has, many think, shown too little of courage to deal with palpable and conspicuous wrong doing that clogged the machinery of war administration, and too much of patience in tolerating in his following and cabinet, elements antagonistic to the most fruitful war administration. Not that it is called for to disparage the leader of the new government; but we are serious people and we must take Sir Robert Borden as he is and his Cabinet as it is, and not have our sense of values disturbed; our clear vision dimmed by the gamour of spotheosis.

In the language of the 'Change, the union government is a "business proposition," and must be regarded from a business point of view. It has been formed to do a specific work; we expect it do that work; and, pending results, we must regulate our attitude by the aptitude it shows to do its work, by the policy that is to be applied. Glittering generalities and fine rhapsodies are not called for any more than hostile philippies.

As a political entity the union government is not ripe for either extravagant laudation or gratuitous condemnation. It seems a litte hysterical to panegyrize the head of the union government to a point above the furmuncular patriarch of Uz, and present his colleagues as fit subjects for canonization. Nor is there call for the condemnation inspired by disgruntled and disappointed partizanship.

The union government must be judged by the wisdom of its policy, and its promise of fulfilment. To permit of fair judgment it must have its chance—a fair chance—to show what it proposes to do, and the way it goes about doing it and the success it accomplishes.

To date only 25,000 men under the Military Service Act have been marked for the front line trenches—medically examined and placed in class "A".

Sliced Cucumber Pickles.

Soak six quarts of peeled and sliced cucumbers and 6 very small onions in a weak brine for 3 hours and then drain well. In a kettle on the stove, put 2 quarts of weak vinegar, 5 cups of sugar, 1-3 teaspoon of cloves, 1-3 teaspoon of paprika, 1 tablespoon of curry powder, and 1 tablespoon of celery seed. Set this over the fire and, when it is hot, put in the cucumbers and cook for half an hour.

MILITARY NEWS

Through a typographical error in a heading in the Examiner, yesterday, there my have been some doubt as to the location of Gunner McLeish who is in hospital in France, suffering from trench and rheumatic fever. The heading read "Gunner McLeish in Toronto," instead of "in hospital," as it should have been. The local boy, whose mother lives at 162 Adeline Street, city, has been at the front with the 6th Canadian Siege Battery and is now in a base hospital in France.

The following provisional appointments, promotions and transfers of officers of the C.E.F. in Canada are authorized: 1st Depot Battalion, Lieut. K. G. Lech to be adjutant and captain; Lieut. S. Young to be lieutenant.

The mother of a Peterborough member of the 33rd Battery has received the following interesting letter from a Canadian Chaplain:

"I was out back twenty miles from our front line Sunday before last, holding services with our Brigade of our Canadian Field Artillery, enjoying a well-earned rest after a long, long period of hot service on two fronts, or two bits of our front. I took the home addresses of those who remained after parade service for their communion, and am dropping a few lines to their parents and other relatives. Your son was one of them. He was looking fit and well. It was a great pleasure to me to be able to hold service for them. They are a splendid lot of boys and ever since the Vimy Ridge show I have had the greatest admiration for them and their work. They are second to none among the field gunners at the front and you may be proud to have a son serving with them I hope they will soon be turning their faces homeward with the laurels of victory.

Yours faithfully,
CHAS. W. HEDLEY.
Chaplain 3rd Canadian Division.

Last Friday night a public reception was tendered Capt. J. P. Melrose and Pte. Matt. Potts, who both returned from service at the front for a temporary leave of absence. The town whistle sounded during the afternoon and conveyed the news to the populace that soldiers were returning, and hundreds were assembled at the T. H. & B. depot on the arrival of the evening train. The band headed a procession to the gore, the returned heroes being seated in Live Oak Hose Co.'s parade cart. Mayor Marshall presided over the congratulatory speech making. Among those who made addresses were F. R. Lalor, M.P.; Thos. Marshall, M.P.P., and Rev. Dr. Laidman. In response to a call by the crowd for a speech, Capt. Melrose reneged, but in lieu thereof held up his two little sons—Scotch kilted—one on each arm, and the crowd gave them all a stirring three cheers and a tiger.

Pte. Potts is home on a two months' leave. He left here with B Company of the 114th Haldimand Battalion last year.

Capt. Melrose enlisted with the 37th Battalion, and left Dunnville on Jan. 7th, 1915, going to Cayuga. On May 25th he was transferred to Niagara-on-the-Lake, and left there on June 7th, sailing from Montreal on the 9th. He had the rank of Lieutenant, and there were five officers and 250 other ranks in this detachment. They were attached to the 17th Battalion, stationed at East Sandling, Kent. He crossed to France on March 20, 1916, and was attached to the 42nd Battalion, Royal Highlanders of Canada. Later, after a fortnight in England he, on May 10th, returned to France and was attached to the 13th Battalion, R.H.C., and has been with them ever since—about 15 months continuously in active service in the Ypres salient and at the Somme. He was wounded in the battle of Hill 70 in the Lens area on August 15th, receiving shrapnel bullets in the face and neck. He was sent to England, and after discharge from the hospital went before the medical board, and was given two months' leave, with the privilege of returning to Canada. He left England Sept. 15th, and arrived at Montreal on Sept. 26th.

Hello!

Yes, this is 317, Paskin's Store.

Eh? Oh, you want my advertisement. Well, I'm not giving one this week.

What's that?

Oh, I said I'd give one this week, and it's wrong to break my word. Now, look here, you don't know what you're talking about; it's not wrong, it's only fashionable.

Eh! What do I mean? Why, all the big fellows do it. Even Mr. Hanna says he will set a price on potatoes when it looked as though there were too many, and then broke his word when it was discovered the crop was not up to expectations. And what he does must be right, because a food controller must be like a certain lady mentioned in the Bible: "Above suspicion." Eh! What?

Yes, potatoes will be 25c a peck here, and of course I sell those hams.

Cheese? Oh, sure, 29c a pound.

Eh! Pickles? Oh, yes; Heinz Sour, Sweet Mixed, Sweet Mustard, and Chow Chow, from 35c a quart.

Eh? Well, I'll see about next week, but from this week you can just say A. W. Paskins, corner Hunter and Aylmer, is still doing business at the old prices.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Things are booming in every department of the Y.M.C.A. at present. Practically all activities are w organized and well under way. The programme this year is in advance of any laid out during the last few years. The plan of class, group and team organization, which were formerly held only in the gymnasium, is now extended to both the social and religious departments and is adding greatly to the efficiency of management, and has also served to increase the interest of the young men and boys themselves. Under the new plan, it is assumed that every member of a gymnasium class should represent his class in participating in game tournaments and in a Bible class, thus adding to the percentage of credits awarded his class.

Meeting To-night.

The first meeting of the School Boys' "A" Bible Class group will be held to-night to reorganize the Collegiate Club which proved such an interesting feature in the programme for the older Collegiate boys last year. Supper will be served at 6.15 o'clock, and Collegiate boys sitxeen years of age or over, whether members of the Y.M.C.A. or not, are invited.

A contest is now on between the six classes of the Boys Department, there being something over two hundred and fifty individual contestants. The contest will run until Christmas time and the winning class will be determined on the basis of attendance at gymnasium and Bible classes and participation in the various game tournaments.

To indicate the interests that the boys are taking in the new programme, it might be stated that in one of the classes this week twenty-eight boys attended the gymnasium class, and twenty-seven out of this number were found in Bible study in another room following the gymnasium work.

There will be a game tournament for each class followed by an interclass tournament in which the winners of the class tournaments will contest for the leading honours. The boys will receive credits for participation in the games, and each boy will score ten points for his class by adding a new member to the enrollment of either a gymnasium or a Bible class.

A boys' membership campaign is to be launched next week and there will also be a contest between the classes mentioned and for various prizes to be set up. The boys are quite interested in the fact that a free membership ticket is to be given each boy who secures five new members. This contest will start on the 24th of October and will run until the 30th of November.

An energetic campaign for senior members is to be launched on the 15th of November with good team organization, and will close on the same date that the boys finish their work.

We are pleased to note a number of new members of the business men's gymnasium class, several of whom have not been in the gymnasium for a number of years. We should recommend this class to every man for the work undertaken is well adapted to the older fellows who also participate in the games as though they were boys again.

Peach Marmalade.

The ingredients are: Ten pounds of ripe peaches, peeled, stoned and cut into pieces, 1 large pineapple grated fine, 3 large lemons, juice only. Put the peaches into the preserving kettle, on the back of the stove, where they will heat slowly, to draw out the juice. When they come to the boiling point, cook for an hour, stirring from the bottom very often. Steep 15 of the peach kernels in water until the water is well flavoured. Add this, the lemon juice and pineapple to the peach mixture. Measure this and to every pint allow 3-4 of a pint of sugar. Cook all together 12 minutes, stirring constantly.

INTSTRUCTIVE ADDRESS BY DR. COUGHLIN TO THE MEDICAL SOCIETY

Eight Little Inmates of the Belleville School Were Used in Demonstration as to Teaching of Deaf and Dumb.

EDUCATIONISTS ATTENDED

Eight little inmates of the Belleville School for the Deaf and a talk deafness, To do justice to the victim tive character by Dr. Coughlin, Superintendent of the School, afforded an object lesson of great interest to the Medical Association last night at the Public Library. A number of the educationalists of the city were also invited to the demonstration.

Deafness and Disease.

Dr. Coughlin, who was assisted in his demonstration by Miss Deannard and Miss Ford, two of the teachers at the school, laid stress upon the fact that 50 per cent. of the deaf cases are due mostly to contagious diseases, such as scarlet fever, measles and cerebo spinal menengitis.

Complete Isolation Necessary.

He emphasized the necessity of taking complete isolation in such cases, and quarantine and the enforcement of health laws.

Adequate salaries were advocated by the doctor to secure the best service from the Medical Health Officers, thereby securing the best results, which from a purely monetary standpoint, would be most satisfactory. Disease neglected or not properly isolated, results, as pointed out, in defness. To do justice to the victim a school which is kept up at an enormous annual expenditure must be maintained. Ideal sanitary conditions could reduce one-half of this drain on the country.

Speak Intelligently.

The children Dr. Coughlin brought with him ranged from four to sixteen years. In the school, of which there are two hundred and sixty-two patients, the majority are deaf from birth, or have become so from disease before five years of age. The children, who have been inmates for some length of time, are, through the medium of lip-reading, able to carry on intelligent conversations, speaking though with perhaps a slight halt, clearly.

Method of Teaching.

The children, 60 per cent. of whom are taught speech and lip-reading, learn the language gradually; first the consonant and vowel sounds, then slowly, to form words. Teaching is easiest to the child from one to five years of age. The children brought by Dr. Coughlin readily answered any question asked by the spectators.

Easily Taught.

The children are easily taught school work and are able to compete with their more fortunate sisters and brothers. One child from Peterborough has passed his entrance and attends the High School in Belleville, and is making steady progress. Several have also passed the entrance in the school.

1. A new portfolio, that of Immigration and Colonization, has been established.

2. For the effective prosecution of the war a permanent committee of the Cabinet will be established.

3. For the purpose of considering and carrying out the other lines of policy above mentioned another permanent committee of the Cabinet will also be constituted.

"Everywoman" Scores A Big Hit in Ottawa

"Everywoman," which paid another visit to Ottawa last evening before a crowded house at the Russell theatre is one of those plays—if play it may be called for it combines spectacle, opera, drama, and musical comedy—which for years remains a feast for the theatre-going public. No play in years has reached the same undisputed heights as "Everywoman," and last evening's performance enhanced its popularity with Ottawa theatregoers.

The story of "Everywoman" is the story of every woman. The play might be as aptly entitled "Tthe Pursuit of Love" inasmuch as the motive is the life story of a talented refined and beautiful young woman who yearns for love—the yearnings of the average young woman of our day. This yearning in her breast for love—a great and overwhelming love leads her to leave the peace of her fireside to seek to satisfy her longing out in the world. Her mirror tells her that she is beautiful, and despite the warnings of "Truth" she pays heed to "Flattery" who tells her of the great King Love who is waiting somewhere out in the vast mystery of things to claim her as his own.

Has Good Caste.

The dramatic possibilities of the piece are almost infinite and are taken full advantage of by members of a stellar caste. The leading male role, that of "Nobody," a strange and prophetic figure, is played with fine discrimination by Mr. Percy Parsons. The role called for some very fine dramatic work, and it lost none of its qualities in Mr. Parsons' interpretation. One thing especially in his favour is his splendid voice and diction.

In the title role of "Everywoman" Miss Paula Shay scored a triumph. Though her part is by far the largest and called for no small degree of histrionic ability, her interpretation could not have been improved upon. It requires not only artistic but physical fitness to portray the character and the beauty of Miss Shay lent additional charm to the portrayal. She displayed rare dramatic ability and time after time drew rounds of applause for her splendid renditions of some of the most difficult scenes. Her role is one of the biggest and most exacting an actress has ever been called upon to play, lost nothing in her portrayal.

Miss Bertha Donn, as "Youth," displayed marked ability and charm in a difficult part, and Miss Ansula O'Hare, as "Conscience," the handmaiden of "Everywoman," drew a great deal of applause for her beautiful rendition of several songs. She is possessed of a remarkably good voice, as is Mr. T[illegible]d Ahern, in the part of "Passion." Messrs. Frank Kilday, F. J. McCarthy, and G. A. Choate provided the necessary humour to fill out the piece and drew many laughs. In fact, it is hard to single out any of the caste for special mention. Their work throughout was of the highest quality.

"Everywoman" is the kind of a play one would wish to see again, and thee is little doubt that the two remaining performances, this afternoon and evening, will be played before capacity houses.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—Post discharge pay for men of the active militia and of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who have not been overseas is provided for in an order in Council, which has been passed. At present there are between eight and nine thousand men of the active militia on military duty of various kinds in Canada, some of whom were ordered out in August, 1914, and have been kept on duty ever since.

In the past when it has been found unnecessary to retain a detachment on duty it has been the practice to release the men, paying them only up to the date on which they returned home. In view of the good service of these men and the financial losses which some of them have sustained from having to forego their civil occupations, it has now been decided to grant them an allowance of pay on retiring. After one year's continuous service the man will receive fifteen days' pay, two years' service will entitle him to 30 days' pay, while after three years he will receive 45 days' pay.

It has also been decided that members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who are ineligible for the three months' post discharge pay because they have not been overseas, will be allowed to come under the provisions of this order. The order is applicable to all those discharged or relieved from duty on and after August 1st.

CONDEMNS THE NAVY

London Daily Mail Wants to Know Why No Aid Was Given Russia in the Baltic

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Daily Mail condemns what it calls the failure of the British fleet to prevent the German fleet becoming master of the Gulf of Riga, and demands that the Admiralty make an explanation of this humiliating display in the Baltic. After recalling the successes of the British submarines against the Germans in the Baltic in the summer and autumn of 1915, the newspaper says: 'The Germans have accomplished all they were prevented from achieving in 1915, and they have done so without a single blow being struck at them by any arm of the British navy, a navy far stronger than it was two years ago, and recently reinforced by the addition of the American fleet."

SOME TRAINS ARE RUNNING

Argentine Government After Twenty-Four Days Partially Breaks Strike

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Charles P. Stewart.)

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 19.—For the first time in twenty-four days some trains are running in Argentina today, marking the Government's successful step in combatting the general stroke. All these in operation to-day were under strong military guard. Even if the present paralysis of business on account of the strike is ameliorated, leaders predict another similar movement about the first of the year. Presumably the government, having started trains running, will now turn its attention to other industries tied up by the strike.

EMILY BOY WON THE VICTORIA CROSS

Pte. Harry Brown, Canadian Infantry, who was killed as a result of the feat which won him the Victoria Cross, was the son of Mrs. Helen McAuliffe, Emily Township. A step-son of Mrs. McAuliffe, Pte. M. J. McAuliffe, went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and has been in the casualty list four times.

Mrs. McAuliffe's son, Pte. Brown was born in Gananoque, Ont., and enlisted at London, Ontario. The awarding of the Victoria Cross was announced yesterday, the official recital of his brave act being as follows:

"For the most conspicuous bravery courage and devotion to duty. After the capture of a position the enemy massed in force and counter-attacked. The situation being critical, all the wires being cut. It was of the utmost importance to get word back to headquarters. This soldier and one other were given a message, with orders to deliver the same at all costs. The other messenger was killed, and Brown had his arm shattered but he continued through the intense barrage until he arrived close to the support lines, where he found an officer. He was so spent he fell down the dugout steps, but he retained consciousness long enough to hand over the message, saying it was an important message. Then he became unconscious and died in a dressing station a few hours later. His devotion to duty was of the highest possible degree imaginable. The successful delivery of the message undoubtedly saved the loss of the position and for the time prevented many casualties."

THE LETTER CARRIERS ARE INDIGNANT

Government's Answer Taken as Refusal to Appoint Board to Hear Grievances

Alexander McMordie, Dominion secretary of the letter carriers, has received a letter from the Deputy Minister of Labour, which McMordie interprets as a refusal of the Minister of Labour to appoint a Board of Conciliation, under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, to enquire into the grievances of the letter carriers.

During the last session of the Dominion House it was understood by the letter carriers that provision had been made in the supplementary estimates for an increase of $100 a year. This failed to materialize, and so incensed were many of the letter carriers that a strike was threatened. However, finally they were all persuaded to try and find an amicable way out of the difficulty, so they applied to the Minister of Labour for a board under the legislation referred to. The following is the reply to the application of the letter carriers sent by Deputy Minister Acland:

"I beg to acknowledge your letter of the 12th inst. In reply I am to state that the Minister has had the matter in question up with his colleagues and will not lose sight of the same. No conclusive action in the matter, can however, be taken by the Minister of Labour, and the Postmaster-General, as the head of the department concerned, will be the authority best able to advise you of what may be at any time intended."

The letter carriers in Toronto meet to-night and there is no doubt about the "fat being in the fire." What they will do in the matter remains to be seen. There are over 2,800 of them in the Dominion.

J. G. KENT—President of the Toronto Board of Trade, one member of the arbitration board which will investigate matters in dispute between Commissioner Wilson and his street cleaning staff.

Eighty Bags Off One Field

Eighty bags of splendid potatoes is the yield from half an acre of land belonging to Mr. Elmer Long, Verulem. So far that part of the country has not suffered from the black rot, and all the potatoes are in excellent condition. Mr. Long grew his potatoes at a cost of between sixty and seventy cents a bag, which bids fair, if all potatoes are in the same condition, to speedily lower the price asked at present.

BIG HIGH-CLASS PROGRAMME AT THE EMPIRE

Better Pictures Than Ever and More of Them

The Empire Theatre wishes to draw attention to the high class quality of the pictures they are now running under a new contract. While there has always been up-to-date pictures at the Empire, the present programmes include practically nothing but stars.

For instance to-day's and to-morrow's pictures will show Miss Billie Burke, John Drew Bennett and Viola Cain, together with all star casts. Three pictures are being shown, one of them a great baseball story.

that all they need to do is attach their medical history sheets to their claims for exemption, put a cross opposite the claim on the grounds of physical unfitness and any other grounds upon which they feel they have claims, and leave the rest to the postmaster. In due time they will receive their temporary exemption certificate, which will be good until such time as their grade is called out. When their grade is called out, if several months have elapsed, another physical examination will be given them to determine whether they have improved or deteriorated in health, they will also be given an opportunity to appear before a tribunal at a resumed sitting. E. men should do the same, and they will receive a certificate of exemption which puts them back into another class, and which relieves them of all responsibility until that class is called out.

THE WEATHER

The month of October is apparently out to establish a record for rainfall. While September had but a trifle over an inch (1.03) of rain for the whole month, October up to the present has already over four inches to its credit. The rain last night and to-day was particularly heavy, and up to the noon hour had totalled 1.42 inches.—W. P.

Wealth of Allies Estimated at 160 Billions

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.— The war is costing the belligerent nations of the world at the rate of $160,000,000 a day —$6,500,000 an hour—and the United States is paying at least one-quarter of this staggering sum, according to estimates made to-day by the Mechanics and Metals National Bank of New York. The estimated daily cost at the beginning of the war was $50,000,000, and a year ago it was $100,000,000. This country's rate of expenditure is greater than any other nation, Great Britain being second and Germany next.

Cost of Four Years of War.

By next August, according to the bank's figures, the total cost to the world will be $155,000,000,000. Already expenditures have exceeded $100,000,000,000, of which all but a fraction has been translated into permanent national indebtedness. Interest on public debt is now calculated to be more than ten per cent. of the normal income of the German people, as compared with less than one-half of one per cent. in the case of the people of this country.

The developed national wealth of the Allies is placed at $800,000,000,000 by the bank, while that of the Teutonic powers is given as $130,000,000,000.

53,000,000 Men Engaged.

About 53,000,000 men are to-day engaged in the war. To what extent the Entente Allies have gained superiority over Germany is shown by the bank in striking fashion. With no more than 2,000,000 of American manhood enlisted, the total military strength of the Allies is 33,000,000, against a total for Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bugaria and Turkey of 20,000,000. The population of fourteen Entente Allies from which the ranks of the armies may be replenished is altogether 1,300,000,000 against a population of less than 150,000,000 in the Central European nations.

INTERESTING ADDRESSES AT DISTRICT CONVENTION

At the afternoon session of the district convention of the Woman's Mission Society in the George Street Methodist church yesterday, several papers of an exceptional and instructive nature were read, between which solos by Mrs. Renwick, a recitation by Mrs. N. D. Kelly, and a solo by Mrs. McColl were contributed.

Address of Welcome.

An address of welcome was given by Mrs. (Rev.) Thomas, followed the noon hour, during which Rev. Mr. Thomas spoke on Mission Work. Mrs. Thomas' address, given in her peculiarly sympathetic manner, endeared her to the large number of delegates who as yet were unacquainted with her.

Other Addresses.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harvey gave a short talk on "Mission Bands," Mrs. Bookhout on "Study Book Preparation for Mission Meetings," and Mrs. Spier a paper on "Prayer," which for its thought, careful preparation and uplifting ideals, cannot fail to have a long lasting influence.

Mrs. H. D. Robertson.

Mrs. H. D. Robertson, who has returned lately from a seven years' residence in Chen Tu, China, gave a most interesting account of the Chinese. She said that it is very difficult to get in touch with or understand a nation until their customs are thoroughly understood. The Chinese are an imaginative and an artistic race. Their festivls to the casual observer would appear ridiculous, but studied thoroughly, they are of great interest.

Their Customs.

The customs and habits of the Chinese are interesting and decidedly irregular from a western viewpoint. New Year's Day is the greatest event in the year, and celebrated by the Chinese by spending the entire day visiting, and on the street no work is done the entire day. Every shop is closed from New Year's day until such time as the proprietor's wealth will not enable him to keep up a constant flow of fireworks (a necessity to a closed shop) runs out.

Mrs. Robertson closed her address by a brief description of Chen Tu, the wall of which, 100 feet high and wide enough to accommodate four carriages has, since the revolution, been turned into a barracks.

Mrs. Lees.

Mrs. (Rev.) Lee's paper on "Glimpses of the Work in the Northwest," proved satisfactory to those who have long given to Missions and now learned the objective of their donations. Mrs. Lees and that the work of the society is progressing and going forward satisfactorily. 106 auxiliaries have been formed in Manitoba, 53 in Saskatchewan, 39 in Athabaska and 48 in British Columbia. Schools and hospitals have been erected through the medium of these auxiliaries and are doing immeasurable good throughout the west.

Quiet Half Hour.

During the 'Quiet Half Hour' conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas, he gave an interesting address, taking as his text John XV. on 'Fruitfulness,' the secret of which, he said, was fellowship with the Lord.

UNDUE WEIGHT MUST NOT BE GIVEN TO ANY SENTIMENTAL REASONS

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—Army prosecutors who will urge the case of the government before the local exemption tribunals are instructed in a pamphlet issued to-day by Col. R. H. Greer, chief Crown military representative in this district, that undue weight must not be given to sentimental considerations.

"Where exemption is claimed on the ground of exceptional domestic position," the pamphlet states, "enquiry should be made among responsible citizens who know the parties in question, particularly the clergymen or priest of the parish in which the man resides. It must be understood, however, that undue weight must not be given to sentimental considerations, since everyone must expect to make sacrifices in such a time as the present."

"Exemption should be allowed on this ground, therefore, only in cases where a man is the sole support of a widowed mother or has other dependents who would be quite unprovided for if he were called out. It is pointed out that men called up under the Act will receive the same pay, with the option of assigning two thirds thereof, and that grants will be made by the Canadian Patriotic Fund to men who are sent overseas under the Military Service Act, just as in the case of volunteers.

Every certificate of exemption granted on the ground that the applicant is engaged in work of national importance, will be made conditional on the man remaining in that class of employment.

As to Students.

The stand which the military authorities will take in the case of students will be to contest the application for exemption of students, as such. So far as the national interest is concerned the only students whose services can be considered more useful in any capacity other than a combatant one, are medical and to a lesser extent, dental students who are nearing the completion of their course. Veterinary students will also be given special consideration.

As to other students, the instructions state, each case will be considered on its own merits, on the general principle, however, that students, other than medical, dental, and veterinary, will normally be more valuable to the country in a combatant capacity than any other.

Graduates in medicine and in dentistry will be obliged to report also as privates, but will be assigned immediately to duty as medical or dental officers, if placed on active service at all.

This Ground Eliminated Also.

"It is not expected that there will be many men in the first class called out entitled to exemption on the ground of exceptional financial or business obligations," says the official notice. "In cases where this ground is advanced, however, most careful inquiry should be made. Local bank managers would be in a position to give useful information in this connection, and their advice should be sought. It is pointed out that this provision was inserted in the Act for the protection, not so much of the man himself, as of those towards whom he had financial or business obligations. The fact that a man will suffer pecuniarily by being called out for service is by no means sufficient ground for exemption, as the majority of those called up will so suffer, just as the majority of volunteers have done. It is only in cases where a man has such financial or business obligations towards a number of other people as would create considerable confusion were he to leave his business in other hands that he should be allowed exemption."

Provision is also made for the military representative to appeal on behalf of the government from the decision of any tribunal. He must do so according to a prescribed form of procedure and state his reasons for appeal. When this is done his duties in the particular case are ended and the further prosecution is taken up by the district military representative.

The Russian Government To Move To Moscow

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 19.— The Government has definitely determined to move to Moscow in the very near future.

BRING YOUR SMALL BILLS TO THE GLOBE TAILORING CO.

On the principle that "A penny saved is a penny earned," men who have a preference for the dressy, smart blue serge suits have a chance to save a ten dollar bill to-morrow at the Globe Tailoring Co., corner of Brock and George streets. Read their announcement in to-day's Examiner, in which this firm offers to make to measure, blue serge suits from guaranteed 16-ounce indigo blue serge, for twenty dollars. This offer would be simply impossible to-day, at the price this quality of blue serge is selling were it not for the fact that the Globe Tailoring Co. had laid in $1,500 worth of genuine blue serge, bought three years ago, when serges were worth half the price they are to-day.

Another snap for men consists in the Globe Tailoring Co's. offer of a choice number of tailor-made suits and overcoats at $14.00, ordered by men who have been drafted, and who have paid deposits on them, but who will not require them now. Men can put the difference in their pocket—equal to from $6.00 to $10.00.

Absence of Governor-General From Ottawa is Cause

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—The absence of His Excellency the Governor-General, who has been in Halifax, is delaying the issue of the writs of election. He is expected back to-morrow, however, and announcement may be expected immediately after his arrival. The appointment of sub-committees of the Cabinet, which are forecasted in the Premier's manifest, will also bide his return. There is to be one very distinct difference between the Canadian War Cabinet and the British. The Ministers of the British War Cabinet are wtihout other portfolio. The members of the Canadian War Cabinet or sub-committees will hold the heaviest portfolios in the Government.

FIT MEN ONLY GO TO FRONT.

Canadian Soldiers in England are Divided into Fourteen Stages of Physical Condition.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19. — Soldiers in training for active service, or fully trained and held in reserve, are most carefully inspected as to their physical condition. Only men in the category technically known as "A-1" may be withdrawn from the reserves to serve in the trenches in France, however pressing may be the call from the front for reinforcements.

Canadian troops in England are divided into fourteen categories, or stages of physical conditions, as follows: A, five categories; B, three categories; C, three categories; D, two categories, and E one category. Thus, when the call comes for reinforcements at any time, the men in thirteen of the categories are not available. However pressing the call may be, all the men to go forward must be drawn from category "A-1." A-17

Liquor Case Caused Lengthy Argument In Police Court

Man Put on Prohibited List Was Found in Possession of Whiskey at His Home—Chief Thompson Amended Information to Charge of Procuring.

The remanded hearing of a charge against a local man of having liquor in his possession while on the prohibited list developed an involved argument in Police Court this morning. Mr. F. D. Kerr, for the defence, Mr. G. W. Hatton, Magistrate Dumble and Chief Thompson argued all over the Temperance Act until the noon recess.

Under the new Temperance Act the Magistrate or License Inspector may forbid a person, who is addicted to the use of liquor, having it in his possession. At a previous hearing it was argued that no penalty was provided for any disobedience of such an order from either the Magistrate or Inspector.

License Inspector Stewart was the first witness. He had placed the defendant on the prohibited list on May 3rd, 1917, and on October 5th went to his house, accompanied by Chief Thompson and Detective Newhall. He had a search warrant signed by the Chief. They found two bottles of whisky and three empties. The defendant was drunk and abusive.

Mr. Kerr—"When you made the search, did you believe liquor was kept there for sale"

Magistrate Dumble said that under this charge it made no difference what the use of the liquor was.

Mr. Stewart declined to answer the question unless ordered to do so by the Magistrate. He finally replied in the negative.

"I heard he had it in his house in large quantities and carried it away in his pocket."

Mr. Kerr closely questioned the Inspector as to the procedure and grounds upon which the search was made. He read the warrant showing that the search was made on the complaint that liquor was kept at that house for purposes of sale, whereas, Mr. Kerr stated, the Inspector admitted that the search was made for an entirely different reason. This method of action bore the Prussian stamp. It was very important that the rights of the individual should not be invaded except under lawful course.

Detective Newhall.

Detective Newhall said he had accompanied Inspector Stewart and Chief Thompson in the search made on October 5th. In the cellar he found the two full, unopened bottles of "Glen Arthur," rare old Highland whisky; the three empties came out of the refrigerator. The defendant was upstairs, under the influence of the potent, "Glen Arthur."

Chief Thompson testified that, from information he had received, he believed that some men were taking whisky away in bottles from the defendant's house. Also that four suit cases of liquor were received there on the previous day, Oct. 4th. They had been carried in from an automobile that had been driven up the lane at the rear. Chief Thompson added that he had been informed of the arrangements made in a certain yard for the delivery of these four suit cases.

"In his room that night he said he had run me a good chase. I had caught him, and he would tell me whom he got the whisky from when the proper time came, but not that night. I left him, expecting he would come and tell me, but unfortunately he ran across Mr. Kerr."

Mr. Kerr alluded to the fact that the statement was made while the accused was drunk.

"In vino veritas," quoted Magistrate Dumble, remarking that a man usually told the truth when drunk.

Changed the Information.

Chief Thompson then amended the charge, making it read "that the defendant purchased or procured" liquor on October 5th.

Magistrate Dumble then contended that the Chief should prove that liquor was purchased or procured on that day, and not that he simply had it in his possession.

"It might have been innocently there," said Mr. Dumble.

Chief Thompson then enlisted the support of Mr. G. W. Hatton. He said that the City Solicitor would not prosecute in these cases, and as this was a city case, the Crown Attorney could not be called upon. So I have to act as Chief of Police, prosecutor and all the rest.

With the Magistrate's consent, Mr. Hatton took up the argument, but remarked that, in his opinion, the first charge was the stronger.

He argued that the burden of proof rested with the defendant, who had been placed on the prohibited list, and who was found with liquor in his possession. He had it, therefore he must have procured it.

Magistrate Dumble—"Once it is shown that he had liquor in his possession, he must show that he had it lawfully."

Mr. Kerr—"But that is not the charge now."

Mr. Kerr contended that the Act simply forbade a man on the prohibited list to have liquor in his possession. It would be better that the public did not know the draughtsman of the law had not made it stronger.

Chief Thompson—If the Act is wrong, we want to know it.

Mr. Kerr said that the work had been defectively done, and showed incompetent bungling. The draughtsman endeavoured to combine Sections 118 and 120 of the old Liquor License Act, by which a man addicted to liquor was put on the Indian list, and penalties fixed for his intoxication during the prohibited period of one year. In the Temperance Act he used the word "prohibit" where the Magistrate is concerned, and "forbid" where the License Inspector is concerned in the placing of a man on the new prohibited list.

"If there is a difference in meaning what is it? If there is no difference, why are both words used?" Mr. Kerr asked. "The old Act forbade a man to procute liquor for one year, the new Act for ever and ever amen, though he may appeal to a judge within thirty days.

Mr. Dumble—If you look at the Act you would be amazed by the number of amendments. It puts lawmaking in the hands of the Inspector.

Mr. Kerr then asked where the penalty was set forth in the case of a man on the prohibited list disobeying the License Inspector's order.

Magistrate Dumble replied that it was not defined in a broad clause, but indirectly in all cases where no specific penalty was provided.

Mr. Kerr moved that the charge be dismissed on the grounds, first that no statutory enactment constituted an offense as charged in the information; second, that, if there was any offense, there was no proper evidence of having "procured" liquor within the meaning of the statute; and, third, that the finding of the liquor in a private home would displace any presumption regarding unlawfulness.

The argument is continuing this afternoon.

Plaintiff Claims Bailiff Used Automobile While Machine Was Under Seizure

Interesting Case Opened This Morning in the County Court Before His Honour Judge Huycke—Car Was Alleged to Have Been Badly Damaged—Long String of Witnesses.

A bailiff's right to use an automobile while under seizure is one of the outstanding features that cropped up in a case that was heard to-day before His Honour Judge Huycke. The case centres around Roland Laplante, bailiff who, in July last, in company with Howard R. Armstrong, formerly connected with the firm of Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien, and now of Toronto, seized at Sunderland, Ontario, an automobile belonging to John R. Doble, a commercial traveller, residing at 416 London street. The seizure is said to have followed the foreclosing of a chattel mortgage on the car held by the Dominion Register Company of Toronto. The authority for seizure was given by the legal firm of Robertson, Maclennan and Black, of Toronto, acting for the Dominion Register Company and came through the local legal office of Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien. Mr. James J. Maclennan was present this morning in the interests of the Dominion Register Company, while Mr. Guise Bagley appeared for Mr. Doble. Mr. G. N. Gordon and Mr. O'Brien were present in the interests of Laplante, who was referred to as the third party in the case.

Mr. Doble's Evidence.

When the case opened after a delay of twenty minutes, due to the belated arrival of the court stenographer, a large number of witnesses had assembled, including a number of local automobile repair men.

Mr. Doble testified to have purchased the car in 1914. It was a Hupmobile with a distinctive splash force feed oiling system which would not operate successfully unless supplied with a mini... m of one gallon of oil. In July last the plaintiff was in Sunderland on business, when Laplante and Armstrong arrived and undertook to seize the car. Plaintiff asked the bailiff to defer seizure in order to enable him to personally bring the car to Peterborough. Laplante objected, according to the witness, and insisted on removing the car on the day in question despite his inability to drive the car and the bad condition of the roads. Laplante informed the witness that Armstrong would drive the car to Peterborough. Doble refused to be a party to this arrangement and decided to drive the car back to Peterborough in company with the bailiff, and Armstrong. While in Sunderland Armstrong attempted to move the car to the hotel, where he and the bailiff had dinner. This he was unable to do as Mr. Doble had followed his usual practice of shutting off the gas, a point which the bailiff and his companion overlooked. Witness advised them to go and have their dinner and the car would be there when they returned. This they did and eventually returned to Peterborough with plaintiff driving the car. On the way the car skidded on the bad roads near Omemee, but according to the witness no damage resulted.

Car in Use.

Arriving in Peterborough the owner of the car suggested that the bailiff place it in his own garage on London street and he would turn over the key. This Mr. Laplante declined to do and suggested Fontaine's livery stable. Mr. Doble replied that the building was not fire proof and it would not be a very good place to leave the car. It was finally decided to leave the machine in Pulkinghorn's garage on Hunter street. Some days later Mr. Doble went to Toronto to make a settlement with the holders of the chattel mortgage and upon his return was informed that the car was in use and that Roland Laplante had been identified as one of the passengers. Subsequently the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars was paid over to the Toronto firm in settlement of all claims and the car released.

Parts Missing.

Plaintiff claims that when he went to remove the car from the garage he found it in a damaged condition and some of the equipment missing. He reported this to his lawyer and subsequently took charge of the car under protest. Doble claims that he caught Laplante trying to fix one part of the car. The damage alleged included the engine, which, it was stated, had been permitted to operate without sufficient oil. The tire carrier was bent, according to the witness, and the amount paid to E. Freeman for repairs amounted to forty-nine dollars and twenty-five cents. In addition to this the sum of thirteen dollars was paid to the Automobile Supply Company, Toronto, for new parts. The plaintiff also claims the sum of ten dollars a day for six days representing the time the car was out of commission and the expense alleged to have been incurred by the plaintiff in securing other means of transportation.

Dr. J. P. Pulkinghorn, proprietor of the garage in which the car was stored while under seizure, was called. He said that the car was first brought into the garage on Saturday, July 14th. That evening Laplante and Armstrong called and took the car out. Witness could not recall whether it was Monday or Tuesday evening when they returned with the car.

The case is proceeding.

members or candidates of constituencies or presidents of the executives, met in the office of Sir Wilfrid and went into conference at ten o'clock. The proceedings were carried on in camera and the press was excluded. From the viewpoint of discussion the time for holding the conference happens to have been well timed. The members of the deputation and Sir Wilfrid himself had read at their breakfast tables the manifesto of Sir Robert Borden and the Union Government and had had an opportunity to examine the planks of the 1917 platform. Those who were seen this morning were not communicative in their remarks. There were neither signs of disaffection or of enthusiasm. Members appeared to be awaiting the result of the conference before making any remarks. Hon. George P. Graham is a member of the gathering. It is to be rather presumed that the majority of the members and candidates who are present to-day are pretty well pledged to stand by Sir Wilfrid from the very fact of their ebing present to-day. Their presence, it is to be presumed, will prejudice their chances of unionist endorsation. For obvious reasons a statement will likely be forthcoming.

North Monaghan Ratepayers Authorize Council To Levy Two Mills For British Red Cross

North Monaghan responded to the new British Red Cross appeal last night by authorizing its municipal Council to levy a tax of two mills on the 1918 rate, thereby providing more than $1800, and doubling last year's contribution.

There are no signs of war weariness in this proposed self assessment, and no jarring echo of the evasive complaint, "we are always giving to something" that is occasionally offered in these testing times by persons and communities whose giving for war purposes have been neither numerous nor generous. Monaghan is simply prepared to carry on, and, in the crisis, redoubles its offer, that the multiplying demands of the British Red Cross may be materially served by increased assistance from Canada of which this township eagerly accepts its share.

The meeting in May's school house was more largely attended than any of those that have preceded it. On this occasion the number of ratepayers present exceeded the attendance at either of the two annual meetings called to consider the British Red Cross appeal; and, last night, women were as numerous as men, the first time they were represented. It was evident therefore, that the enthusiasm of the people burns more brightly than ever, especially when it is remembered that the weather was altogether discouraging. Rain threatened, the roads and paths were muddy and the night was extremely dark. In spite of these handicaps, Reeve Rye faced what deserved to be called a record attendance when the meeting opened with the singing of the National Anthem. He briefly explained its object and stated that North Monaghan in the past two years had given its support to the British Red Cross. Mr. Rye referred to the presence of the ladies whom, he said, had been most unselfish in their sacrifices of loved ones and of their own means and efforts. He was followed by Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mr. F. D. Kerr, who congratulated North Monaghan on its splendid support to the British Red Cross and to other patriotic funds, and pointed out the necessity for continued aid.

An Alternative.

At the conclusion of the discussion, Mr. Herb Forster moved, seconded by Mr. T. Glover, of Browntown, that the township Council levy two mills on the rate for the contribution to the British Red Cross Society. The resolution was carried unanimously.

Reeve Rye stated that several of the County Councillors had recently discussed a proposal to introduce at the December sessions of the County Council a resolution to make a grant to the British Red Cross from the entire county. Some of the municipalities had yet to make a grant to this patriotics work and the representatives and ratepayers of the other townships felt that all the municipalities should contribute proportionately. This would provide a greater aggregate sum from the county, practically every person would participate and there would be no communities holding aloof. The benefits of the work of the British Red Cross were shared alike by all the people of this Empire, and, reaching out to the individual countries, by all the people of Peterborough.

Mr. Rye was instructed that if this proposal is not endorsed by the County Council, North Monaghan will proceed to levy two mills on next year's taxes for its contribution to the British Red Cross.

TOO MUCH GYMNASTICS KILLS SPIRIT OF PLAY

Wholesome Outdoor Sports Develop Endurance—Better Than Mere Strength.

TRENTON, Oct. 19.—At the annual convention of the South Hastings, Belleville and Trenton Teachers' Institute Mr. P. C. MacLauren, B.A., Principal of Belleville High School, gave an address on "Play and Outdoor Sport." One point he brought out was that too much gymnastics and calisthenics kills the spirit of play. Germany is a country where gymnastics and physical training had been especially developed, and as a result had acquired discipline in its men, while England, a country of wholesome outdoor sports, had developed endurance, a much more vital factor than mere physical strength.

Inspector Clarke explained the new compulsory reading course for teachers, and it was later decided that a library of professional books be placed in the Inspector's office for the use of the teachers.

President A. H. Whiting gave an address on "Canada and the War."

Rev. J. N. Clarry dwelt very strongly on the great need of rural and community leadership at the present time in Canada.

FINED $50.00.

At the opening of the court this afternoon Chief Thompson remarked that there would be no argument at all if the defendant had not been placed on the prohibited list.

Magistrate Dumble said that there was no question but that the defendant was addicted to the use of liquor. He was notified under the statutes, a considerable quantity of liquor was found at his home, and he offered no evidence in his own behalf.

"I have to find him guilty," declared the Magistrate, "of the amended charge of procuring liquor. There has been a great deal of pains to save this man from himself. He defies the law and every influence that is used to aid him."

The Magistrate imposed a fine of $50 and $2.60 to be paid forthwith, or two months in jail. Chief Thompson withdrew a second charge, and a third charge of being intoxicated on October 6 was pressed by Inspector Stewart.

Baker Exempted But Broker Must Serve in U.S. Army

NEW YORK—Ralph Detmar Ward, Vice President of Ward Baking Company, and George Alexander Seligman, a broker, were among the men whose appeals for exemption from military service were decided by the New York City District Board yesterday afternoon. By a vote of 11 to 10 Mr. Ward obtained his discharge from the national army, while Mr. Seligman, who it was shown has a seat on the Stock Exchange and an income of $26,000 a year, was ordered certified for service.

The case of Mr. Ward was the occasion for the most protracted debate which has marked the proceedings of the district board since it began its public sessions nearly two months ago. He was passed as eligible for service by Board 126, in Manhattan. In appealing to the district board Mr. Ward made affidavit that as Superintendent, organizer, and supervisor of the Ward bakeries, he should be exempt on industrial grounds. He pointed out that the baking plan with which he is connected bakes more than 300,000,000 loaves of bread annually, employs thousands of people, and has an annual pay roll of $3,500,000.

Lewis L. Delafield, chairman of the sub-committee which investigated the case, recommended exemption on the ground that the industry was one of vital necessity to the nation. Ex-Chief Justice Edgar M. Cullen of the Court of Appeals opposed granting of the claim on the ground that baking is a common occupation and that in his opinion it would be unwise to draw a distinction between the large concern and the small one.

"I think," said James Byrne, another member of the board, "that the national interest requires that we send into the army men of every class the same as they do in France, England, and in Germany. If we exempt this man we will be entering on a course where we may be called upon to exempt all men of large interests. In all my experience I have not known of a bakery where the departure of a Vice President or even a President has ruined the business. In some cases I have known them to get along better. I shall oppose granting the claim.

The vote was a tie, and Charles E. Hughes, as Chairman of the board, cast the deciding vote. This was the first tie vote since the board was organized.

"I regret to be called upon to decide in a case where such interest has been shown and the members have so stoutly maintained their convictions," he said, "but I agree with the opinion of the committee and cast my vote in favor of exemption. The Selective Service act provides for industrial exemption on the ground of being necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment of the effective operation of the military forces or the maintenance of the national interest during the emergency. It is on the latter ground that I vote as I do."

Mr. Seligman, who was passed by Board 125, appealed from the decision of the local board, claiming exemption on the ground that he had a wife and two children partially dependent on him, and also because he had "keratitis of the eyes."

The local board had examined him and found him physically fit. The committee of which Magistrate Charles E. Simms is Chairman reported against exemption. It was shown that Mr. Seligman had a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, and an income of $26,000 a year. His wife, whom he married on Jan. 19, 1910 had a separate income of $7,500 a year. In his claim for exemption the applicant wrote: "That, in view of my income and my social standing, it is essential that my wife and children be allowed to continue on my dependency in the manner in which they have been brought up since the time of my marriage."

The decision of the local board was affirmed and the exemption denied.

Dairymen Against Oleo At Milk Investigation

Great Difference in Cost of Production Shown in Various Provinces—May Make Ottawa System Ideal For Others

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—At this mornings' session of the Milk Investigation Committee, it was decided before proceeding very much further with the inquiry to wire distributors and producers in the various cities throughout Canada, requesting that they appear before the committee Wednesday or Thursday next prepared to state all the facts and to give information regarding their side of the question. The wires will be sent out immediately from the Food Controller's Office and will state that each representative should appear and give definite information regarding the cost of producing milk.

The following figures were given showing the cost of producing a quart of milk. Nova Scotia, 6.9 cents; New Brunswick, 7.5; Quebec, Montreal District, 5.8; Ontario, Toronto District, 6.2; Ontario, Hamilton District, 6.4; Ontario, London District, 6.1; Ontario, Ottawa District, 6.7; Manitoba, 5.7; Saskatchewan, no figures ready yet; Alberta, 8.1; British Columbia, 7.0.

Chesman Tudin spoke of the extravagance of delivery noticeable in some cases and said that as Ottawa had the cheapest milk all round, would it not be possible to place all other cities on the same basis, with the same methods?

After some discussion on the question of price of milk it was decided that the committee should take the cost of production as it stands and fix prices for the various districts. As cost of production advanced or decreased the price of milk could be fixed on a sliding scale.

W. A. Wilson, Dairy Commissioner for the Province of Saskatchewan, who only reached the convention this morning, opposed the resolution passed yesterday favouring the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine.

He said that farmers were asked by the Food Controller to increase production and then the latter introduced an artificial substitute for the real product of the farm. He stated that the value of the margarine as a food was very questionable.

Mr. MacRobertson, butter manufacturer of Belleville, said that a flood of petitions had been received from the most influential and largest producers and distributors in the country asking that the ban on margarine be not removed. Butter, he stated, had to be used in the manufacture of good margarine, and with the aid of a little colouring and an attractive package.

The Simple Truth About Corns

It can be ended almost as easily, as simply and completely as a spot of dirt.

The way is scientific. It was invented by a famous chemist. It is prepared by makers of surgical dressings, whom physicians respect.

It is called Blue-jay.

You apply it in a jiffy, and usually but once. There is no muss. The pain stops instantly and forever.

The action is gentle. It affects the corn alone. The corn is wrapped and protected, so you forget it. In two days, usually, the corn is gone.

The results are sure. The method is gentle, but no corn can resist it. Millions of corns are ended every month in this way. Don't use harsh methods — relics of the old days. See what Blue-jay does.

Prove it on one corn tonight.

B&B Blue-jay Corn Plasters

Stop Pain Instantly
End Corns Completely
25c Packages at Druggists

BAUER & BLACK, Limited, Makers of Surgical Dressings, etc. Toronto, Canada

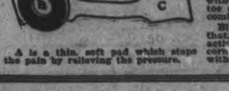
How Blue-jay Acts



B is the B&B wax which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

"He" Forgets To Write, So "She" Drinks Acid

Girl Visiting St. Louis Becomes Despondent When Letter Fails.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Sallie Darr, a winsome country miss, 18 years old, came to St. Louis from Ellington, Mo., two weeks ago to visit an aunt, Mrs. Nora Brown, 3737A South Jefferson avenue. She had planned to stay three weeks.

Her sweetheart lives near Ellington.

"Don't forget to write to me often while I am in St. Louis," Miss Darr told him when she last saw him.

He promised he would not forget.

But during Miss Dar's two weeks in St. Louis she hasn't received a letter from her sweetheart. She has written to him several times—letters, long letters, and ardent ones—and post cards. There have been replies to none of them.

Watched for Postman.

When she would see the letter carrier in the block where the Browns live, Miss Darr would rush excitedly to the front door. She would watch him as he went from house to house, and when he would pass the Brown home—without stopping—she would turn dejectedly from the door and go to her room and cry it out all by herself.

Day by day Miss Darr had grown more despondent. Her aunt and uncle noticed this and tried to cheer her. Miss Darr wouldn't be cheered.

Condition Is Serious.

The other day Mr. and Mrs. Brown took Miss Darr to Forest Park for the afternoon. She seemed brighter, and actually laughed, appeared to be enjoying herself out there under the trees. It was the first time in more than a week that she had seemed in normal spirits.

Feigning fatigue when she returned home, Miss Darr went to her room. She took the last letter she had received from him—it was written in Rubel and sent to Miss Darr at Ellington before she came to St. Louis—and read it over. Then she crushed it inside her waist, next to her heart—and drank acid.

At dinner time Mrs. Brown went to her niece's room and spoke to her. She advised her to go to bed. There was no response. Mr. Brown discovered the empty bottle which had contained poison. Miss Darr was sent to the city hospital. Her condition is serious.

The most fateful years in a woman's life are those between forty-five and fifty. Many of the sex enter this period under depressing conditions through over work or worry about the home, or through a condition in which the blood is weak or watery and so they suffer heavily. Among the commonest symptoms are headaches, feverish flushes, palpitation of the heart, dizziness, backache, depression and other well recognized disturbances of the health which signalizes that the blood requires attention. Women urgently need rich, red blood all their lives, but never more so than in middle-life, when the nerves are also weak and overwrought.

Now every woman can prove the prompt help afforded to her health by renewing and building up the blood. It is a test that any ailing woman can make by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for these pills make rich, red blood, which in turn stimulates the appetite, strengthens the nerves and restores full robust health. Thousands of women have found in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills new health and strength and with these a new happiness and interest in life.

So if you suffer, avail yourself at once of the splendid home treatment which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills so easily afford, and you will be among those who rejoice in regained health. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRAIN SITUATION CAUSES CONCERN

Canadian Press Despatch:

ROME, Oct. 20.— Grain situation here is causing much concern.

To Stop a Persistent, Hacking Cough

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's no needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CATTLE TRADE SLOW PRICES BARELY STEADY

Tendency to Lower Levels—Heavy Receipts of Common Quality

There has been a tendency towards congestion in the supplies of cattle on the markets this week. A lot of rough stuff has been cleared off the farms prior to the setting in of the winter. The first delivery for the week comprised a run of over 6,000 head of cattle in Monday's market. Of these by far the larger bulk was of common and rough quality. While there was a good demand for the cheaper medium grades the market was a little over supplied, and the result was a general weakening in the tone of the market, and trade was inclined to drag. This condition prevailed for the rest of the week. The demand was at no time keen for the top-priced, heavy, fat butcher steers, and there was always plenty of the medium and lower-priced grades to satisfy all requirements. The demand for choice fat butcher cows continues good and, though prices eased a little early in the week owing to the heavy run, the tone stiffened again later and demand appeared to be ahead of the supply. There was a good demand for canners and cutters throughout the week.

The stocker and feeder trade was, on the whole, a little quiter than in the previous week, but there was little change in prices, the market holding fairly steady for good breedy stockers and heavy feeders. Several loads of choice short-keep steers sold at good firm prices around $10 to $10.50. Good yearling calves were steady from $8 to $8.50.

Sheep and lambs on the whole held steady at about 50c. lower than the previous week.

Hogs were firm for the early part of the week, but came down about 50c. on the closing quotations. Packers are looking for heavier receipts in the next few weeks, and consequently lower prices.

Editor Daily Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Psalm 19th, says, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork. In the American magazine, John Brashear says: "If you could ride from the earth to Alpha Centauri, the nearest fixed star, on a train going at the rate of a mile a minute, you would reach your destination in forty-eight million years. At the rate sound travels, if a song were to be sung on Alpha Centauri, it would be three million eight hundred thousand years before we could hear it. This neighbour of ours is thirty-five trillion miles away. A spider's thread from a cocoon reaching to it would weigh five hundred tons. Our earth in its revolutions on its own axis and its trip around the sun, and outward into space, makes a journey of nine hundred and eighty-four million miles a year, but the old clock never varies. There is never a jar or tremour, and we are back again on the hundredth of a second. Do you know it would have cost me one billion, five hundred million dollars if I had to pay my way so far at the rate of two cents a mile during my journey of seventy-five years. To ride from the earth to Alpha Centauri would cost seven hundred billion dollars.

When I was a boy, about sixty years ago, a most wonderful comet appeared in the heavens, nearly straight west, travelling apparently a little south of straight west, apparently travelling at an enormous speed and showing a most wonderful tail. I have never seen anything near as grand in all those years since. As I remember, it was said this comet was to return in about seventy-five years.

Yes, man has succeeded in erecting the Quebec bridge in the third attempt, with spending an immense amount of money and the loss of many lives. Yes, man can even fly in the air and even live under water and destroy life and property at an alarming rate, but still he has failed to create. It is written in the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth, Psalm 14th. The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God. Surely only he be still and know that I am God is fitting for us. Stupendous power whose high abode becomes the grandeur of a God, infinite lengths beyond the bounds, where stars revolve their little round. Lord what shall earth and ashes do. We would adore ouf maker, too, from sin and dust to thee. We cry, the great, the holy and the high.

The words, the way in which they were spoken, the simple trustfulness of the man, affected Ramona profoundly. In some way it seemed to her that she had done him a great injury, yet she knew that the decision had been made, the die cast. It was too late to turn back now. She left him, and going toward the table, busied herself hand softly in one of his.
employment served to take her mind from the weightier matters that oppressed her.

Barton still stood by the window, his gaze following the long, unbroken line of the horizon. Something in the tenseness of his attitude attracted Ramona's attention. There was an eager light in his face, a suggestion of repressed excitement. A great fear began to gather in the girl's heart.

"What is it, John?" she asked quickly.

He did not at once reply, and she came up behind him and put her hand softly in one of his.

"What is it?" The note of anxiety in her voice caused him to turn to her. A new expression lit up his face.

"A ship is coming toward the harbour," he said. "A brig, as nearly as I can make out, although she is too far away, as yet, to tell with certainty. Would it not be fine, if it should prove to be The Thanksgiving?"

Ramona nodded. She could do no more. The words that rushed to her lips choked her. The Thanksgiving! What that would mean to her he could not know, but she realized with a sinking heart that it meant destruction to all her hopes. She remembered vividly the anathemas that Barton's companions had hurled at her. "Daughter of evil," the old man had said. That they well understood the position she occupied toward Ormiston, she very well knew. She had lied to them, denying all knowledge of Barton's whereabouts. She had more than lied to him. Was the pitiful little tragedy so soon to come to an end?

"Later on," she heard Barton saying, "I will go to the town and find out."

At least she could prevent him from doing that.

"How long do you think it will be?" she asked, "before they reach the harbour?" She marveled that he did not observe the dull terror in her voice.

He glanced once more through the window.

"With the wind as it is," he said, "she can scarcely drop anchor before noon. See — 'tis little mare than a breath—she barely has steerage way."

This was something to be thankful for, little as it was, although what use to make of the delay she hardly yet knew. On one point she was determined; Barton must be prevented at all costs from going to the town alone. His disappearance was doubtless known to every one—the search made by his comrades would insure that—he would be questioned, and in his innocence would explain. Ramona de Lara had cared for him—"The Firebrand's woman," they called her, nor thought any the less of her for that. Mere absence of a marriage ceremony was of small importance, in that hotbed of iniquity. But what Barton would think was another matter.

As for the ultimate outcome of the situation as it now unfolded itself to her, she was confused, uncertain, fighting desperately with no plan, and little hope. She had thought, once they were married, to induce Barton to take passage by coasting vessel or fishing smack to one of the other islands, or even to England itself. Her jewels would serve as payment for a thousand passages. The plan had seemed feasible enough, always provided neither Barton's companions, nor the buccaneers themselves, returned before it could be put into execution. She had small fear of the latter contingency—Ormiston and his fellows had been too eager to be at sea again, to return in a hurry. But the advent of the ship Barton had pointed out to her put a new face upon matters. Should it prove to be the New England trader, she saw no way by which the impending catastrophe could be avoided. There was a chance that it was not—he himself felt no certainty of it. At least she could take that chance, and avoid untoward results by preventing him from going alone to the town. Either she must go with him, or send Pedro, to inquire as to the incoming vessel. The latter, she decided, was by far the safer course. The boy had been to Port Royal daily, of late, to procure supplies, and keep her informed of the shipping. Only the day before he had announced the arrival of an English barque, and two smaller vessels from New Amsterdam. If they could escape on one of these, all might yet be well.

"John," she said, with an assumption of gayety, "you had best go now and lie down. I will send Pedro to the town, and he will find out whether the vessel is the one you seek. There is no hurry—you tell me yourself that it will be many hours before she reaches port. You have been about too long as it is. Remember, it is the very first time. Go now, back to your bed, and while you are sleeping, I will make myself ready to set out with you. Oh—I shall have much to do, and many pretty things to take with me. Just wait until you see me in my yellow satin."

"It's you I care about, child, not your trappings," he laughed, drawing her to him. "Indeed, but I do love you." The kisses he gave her now left small room for doubt.

For the moment she forgot her fears. God had after all been very good to her.

"If you could but know what this means to me," she whispered happily.

"I have been so lonely—so very lonely, all these years. You can never understand. Ever since I was a child, I have wondered in what manner love would come to me. Sometimes I would dream of a wonderful fairy prince, who would ride up in shining armour, and claim me for his bride. Oh—I fear it was a silly, silly dream. And then, when my father would have had me marry a rich old man from Salamanca, I laughed at him, and said he was too fat, and sent him about his business. It seems so long ago." The present returned to her with a rush, but Barton's laughter dissipated her fears. At least he loved her; she had known love, even though it might only have brushed her with its wings.

"After that," she went on, a note of sadness creeping into her voice in spite of all her efforts, "we came to the Indies, and—and my father was killed, and I—I thought no more of love, for a time. And then you came, and I—oh, John, dear John, you have made me so happy—so very happy. Quick now—go to your bed and rest. I shall not send Pedro until I know that you are asleep. Then I shall make ready for our journey." She urged him playfully toward the door. "See, how weak you are—trembling—Dios—I am a wicked woman, not to have sent you away before."

Barton in truth was beginning to find that his strength was by no means as great as he had thought. He allowed Ramona to lead him to the bedroom door.

"Already you would rule me, it seems," he laughed. "Well, I am content. This day I can remember only that we love each other."

"Only that we love each other," she sighed.

"Could any one ask more?"

"Yes. One thing—that you will love me always—always—whatever happens. Will you do that, John?" She was thinking of the supreme test now. Something told her that some day it must come.

"How could I do otherwise, when I see the sweetness, the goodness of you? God grant that I may not prove unworthy."

It terrified her to hear him say this. If there existed any unworthiness, she well knew it did not lie on his side.

"Ah—not you—not you," she whispered, then drew aside the curtain of the door. "Rest well, my beloved, until I come to you again." He went in, and she let the curtain fall. For a moment she gazed at it, her heart within the room beyond. Then she went to the outer door.

"Lucia!" she cried. "Lucia! Come quickly."

A Skirt Hanger.

A good improvised skirt hanger is a strong hatpin. Fold the skirt twice at the band, stick the hatpin through the back in two places, leaving enough of the pin exposed to hang over a nail or hook. The skirt will never be pulled out of shape.

"I know more about that woman than she knows about herself."

"How can that be possible?"

"Easily. I know she isn't pretty, but she doesn't."

Evolution of the Carrot.

Even the most sophisticated professional tiller of the soil must be surprised that the once despised carrot, used principally as food for stock, is now among the vegetables recommended by government and other experts as an important human food product. Under the modern practice of food analysis for the purpose of determining energy values it is found that this humble bird of field and garden ranks high. Dieticians have also discovered that, when properly cooked, it is not only valuable as a food adjunct, but is of extremely delicate flavor.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Few wearers of bracelets know that they were once used to distinguish the insane. Before lunatics were confined to asylums they wore an armlet for distinction. Bracelets for the arms and anklets for the legs—so frequently mentioned as ornaments in the Bible—are still commonly worn by eastern married women of all ranks. They were looked upon as a capital means of investing money, as they could not be taken for debts of the husband.

Alpha and Omega.

In three places, in the book of Revelation, Alpha, the first letter of the Greek alphabet, and Omega, the last, are referred to in the phrase, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end." Both Greeks and Hebrews employed the letters of the alphabet as numerals.

Money and Happiness.

A contribution in the American Magazine says:

"The amount of money one needs to be happy is enough to maintain an established environment.

"It differs vastly, and, with men progressing, it changes constantly. It is folly to set some particular amount, like a $5,000 income. That infers that all men who earn less—perhaps 95 per cent of all families are necessarily unhappy.

"Most successful men find happiness all the way up. I remember when $50 a month seemed a fortune to me. I distinctly remember that a roommate receiving $800 yearly seemed a plutocrat.

"I believe that I could have remained happy on today's equivalent for that $50 monthly. I saved money then, as always, and I started to build a home.

"I have been happy financially at every step since. I remember when I first afforded a thirty-five dollar flat. It seemed a mansion to me. When I later afforded a $100 flat I remarked, 'This is as fine a home as any man could ever want.' And I meant it."

Famous Statue of Liberty.

The statue of Liberty Enlightening the World, which stands in New York harbor, was a gift from France to the United States. Shortly after the establishment of a republic in France, in 1870, a movement was started there in favor of erecting some kind of permanent memorial of the fraternal feeling between France and the United States. In 1874 an organization was formed there called the French-American union, and a popular subscription was begun, which realized a very large sum, many prominent Frenchmen contributing. The statue was done by Frederic Bartholdi. The United States government set apart an island for its location, and Americans contributed money to build its pedestal, thus making it a distinctly international affair. It is of bronze, 111 feet in height, weighs 200,000 pounds and was unveiled Oct. 28, 1886.

Animals In Fire.

Most animals are afraid of fire and will flee from it in terror. To others there is a fascination about a flame, and they will walk into it even though tortured by the heat.

A horse in a burning stable goes mad with fear, but a dog is as cool in a fire as at any time. He keeps his nose down to the floor, where the air is purest, and sets himself calmly to finding his way out. Cats in fire cry piteously. They hide their faces from the light and crouch in corners. When their rescuer lifts them they are, as a rule, quite docile and subdued, never biting or scratching.

Birds seem to be hypnotized by fire and keep perfectly still. Even the loquacious parrot in a fire has nothing to say. Cows, like dogs, do not show alarm. They are easy to lead forth and often find their way out themselves.—London Answers.

Fighting In the Air.

"Before an aviator is prepared to engage another flyer in battle he should know how to loop the loop, do a nose or vertical dive, execute a tail spin, a tail slide or any other of the so called stunts," said Miss Ruth Law.

"Fighting in the air is fighting for position. Consequently it is largely a business of dodging. The man who is the better dodger, who has the most tricks up his sleeve, is the man who is going to win. I have seen men stop controlling their machines altogether and simply fall through space for several thousand feet.

"The point of this, of course, is to give the opposing flier the idea that the plane has been struck. The opposing aviator, thinking he has put his enemy out of commission, will start away. Then the plunging air man will switch on his power, regain control of his machine and overtake his enemy without the latter knowing he is approaching. Such tactics naturally are used at great altitudes."

Haydn's Ox Minuet.

Hadyn one day received a visit from a butcher who said that himself and his daughters were admirers of Haydn's music, and as the young woman was soon to be married he made bold to ask that the composer write a minuet for her wedding. Kind "Papa Haydn" consented, and in a few days the man of meat obtained his music. Not long afterward Haydn was surprised to hear this same minuet played under his window. On looking out he saw a band of musicians forming a ring around a large ox tastefully decorated with flowers. Soon the butcher came up and presented the ox to Haydn, saying that for such excellent music he thought he ought to make the composer a present of the best ox in his possession. Ever after this little composition was called the "Ox" minuet.—W. Francis Gates in "Anecdotes of Great Musicians."

For Chess Players.

The Swedish monarch, Charles XII., found himself besieged by the Turks and virtually a prisoner. To while away the tedium of his captivity he would indulge in an occasional game at chess—even when Turkish bullets were flying around—with his friend Grothusen. The position beneath had been reached when Charles exclaimed, "I have a pretty mate in three"—

White—K on K B 5, R on K Kt 7, Kt on K sq, pawns K Kt 2, K R 2.
Black—K on K R 4, B on K B 7, pawns K R 3, K Kt 6.

But even as he spoke a flying bullet sent the knight to smithereens. The king, undismayed, merely remarked, "Now I mate in four." Before Grothusen had solved the position another bullet sent White's rook's pawn spinning off the board. Charles' only comment was, "I can now give mate in five!"

Strangled the Tree.

A Victoria clergyman had an orange and a pine tree in his garden. One spring it was noticed that the orange tree was drooping, and on digging down he found that the roots of the pine, which stood at some distance, had twisted around the taproot of the orange tree and were strangling it to death. The offending roots were untwisted and cut away, and the drooping plant revived. The tree eventually died. Then on digging down at a greater depth the clergyman found the pine had attacked the orange root lower down and accomplished its murderous end.

Pleasures of Irritability.

Learn how to be irritable. When any one says anything to you always imagine he is trying to insult you. Few appreciate the innocent enjoyment to be had in snapping and snarling at those we meet through the day. Have things get on your nerves. If things get on your nerves you will find it an easy matter to be sour and surly. After awhile you will find that most anything gets on your nerves, especially people who are happy and cheerful. The idiots! Some people are born irritable, others acquire it, and they all should have curses cussed upon them.

Painting a Battleship.

One hundred tons of paint, costing approximately $25,000, represents the initial color requirements for a new battleship. The annual upkeep cost may exceed this sum, since it is the custom to repaint the different parts of a modern war vessel every three to six months. This would indicate an annual paint protection outlay of nearly $1,000,000 for the navy. If to this sum is added the cost of painting the thousands of lake boats, freighters, river steamers and pleasure craft some conception may be had of the importance of marine painting.

Among the most important naval paints are those which are applied to protect the submerged parts of the hulls from corrosion or fouling by barnacles. The word barnacle is the popular name for that form of marine crustacea which consists of a clam-like body lodged in a shell that is often formed in a series of rings or plates. They adhere with great tenacity. Without anti-fouling paints the speed of vessels would be greatly retarded by the piling up of a thick incrustation of barnacles and attached sea grass.

Vegetable Soups or Purees.

Soup is not necessarily made from meat stock. Vegetable soups or purees are made by boiling potatoes, beans, peas or other vegetables until soft, mashing through a sieve and then heating with a little liquid (water, milk, soup stock or whatever seems desirable) and flavoring. Using leftover vegetables for such purees is an economical practice. Milk soups, which are really milk thickened and flavored with some vegetable, fish or other food, to give flavor and perhaps thickened still more with a little flour or stale breadcrumbs, are both nutritious and appetizing. They furnish also an excellent means of using up skimmilk. Those who wish to bring down the cost of food should remember that skimmilk, a cup of which contains as much protein as a cup of whole milk, is far too valuable a food to be overlooked.

Bells Not In Favor.

Greek monks are called to prayer in a fashion of their own. Bells are not regarded with too much favor in the Levant. The fact that they are an innovation borrowed, albeit in the tenth century, from schismatic Venice makes the orthodox doubt their appeal, while the Turks object to them even more strongly lest they disturb wandering spirits, says the National Geographic Magazine. For all ordinary purposes the monks use in their stead a hanging wooden plank or sometimes a smaller metal bar of which the necessary concomitant is a stout mallet.

Artesian Wells.

For over 1,000 years the Chinese have obtained water through means of artesian wells. One of the most famous wells in existence is that at Grenelle, on the outskirts of Paris, where the water is brought from a depth of 1,798 feet. A well in Pesth was sunk to the depth of 3,100 feet in the seventies.

Goliath.

Goliath, the giant of Gath, who "morning and evening for forty days" defied the armies of Israel (I Samuel xvii) and was slain by David, was "six cubits and a span" in height. Taking the cubit at twenty-one inches would make him ten and one-half feet high.

Charles M. Schwab, in a Loretta address, decried meanness.

"Meanness has ruined more businesses than open-handedness will ever do," he said. "Meanness spoils everything. Whenever I am tempted to be mean, I think of the old man who stopped smoking.

"Why did you give up your pipe?" his pastor asked him. "It was your one comfort, apparently."

"The old man sighed and answered:

"'No, it wasn't such a comfort after all. You see, if you smoke your own tobacco, it costs like the very old Harry, and if you smoke your friends' you have to ram it down so darn tight that your pipe won't draw."—Baltimore American.

Oct. 21 to Oct. 27

ALL OVER this continent the many marvelous achievements of the world's greatest inventor, Thomas A. Edison, will be honored next week.

The man who gave us electric light, moving pictures, the storage battery, and the phonograph, who made the telephone and the telegraph perfect, who is now working night and day for the Allies, to solve the submarine peril, has asked that some day next week you take time to hear his latest and favorite invention.

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul."

Edison takes more pride and pleasure from his perfection of the re-creation of music than from any of his other achievements. He has sent thirty artists touring the land, giving "re-creation concerts"—singing in direct comparison with their own voices on the New Edison—to prove that you cannot tell the real voice from his re-creation. 1,000,000 people and 500 music critics have been convinced. You will, too, when you hear it, and we urge that you honor Mr. Edison by hearing his favorite invention in our store next week. Ask about the $2,000 Prize Contest.

Throwing Heat Overboard.

On all seagoing steamers the steam is condensed by sea water pumped through the surface condensers. This circulating water is then discharged overboard. In the process of condensation the cooling water taken in at temperatures varying from 32 degrees to 88 degrees F., according to climatic and other conditions, is raised to temperatures varying from 80 to 120 degrees and then discharged. This great loss of heat is practically unavoidable, says the Popular Science Monthly. Even on comparatively small steamers hundreds of tons of heated water are pumped overboard daily. This constitutes one of the greatest heat losses in the operation of steam machinery, although sometimes a portion of the warm water is used for scrubbing decks and for bath water on passenger ships.

What a Melon Did.

The notoriously corrupt Russian minister of justice, Tschegiovidoff, had a great and well known passion for melons. A story was told in the duma how he was once traveling through Russia on a tour of inspection and on reaching a remote outpost was met at the station by the usual high court officials.

His visit to the place had been long advertised, so that one little man, a very obscure person even in the official world of the district, had had time to grow an immense melon. When the minister of justice had concluded his reception at the railway station the small man came forward and dutifully presented Tschegiovidoff with the melon, upon which he had for months lavished the utmost care.

The minister was so delighted that he thereupon made the man a judge!

Gold Leaf.

There appears to be some mystery about the origin of gold leaf. It is found, for example, in connection with the most ancient known mummies, having been used for covering teeth, tongue, skin, etc. Sometimes it is also found on the coffins. Gold leaf was also used on the tombs and monuments of ancient Egypt. The process of making gold leaf has thus been known since the eighth century B. C. In the eleventh century it seems to have attained as high a degree of perfection as today. The gold leaf on some ancient Grecian pottery, indeed, is as thin as that now used.

John Bunyan's Indictment.

The bill of indictment preferred against John Bunyan ran thus: "John Bunyan hath devilishly and perniciously abstained from coming to church to hear divine service and is a common upholder of several unlawful meetings and conventicles, to the disturbance and distraction of the good subjects of this kingdom, contrary to the laws of our sovereign lord the king." He was convicted and imprisoned twelve years and six months.

A VARNISH PUZZLE

The Lost Secret of the Old Time Makers of Violins.

IT MAY NEVER BE DISCLOSED.

This Amazing Mystery, That Defies the Modern Experts, Is the One Thing That Keeps Them From Surpassing the Work of the Ancient Masters.

There must be thousands who wonder why modern manufacturers cannot reproduce the valuable old violins we read so much about, says the Musical Courier. When Ysaye recently inspected the wonderful collection of violins owned by Rudolph Wurlitzer and played on a Ruggiero, a Stradivarius, a Guarnerius, an Amati, and so on, some of our readers may have asked why American makers do not copy those old masters. We reply that every detail of the great Italian makers has been studied for more than 100 years.

We have discovered every secret of the old masters except the recipe for their varnish. That is the mystery. "Surely," claim some of our readers, "this is a secondary consideration. If you have good wood well put together you must have a good violin, no matter what the varnish is!" We shall see. Hills of London, the well known violin experts and makers, in the book "Antonio Stradivari—His Life and Works," say:

"Though the wood and also construction and dimensions be perfect, the result will be astonishingly bad if the instrument be badly varnished. Hence we are disposed to classify the relative importance of material, dimensions and constructions and varnish as follows: First, varnish; second, construction and dimensions; third, material."

So here we have an acknowledged authority stating that the most important factor in the tone of a good violin is the varnish. And does the quality of the lost varnish mean that the old makers were men of genius? Not a bit of it. Apparently they were just good workmen whose product could be equaled today in any civilized country if the varnish could be discovered.

That this secret should be lost is one of the amazing facts of history. It is inconceivable to us that 200 years hence no one will be able to supply the shellac varnish that can be found in any painters' supply shop today. And yet this is what has happened to the varnish used by the Cremona makers. It has simply been forgotten; that is all. It was no secret a few hundred years ago. We find chairs, tables, cabinets and bedsteads of the period covered with the golden, lustrous varnish of Amati and Stradivari.

The old violin makers used it because it was cheap and easy to procure. It began to go out of general use in the sixteenth century because it was found to be too soft for the wear and tear of furniture. It was still used by the violin makers, however, none of whom seems to have left the recipe. Perhaps they did not know it. The average cabinetmaker today need not know how to make the varnish he buys by the gallon. Thus the varnish which was used by the whole Italian nation for two centuries is now an unknown mixture of mysteries.

Whence came the gums and oils of the old Italian varnish? We have reason for believing that they were not indigeneous to the Italian soil. We know that much of the maple used by the violin makers of the day came from Turkey. Stradavari often used the straight grained maple of the Italian Alps for his cheaper instruments. For his wealthy patrons he used a beautiful curly maple that came from Turkey. Why from Turkey? The reason is obvious. Venice and Genoa held command of the eastern trade of Italy. It was cheaper to import maple to Venice by sea than to carry it overland from northern Italy. But when the Venetian oar makers came across a piece of maple too curly to be strong enough they sold it to the violin makers. The beautiful backs of the best Stradivarius violins, therefore, are made from wood that the oar makers rejected.

Now, if the gums and oils of the old varnish came from the orient it would become more and more difficult to procure them in proportion as the Venetian trade diminished. History confirms this theory. The Turks waged a war against the opulent and powerful republic of Venice from 1645 to 1669. For the first thirteen years of the eighteenth century Venice had a certain amount of peace. But in 1718 Venice, by the peace of Passarowitz, abdicated her rank in Europe, became a nonentity in politics and saw her trade begin to dwindle. Venice, the former mighty queen of the Adriatic, lost her great oriental trade.

Is it any wonder that the oriental gums should disappear from her imports when the cabinetmakers no longer used them? The little that the violin makers needed was too small to keep the trade alive. Then in 1750 a patent was given by the king of France to Simon Martin for a period of twenty-five years for the newly discovered process of making the much more durable and glossy copal varnish. That was the finish of the old Italian varnish, wrongly called "Cremona" varnish.

If the secret or lost process of the old varnish makers could be discovered we believe that Guarnerius and Stradivarius and all the rest of them would lose the title of geniuses they have so long enjoyed and be considered merely good workmen. It is as difficult today to make a chair and cover it with the mysterious varnish as it is to reproduce the famous old violins.

Stick insects, which are so called because of their resemblance to dry sticks, have two forelegs, which they fold over their eyes when disturbed and evidently think that in so doing they are lost to view.

The eggs of these insects take over six months to hatch. They are only one-tenth of an inch in their widest part, yet an insect which at hatching is three-quarters of an inch in length is packed into them.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

British Tars Still Peerless

So earnestly are our eyes, our hearts, fixed on the Western front that we have little thought for the wonderful deeds that have been accomplished by British and Allied troops in other theatres of war. For instance, we hear little and then only at long intervals of what has been done and what is doing in Africa, where at one time there were probably half a dozen fronts, and half a dozen little wars raging simultaneously. To-day there is only one African front, only one German army at large, and this is now being attacked. That there is only one African battlefield to-day is due to the splendid heroism of British, Belgian, and Afrikander expeditions that gradually rounded up and destroyed the various enemy bodies that were operating in different and widely-separated parts of the great continent. Some incidents that occurred in one of these little British expeditions are reported in the form of a diary by Commander G. Spicer Simson, of the British Naval Reserve, who headed the Tanganyika expedition in the fall and winter of 1915-1916.

His original task was to take two small British gunboats and their crews a distance of some 10,000 miles, place them on Lake Tanganyika and there assist the Belgians in wiping out the enemy, the Belgians apparently not having big enough boats for the job. He mentions that the small size of the British boats excited the derision of the Belgians when they first arrived, for it was not believed that they were big enough for the task ahead of them. It is regrettable that the tonnage of these two boats, Mimi and Toutou, was not given by Commander Simson, but he mentions incidentally that of the three German boats that dominated the lake before the arrival of the British expedition one of 600 tons blew herself up to escape being captured. Of the other two one was sunk and the other taken. It is obvious that the Mimi and Toutou were no motorboats. Nevertheless, after their ocean voyage, they were transported 200 miles through bush and forest, 400 miles by river, and again 100 miles by road. Probably when the history of the war is written this obscure little task performed by a handful of Englishmen assisted by negroes will stand out as one of its most wonderful achievements.

Commander Simson says that the conditions existing on the last stage of the overland trip were simply awful. He and his men had no water to drink; so they drank filthy mud. They had little sleep, and were worn out with the sun, dust, flies, and mosquitoes. The dust from the oxen and traction engines, in combination with a merciless sun, and then "sixteen days on the Lualaba River in an open boat through a sleeping sickness country, infested with tsetse, was an experience none of us wishes to have again." At one moment, he says, he saw his boat sliding in loose earth towards a precipice, and at another with one wheel right down in an ant-bear hole. The road on which the final march was made was over a plateau 7,000 feet above sea-level, so soft that the wheels were buried, and the gear had to be hauled out with block and tackle, oxen and negroes. The river journey was hardly less trying, since the boats had to be got aboard barges. When the outfit arrived finally, the Belgians said that the impossible had been accomplished.

The entry describing this part of the diary, which is published in the New York Times, closes with these words—and how many Englishmen have not said the same and made it good with their lives: "We have a very difficult task in front of us, but for the honor of our country, we are determined to give a good account of ourselves." They did. On December 27, 1915, the British boats engaged a German gunboat of five times their combined tonnage, and after an action of twelve minutes she struck her flag. The gunnery of the British boats must have been excellent, for the third shot from the Mimi hit the wireless and brought it down; the fifth shot hit her on the waterline and she fled, "but we were faster and put shell after shell into her." One of them went through the conning tower, killing the captain, a gunlayer, and a seaman. She was also leaking badly, and then she quit. When the British sailors boarded her they found that twelve of their shells had struck. She was yellow from lyddite, and the dead were unrecognizable. They were buried with military honors.

On February 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mimi and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Fifi. The latter was not fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mimi put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Fifi gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with unfleshed scalpel.

WHICH?

"This bulk tea is the best I could buy at the price, Mrs. Brown, but I believe you will like Red Rose better.

"We use Red Rose at home and like the rich flavor. My wife says it goes further."

They have sold Red Rose Tea for many years and have found the quality so good that they use it in their homes.

Most grocers naturally like to make an extra profit on their bulk tea, but they cannot help recommending Red Rose Tea because they know it's worth the price.

They know it goes further because it consists chiefly of the teas from Assam in Northern India, the strongest, richest teas grown anywhere in the world.

Knit to "Nature's" Last

Ordinary hosiery is stretched into shape over a form while the hosiery is damp. It loses this shape when washed.

Mercury Hosiery retains its shape, because it is knitted to "Nature's Last" on new machines.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Fair One With the Golden Locks

By RYLAND BELL

I first fell in love with Gwendolin Winchester's hair. We hear much of golden hair, but I have never seen but one head of hair the real color of gold. That was Miss Winchester's. She wore it as loose as any hair can be dressed indeed, it resembled a balloon in its shape.

Having fallen in love with the young lady's hair, I proceeded to fall in love with the girl herself. We boarded in the same house; consequently I saw her often. But she kept very much to herself, and none of us became familiar with her. Sometimes she would sit with me after dinner for a short while, but none of the other boarders was so honored. At such times, especially when we sat side by side, I noticed a dampness in the air which seemed to come from my companion. I once asked her how she made each individual hair stand out by itself, and she said that she washed it very often. There was a great deal of dust floating about, and it got into her hair. This was the cause of the frequent washings.

After giving her a number of invitations I finally succeeded in inducing Miss Winchester to go to the theater with me. When at the raising of the curtain she took off her hat and displayed her wealth of hair many persons turned their eyes upon it admiringly. It seemed to me that not only its hue was golden, but that in one or two places it had a golden sparkle. I asked her if she ever used a gold powder. She looked at me in a startled way and said:

"No. What makes you think so?"

"Because there is a place in your hair which sparkles as though you had put gold powder on it."

She put her hand up and asked me where was the spot I referred to and was not satisfied till I directed her to it.

Miss Winchester held a position of some sort, but she told none of us where or what it was. She went out about 8 o'clock in the morning and returned at 4. On her return she went into her room and locked the door. I understood that she wished to rest till dinner. I could not understand why, if she needed rest, she took the trouble to wash her hair so often. Women usually make a great ado about washing their hair, and when they do are usually to be seen sitting about with it hanging loose. Miss Winchester would wash her hair between 4 and 5 o'clock and come down to dinner with it done up at half past 6. I once asked her how she dried it so rapidly and she said by fanning it. This added to my wonder that she should take so much trouble after a day's work.

I asked the young lady on several occasions to give me a lock of her beautiful hair, but she always declined. One evening when we were sitting together a lock came loose. My business requires me to carry a small pair of scissors in my vest pocket, and I surreptitiously cut off the strand without her being aware of what I had done.

When I went to my room I held the strand near the gas jet to examine it. On it I noticed a particle of a substance that reflected the light. Among my knickknacks I kept a magnifying glass—not a scientific instrument, but such as could be carried in the pocket. I brought it to bear on the particle and saw that it was either stone or metal. I judged that it was metal, since one of its minute faces reflected the light. Moreover, moving the light about on the lock I detected other particles, though most of them were much smaller than the first.

I don't know what prompted me to do so—idle curiosity, I suppose—but I put the lock in a glass of water and stirred it to separate the particles. They settled to the bottom of the glass. I poured most of the water off, and the rest of it, including the particles, I poured on to a sheet of white paper. This I held over the gas jet till the water had evaporated and the particles stood out on the white paper infinitely small bits of yellow sand or metal. Fishing a little horseshoe magnet out from among my other trinkets, I picked one of the particles up with it. I then knew that it was metal.

I said nothing to any one about the matter. Indeed, I thought very little of it till one afternoon, being in a building, I saw Miss Winchester coming out of an office on the door of which, under the firm name, was the word "Assayers." Assayers may be expected to handle gold dust, and a suspicion at once came to me that the particles I had found in Miss Winchester's hair were golden. I had preserved them and made a further examination to find that my surmise was right.

I ceased my attentions to Miss Winchester, but I dreaded to have it discovered that she was carrying away gold dust that did not belong to her in her hair and, asked for a private interview with her, told her what I had seen and how it had revealed what she had stolen.

She was dreadfully cut up; begged me to keep her secret, and I agreed to do so on her solemn promise to abstain in future.

I never met Miss Winchester again. Somehow after that when I came near a girl with golden locks I could not avoid looking to see if there were scintillations of gold dust.

OH, SUCH A HEADACHE!

Every now and again don't you get one of those fearful headaches that drive you to do anything to get relief? Remember, though, its a mistake to just "smother" the pain without removing the cause. Nearly all headaches have their beginning in the stomach, liver or bowels, and the best remedy is Chamberlain's Tablets, which tone the liver, sweetens the stomach and cleanse the bowels. This not only cures the headache but prevents its return.

Magnetic Metals.

Magnetic properties are not confined to iron. Alloys made from various combinations of metals—copper, manganese, tin, aluminum, bismuth and some others—show more or less marked magnetism. Recent work has shown that the highest amount of magnetic power among ironless alloys is obtained by mixtures of copper and manganese plus either aluminum or tin. It is difficult to explain why such alloys should be magnetic.

Also Think of the Advice He Had.

"How did King Solomon get the reputation of being so wise?"

"Well, you see, he had a very great number of wives, and every woman does her best to brag about what an awful smart man her husband is."

Vocalization.

"I do," replied the impresario. "You don't know what a relief it is to have her get out and throw those high notes around to the audience instead of yelling at me about her salary."

Some Support.

"Mr. Flubdub, I am a candidate for your daughter's hand."

"Well, I'm unpledged, my boy. If a ballot is taken you can have my vote."—Kansas City Journal.

Rue.

The Talmud enumerates rue among the kitchen herbs and regards it as free of tithe as being a plant not cultivated in gardens. The name rue occurs in the Bible only in Luke xi, 42.

Foxy Customer.

Acquired.

Wife—I can't understand why I didn't see those faults in you before we were married. Hub—That's easily explained. I didn't possess them then.

The man who thinks he knows a woman like a book usually discovers many uncut leaves.

Trawling Ships Wanted.

Prior to the outbreak of the war, Japan's trawling fleet was a formidable part of the industries of the country. Since 1914, however, it has been steadily thinning. Of the 139 trawlers registered in 1915 only a few—probably less than a score—are left. The others have been purchased by the Entente Powers for war purposes. So keen has been the bidding by French and Italian buyers recently, that a rickety trawler fetched about $100,000 last month. That beats the fishing business; trawlers owned by private parties are getting the advantage of the war market.—East and West News.

Manila's Name Widely Used.

Manila has given its name probably to more articles of commerce than any other city in the world. "Manila" tobacco, cheroots, hemp, hats, paper matting, bracelets and rings are just a few of the things which remind people in different countries of the capital of the Philippines.—London Chronicle.

Heathen Shrines.

After months spent in idolatrous lands I have been unable to see much real worship in heathen shrines. The educated worship with their tongues in their cheeks and the ignorant with their hearts in their mouths. But the amount of real worship that exists in heathen temples is very small.

Sometimes a bereaved mother will enter the temple and draw from her kimono the tiny bib of a departed little one and tie it to the statue of Jizo, the god of motherhood. Sometimes an old man or woman, almost blind, will enter the temple and rub the eyes of a wooden god and then rub his own in the hope that eternal darkness may not close in on his affrighted soul. In some places Buddhist services are as dignified, as well attended and as helpful as our own.—Maynard Owen Williams in Christian Herald.

Graphite, says the Scientific American, is not a lubricant, but an aid to keeping a bearing in good working order by filling up the minute irregularities of the shaft and bearing and producing a beautiful polished surface and in this way reduces friction. To get this result only a very small quantity of graphite is necessary, and if too much is applied it simply collects in wads and defeats the purpose intended. It follows that the proper way to use graphite successfully is to mix thoroughly a small quantity with the lubricating oil at suitable intervals and not to apply it continuously, for when the above mentioned polished surface is formed it will last quite a long time before requiring renewal.

Advice In Securing Riches.

Frederick Weyerhaeuser, America's one time lumber king, who died a multimillionaire, once gave the following rules on how to get rich: "Make up your mind to work at something really worthy of work and work hard. The surest way to make money is to save money and to use what you have. Don't be afraid of long hours or constant attention to your work. Work can be made a joy, an economy, a pleasure, if you combine an object worth while with the determined ambition to win. Any young man can get rich, can succeed, if he saves, if he has a definite and honest purpose and is so filled with the purpose that work ceases to be a hardship and becomes a privilege."

After You've Had a Fight.

The world would be much better if every man were as kind and good always as he is just after he has had a fight or a near fight. When he has cooled off he is glad to do just anything he can for anybody. If you want a match he will hunt one for you; if you want to borrow a knife he has his out in a minute, and he opens it for you; if you borrow a pencil from him he will say, "Keep that one if you want to; I have another." It just looks as if his only purpose in living is to help other people.—Claude Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Face Value.

Escarolle—She said: "I want you to take me at my face value. Don't judge me by my father's wealth." Chiffonade—And what did you say? Escarolle—Why, I told her that the present price of dyes, paints and cosmetics was so high that I couldn't afford to be associated with her.

Must Be.

"I'm really worried about my wife." "What's the matter?"

"I don't know. There must be something radically wrong with her because she says she isn't taking the slightest interest in the new styles."

While He Waited In the Parlor.

Mr. Sooper (to her kid brother)—May I hope to see your sister pretty soon? Kid Brother—You'll see her pretty, all right. She's been fixin' up to beat the band.

NOTED MUSICIAN OF MONTREAL

Advises The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

MR. ROSENBURG

April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Matter and Force.

There is no such thing as a loss of matter or force. The so called "conservation" of matter and its forces was demonstrated years ago by Joule and other scientists. When, for instance, a thing "burns up," as we say, the substances that give out the light and heat are changed, not destroyed. The wood or whatever the substance happens to be becomes ashes and gas, and if we could gather up all the products of the burning we should find that they had not lost a particle of their weight and that the form of them only was changed. The eternity of matter was a teaching of the old Greek philosophers, or of some of them at least, and the modern teaching of the conservation or indestructibility of the stuff of the universe would seem to corroborate the ancient idea.

Where One Czar Fell.

A church in Petrograd having both autocratic and revolutionary associations is the Church of the Redeemer. It was erected at a cost of £500,000 on the exact site of the murder of the ex-czar's grandfather, Alexander II. The spot where he fell remains (though now within the building) precisely as it was, even to the blood on the stones, each of which has an identification number. Above these is a wonderful canopy of malachite stone, from which depend an orb, a scepter and a crown of thorns. Folding doors of pure silver and ikons incrusted with precious stones surround the shrine.

Pretty High Hills.

A distinguished astronomer once took the trouble to measure in several paintings the size of the moon and to deduce from it the height of the mountains shown in the same picture. He found that the average height of the hills was about forty-three miles, while one giant peak raised its head more than a hundred miles above sea level. Turner, who was one of the greatest masters of landscape composition and coloring, frequently exaggerates the height of his hills with the intention of conferring upon them a majesty which otherwise they would not possess.

The Polar Bear.

The polar bear is a pretty formidable brute. A specimen of this species has been killed weighing 1,000 pounds and measuring nearly thirteen feet from nose to tail. The strength of the polar bear is beyond belief. One was seen feeding on the body of a white whale fifteen feet long and weighing at least three tons. The whale had been dragged by the bear out of the water on to the ice.

A Little One.

Figg—Talk about your green servant girls. My wife told ours to put a little nutmeg in the custard she was making this afternoon. Fogg—And did she do it? Figg—Oh, yes; she put a little nutmeg in, all right! I came near choking over the blamed thing.

Get Ideas.

There is a vast difference between information and ideas, and the man of information may be useful like a dictionary, but may never be a force in the community.

A Handy Signal.

Visitor—So this is the deaf and dumb ward! How do you call people to dinner? I suppose you don't ring a bell. Superintendent—No; we have a man who walks through the ward wringing his hands.

Burglary.

Miss Vocolo—I'm never happy unless I'm breaking into song. Bright Young Man—Why don't you get the key and you won't have to break in?

One may ruin himself by frankness but one surely dishonors himself by duplicity.

Millais' "Trust Me."

A lady and gentleman were standing before a picture by Millais, called "Trust Me," in which an elderly squire confronts his daughter, who holds a letter behind her back.

The picture admits of more explanations than one, for Mr. Millais had that rare faculty of putting blended expressions into his faces which puzzle us, as the expressions of real faces do.

But the one this gentleman was overheard giving his companion is as new we are bound to say, to the painter as to our readers. "You see," he said "she has got a letter in her hand which she is keeping back from the man in the red coat. 'Well, he is the postman and has just given her the letter. I suppose it's from abroad She hasn't the money to pay the postage, so she says, 'Trust me.'"

Grand Opera In 1680.

The following excerpt from Burney's "History of Music," published in 1776 describing the first performance of the opera "Bernice" in 1680, indicates that "there is nothing new under the sun," even in sumptuous staging of music dramas.

"There were choruses of 100 virgins 100 soldiers, 100 horsemen in iron armor, forty cornets on horses, six trumpeters on horseback, six drummers, six ensigns, six great flutes, six minstrels playing on Turkish flutes and six others on octave flutes, six pages, three sergeants, six cimbalists, twelve huntsmen, twelve grooms, six coachmen for trumpeters, six others for the procession, two lions led by two Turks, two elephants led by two others. Bernice's triumphal car drawn by four horses six other cars, with prisoners and spoils drawn by twelve horses, and six coaches for the procession.

Cash Value of Success.

"While I do not think that success is measured by money," says a writer in the American Magazine, "an estimate of success cannot be disassociated from the cash value that is put on our work. It is the only factor of happiness that, granting material necessities, has to be reckoned in dollars.

"Success is a variant, and it is impossible to state it in a money limit. I know that the $5,000 that is my father's salary as United States attorney brings with it to him a recognition of his ability that the same salary made in another way would not have. I know that the small checks I sometimes receive for my own work bring a glow that really isn't in the checks."

27 KILLED, 50 HURT IN ZEPPELIN RAID

Heavy Artillery Fighting On The West Front

ENGLAND ATTACKED BY A FLEET OF ZEPPELINS

Part of London and Eastern Counties Are Visited by German Air Monsters---Thirty-three Killed in Official Announcement of the Fatalities--Zeppelin is Brought Down Near Border of Alsace ---Heavy Shelling on French Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, Saturday, October 20.—At midnight last (Friday) night six or seven airships raided the eastern and north-eastern counties of England, dropping bombs at various points, including a few in the London area, according to an official statement just issued.

At this hour the raid is still proceeding.

The following official communication was issued:

"Hostile airships attacked the eastern and north-eastern counties this evening. The enemy aircraft proceeded some distance inland over these counties, but did not carry out any very definite attack. Six or seven raiders took part in the raid, and bombs have been dropped at various points, including a few in the London area. The raid is still in progress."

There were the customary scenes in London. The people hurried to the subways and other shelters, which were soon filled. The omnibuses, however, continued running.

After the warning was sounded very distant roars of guns were heard for a few minutes. The searchlights were in action, but no hostile aircraft was seen. It is evident that the raiders were prevented from reaching the London district.

This is the first time the enemy has made use of Zeppelins for several months, aeroplanes having been substituted for airships since two the former were brought down in flames on the occasion of the last visitation to British shores.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 20.—Twenty-seven persons were killed and fifty-three injuredc in last night's Zeppelin raid. There was some material damage to houses and business premises.

Seven or more Zeppelins crossed the east coast at about eight o'clock last night, four going in one direction and three in another. At 11:30 o'clock one Zeppelin passed out on the homeward journey. This air ship dropped six bombs at eleven o'clock and three at 11:15. The noise of its engines was heard for twenty minutes.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 20.—A German Zeppelin was brought down in flames late last night at Rambervillers, near the Alsatian border, and two others were forced to land. They belonged to a squadron composed of a large number of Zeppelins who flew over the Vosges.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), October 20.—Heavy artillery fighting is in progress on the Aisne and Verdun fronts. In other respects there is comparative quiet.

The statement says: On the Aisne front there were violent artillery actions, especially in the sector of Mennejean Farm. Strong enemy patrols which attempted to approach our lines in this region were repulsed. The enemy left prisoners in our hands and suffiered appreciable losses. On the right bank of the Meuse, Verdun front, artillery fighting was spirited north of Bezonvaux and in Caurieres Wood.

There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 20. — (Official)—The enemy's artillery showed great activity yesterday evening and in the early part of the night north of Lens, and on the battle front between Tower Hamlets and the Ypres-Roulers railway. There was also considerable reciprocal artillery activity during the night northeast of Ypres.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 20.—The Russian Baltic fleet in its entirety could not face the Germans in the Gulf of Riga without abandoning responsibility for the defense of the Gulf of Finland, according to Count Kapnist, of the Russian Admiralty. The Germans, he said, effected their landing operations on Oesel Island with twelve transports escorted by twelve battleships of all types, five cruisers, an enormous number of auxiliaries and thirty destroyers. "It was impossible for our entire Baltic fleet to meet the enemy without abandoning responsibility for the protection of the Gulf of Finland," said Count Kapnist.

The Count cited the battle of Jutland as a precedent for the impossibility of using submarines to advantage. He added that the Germans are using the same troops that took Oesel Island to attack Dago Island, thus showing that the Germans were carrying out their operations with a minimum force.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 20.—In a discussion preceding the passing of a vote of confidence in the Government by a great majority in the Chamber of Deputies, several members criticized the policy of the Ministry as being incoherent and lacking energy. "I have already said when expounding our war aims," Premier Painleve replied, "that it is the restitution of Alsace-Lorraine that we are determined upon. There must be restitution whatever may be the fate of battles. For this we should push the war to the bitter end."

IMPORTANT MEETING OF WAR VETERANS

All members of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are reminded of the special general meeting in the recreation room of the Armouries on Monday night when a conference will be held with leading citizens in regard to the possibility of a campaign for permanent headquarters. The G.W.V.A .executive are desirous of having a representative attendance of members on this important occasion, and urge every member of the Club to make a special effort to be present on Monday night.

57th Band Will Give A Concert

Last evening the members of the 57th Band decided to play one of their Toronto Exhibition concerts in the Grand Opera House for the benefit of the Great War Veterans' Association. A singer will also be secured for the occasion, the date of which will be announced later. The proceeds will go to the Great War Veterans' Association.

What Good Is Money Unless War Is Won?

Tax Collector Green received a letter this morning from a reverend gentleman in Texas, who, after enclosing a cheque for his taxes, remarked. "What good is money if we do not win this war? If our lads do as well as your lads have already done, we will win alright. May God sustain and strengthen both!"

The official announcement says that three merchant vessels escaped in the action, but that five Norwegian, one Danish and three Swedish vessels were sunk without warning.

Arrested On Charge Of Conspiracy

Canadian Press Despatch:

MONTREAL, Oct. 20.—Charles Desjardin, who was employed by Federal authorities to obtain evidence of the dynamiting of the county home of Lord Atholsten, was placed under arrest yesterday at Three Rivers and brought to Montreal this morning. He will face the charge of conspiring with others to commit murder. The complainant in the case is Paul Emil Lemarche, K.C.

Evidence submitted at the preliminary trial of the eight men arrested for dynamiting, purported to show that Desjardin, who consorted with them, gave one man a useless pistol and money and promised rifles.

FINANCIAL CANVASS WAS GREAT SUCCESS

During the week, under the direction of the Finance Committee, the laymen of George Street Methodist Church conducted a financial canvass of the congregation and those who were engaged in the work, some sixty in number, met last evening in the Church parlours to report the results.

Possibly no campaign of the congregation ever met with more sympathetic and unanimous support than did this one. The objective of the campaign was to increase the Missionary givings 14 per cent. and current expenditure 20 per cent. over the givings of last year. The congregation responded by increasing their givings to Missions 24 per cent. and 28 per cent. to the current offerings. Credit for the splendid success of the campaign is largely due to the thorough organization work of the Finance Committee in conjunction with the Pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas, and to the enthusiastic co-operation of the men who undertook the work.

While the results were being totalled the ladies of the congregation served refreshments.

Anniversary Services In Mark St. Church

The 44th anniversary of Mark Street Methodist Church will be celebrated to-morrow.

The congregation have planned for a Sabbath of unusual interest. The speaker for the morning service will be Rev. A. J. Thomas, M.A., B.D., of George Street Methodist Church, and the Rev. R. Pogue of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, will speak in the evening.

Special music will be rendered by the Choir, assisted by Miss Mary Dixon of Campbellford.

Only 2 Men Report For Service Here In A Week

Both of Them Are Physically Fit Only For Home Service --Ninety-seven Others, Many of Them in "A" Category, Have Claimed Exemption

SOME NEW INSTRUCTIONS

Registrations	99
Report for service	2
Claims for exemption	97

The above summary gives the results of the first week's registrations at the local post office under the Military Service Act. They are the figures up to noon to-day and cannot be considered as very encouraging, inasmuch as only two men out of ninety-nine registrations who reported for service, have been placed in C category by the doctors, and are not in the least likely to be called upon, as their physical classification means that they are considered fit only for duty in Canada. The second man to report for service is William Frank Crofts, Burnham street, who filled in a report form yesterday.

Since yesterday at noon, up to 11.30 o'clock this morning only fifteen men registered, and fourteen of these claimed exemption on various grounds.

New Instructions.

Postmaster Edgar has received some additional and impotant instructions from the Military Service Council. The new orders state that while it is not compulsory that medical history sheets be attached to the claims for exemption, it is desirable that they should be, as this step will do away wih the chances that the draftee will be ordered by the Registrar to report for another examination.

The Postmaster is carrying out this instruction and the medical history sheets are being attached to all claims for exemption. This step was not taken in the early part of the work.

It is also stated officially that it is not necessary for a man to be examined by a Medical Board before he reports for service or claims exemption. The Medical Boards have been opened for the convenience of the men affected, but the examination is purely voluntary before Nov. 10, and a man may report under the Act without having been examined. In this connection the exemption tribunals will be instructed to deal with exemption claims based on other than physical grounds first. Then, if the claim is not allowed the man will have to be examined.

"B" and "C" Men.

The instructions received also give "B" and "C" category men a clear outline of the course they should pursue. As the present call is only for Grade "A" men, those placed in "B" and "C" category are instructed to ask for exemption only on physical grounds. If, later on, they should be called for service, arrangements will be made to have any other claims for exemption they may have heard by the tribunals. This point is definitely cleared up and "B" and "C" men should lose no time in filling in their exemption blanks and clearing the way for the rush of "A" men that will necessarily ensue between now and the 10th of next month.

ALL EXEMPTION CLAIMS ARE TO BE INVESTIGATED

Military Representatives Are Starting Immediately on Their Work of Looking Into Cases So That They Will Be Ready For the Tribunals

LOCAL APPOINTMENTS

The Class One eligibles who are claiming exemption under the Military Service Act would be advised to make sure that they have good grounds for asking that they be relieved from service as otherwise they will only be wasting their own time and that of the tribunals.

This is the impression to be gained from the local military representatives who are back from receiving their instructions at Kingston. These representatives are not merely going to attend the tribunals and protect the military interests there. Their duties are much more extensive than that and furthermore their part in seeing that the Military Service Act is carried out will begun at once. The exemption claims that are being filed at the local post office go into the registrar, are sorted out and allotted to their respective tribunal districts. The military representative in each district receives copies of the claims that are to come before his particular tribunal and he immediately investigates each case so that when it comes before the Exemption Board all the facts are available.

For instance Joe Doe may claim exemption on the ground that he is a farmer's son and that he is needed on the farm. Taking it at its face value that claim sounds reasonable. But the military representative has looked up John Doe's case and finds that ever since the munition business boosted wages in the city, John Doe has been working in Peterborough, preferring the big salary to helping his father in the greater production movement. He has merely hit the trail for the farm a few weeks ago when he became convinced that conscription was coming. In that case it will probably be a case of "up the line you go with the best of luck" for John Doe.

Then again, Richard Roe claims that he is the sole support of his mother. If he really is, he may have a reasonable claim for exemption, but if the military prosecutor finds out in the meantime that Richard has only been paying his board and some weeks, not even that his claim may not be considered sufficient by the tribunal.

It will be the duty of these military representatives to dig deeply into all such cases so that by the time the tribunal opens they will know pretty thoroughly just how much justice there is in the claims.

Peterborough city—Lieut.-Col. E. B. Cleeve, Mayor Duffus.
Millbrook—Lieut. L. J. Boedet.
Norwood—Lieut. Theodore Quinn.
Apsley—Capt. Browning.
Bridgenorth—Lieut. J. A. McNabb.
Centreville—Fred Long.

PERFECT FITTING.

Our system of fitting the face as well as the eyes with just the style of frame, with the particular size and shape of glasses that each individual case requires—is your safeguard. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George Street.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

"Have you a boy at the front? Or a friend whom you think highly of? It may take six weeks to reach him. So I am ready now with khaki ties, khaki handkerchiefs, mufflers, socks and underwear—and other things that will make the brave soldier boys shout with glee. "Come to me."

ONE BILLION AND A HALF DOLLARS DAMAGES DONE

This is the Approximate Estimate of German Depredations in Belgium According to Official Statistics

BELGIAN STATEMENT

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

(By Wm. B. Forrest).

PARIS, Oct. 20.—At least one and a half billion dollars is one of the first items Germany must settle when it comes to squaring up accounts.

This is the approximate amount of damage by German depredations in Belgium, according to official statistics received to-day.

War contributions levied up to August 10, 1917, $288,000,000.

NPrivate war contributions and fines up to the end of 1914, $40,000,000.

Confiscation of machinery and requisitioning of raw materials to January, 1915, $400,000,000.

Destruction of sources of economic wealth, not including destruction of private property, which is still continuing, $1,000,000,000.

The Belgian statistics do not include claims for the enormous loss resultant for the cessation of Belgian industries nor do they include damages for many German acts in stripping factories reported in the last few months.

ZEPPELINS STILL MENACE

LONDON, Oct. 20. — After an interval of twelve months London last night experienced another Zeppelin raid. Nobody saw the raiders, which flew at a great height and dropped only one bomb on London, and a few missiles in outlying districts. The Evening News commenting on the raid says: "Last night another of our fond war delusions due, we suppose, to phlegmatic perversity of our national character, was shattered. Statements from authoritative quarters made at various times, had led us to believe the airship menace had been mastered. How far this is from being the case is shown by the official report. It may be pointed out that the moon, a feeble one, set at eight minutes past seven. It seems therefore that the moon is not the factor in German air calculations which most people suppose it is."

THE WOOLWORTH SALE

The Woolworth Company's big double store has been jammed during the past three days—the result of the extra special offerings of their "Clerks' Profit-Sharing Sale." Each clerk has been making an extra effort to swell the sales at her counter, and the remarkable values every day have crowded the counters to such an extent that Manager Gould and his floor-walkers have had their hands full regulating the order of the eager buyers.

The sugar and soap salesladies have had to bear the heaviest charge of the buying battalions, who stormed their counters waving handfuls of paper money at the packers. Nothing over 15 cents was offered, and the values in many instances were exceptionally good, and could only have been possible through the large buying organization enjoyed by the Woolworth Company.

THINGS TO CONSIDER.

An article by Mr. Dela Fosse, Public Librarian, in to-day's issue, is worthy of careful attention. In the midst of our war activities we must within the war winning, provide for conditions that must be dealt with, if the fruits of war winning are to be reaped. We must not neglect the cultivation of ourselves and our fellows. We must have an eye to training and equipping the generation that is coming on for the work of after-war reconstruction, whose importance and difficulty, will demand the best of citizenship, with the best equipment for individual contribution to national service.

A reference to the article as printed in to-day's issue, will show the scope of its aims. It deserves careful reading, as indicating a preliminary to action. We must not consider only the material in our activities, but also keep pace with the demands of a broader culture as the condition of higher usefulness.

It is declared on oath that hogs have increased in price 103 per cent. The profiteer hogs is a close second.

THE BOON OF OIL.

Oil on the troubled waters, as an expedient of tried value, has its complement in troubled waters on oil. The condition of our macadam and gravelled streets is a proof positive upon a most valuable means of street tive that our City Council has hit improvement. After a steady downfall of rain, amounting in a few days to four or five inches, we find the oiled streets, where proper preparation preceded the application of oil, to be in a remarkably good condition, free of mud, when, without the oil, the streets would have been quagmires. Such results from an attempt to meet the only object in providing streets — comforable use — should be an encouragement to the street authorities to improve on the expedient. With proper preparation of street surfaces for receiving oil, and with a systematic attention to filling depressions as they develop, we shall have thoroughly good streets at a very moderate cost. Making good streets is one thing and an important one; keeping them good by constant and regular attention to smoothness, and the proper application of oil is more important; and indispensible if we are to get the best value from our street expenditure.

The Quebec bridge is up and holds together under test. It will also hold together our commercial interess.

A GOOD POLICY.

The first declaration of policy of the new union government represents a good beginning. Naturally the foremost consideration is given to the prosecution of measures for winning the war. That item of policy is not so simple as its expression might be taken to imply. It cannot stand by itself, but has so many related conditions, so many auxiliary elements, that effective measures for winning the war must involve the adoption of a multifolicity of indispensably related measures.

Among the auxiliary items of the government's policy are mentioned, civil service reform, woman suffrage and the taaxtion of property and incomes; a strong policy of immigration and colonization; the development of transportation facilities; economy and thrift, and reduction of the cost of living; development and conservation, adequate attention to the needs of our industrial population, and last, but by no means least, a policy of promotion of national harmony and a development of a national spirit of cooperation.

There is nothing in this protocol of policy of the union government which any patriotic citizen cannot subscribe to heartily; and there is nothing in it which the recent government might not have adopted; nothing which has not been urged upon toem, and nothing for which the Liberal party has not contended.

It is announced that a new portfolio, that of immigration, has been established, and a permanent war committee will also be established.

It will be noticed that the new programme does not include any special consideration of the interests of labour. This is no surprise in face of the fact that in the construction of the cabinet, no representative of the labour interests was provided. This omission is regrettable. Considering the circumstances, a close comparison of the main policy of a union government —winning the war— should have been a policy in the interests of those who will do the main work in winning the war. From the toilers of the land nine-tenths of the soldiers now battling for us, were drawn—from the ranks of Labour ,and nine-tenths of those we shall send as a result of compulsory service measures will be drawn from the same ranks. It is, therefore, a little disappointing to find that in the new government, specifically organized to win the war, representation of, and provision for, the inteerst of labour are not included. We are fighting for democracy and it does not seem right that perfunctory departmental service, without personal representation, should be meted out to the interest that is over all, the "overalls."

Habit persists in calling the "Union" government the "Borden" government. One half of the "Borden" government is out and into fat offices.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Could some one of your readers of your splendid paper give a recipe for jellied chicken? I wish to jelly some chicken to send overseas. I would be very grateful for an early reply as I wish to send a box this coming week.

Yours sincerely,
"COOK."

Will one of our readers please furnish us with this recipe for "Cook's" benefit?

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If you will kindly allow me the space there are two or three things which I should like to lay before the people of Peterborough in regard to the needs of the Public Library. The first of these has to do with the meetings of literary societies and associations where papers on various subjects will be read. Such papers, whether prepared by old or young would have to be useless indeed if they did not contain some information which would be of value to us for reference purposes. The call upon us for information on all sorts of subjects is insistent and any papers handed over to us for dealing with matters controversial, biographical, historical or political, would be gratefully accepted. They would thus serve a double purpose; first, in catering to that select coterie for whom they were primarily intended and secondly, to that great body, of which they form a part, the general public.

My second point has to deal with gifts of books. Our Library committee selects every year a considerable number of books connected with the various branches of literature, but motives of economy as well as the desire to expend the public money in a way to provide the greatest good for the greatest number precludes their purchasing other than a very moderate number of books in one class, or of copies of individual books in a class. Thus, there are very many works which are conspicuous by their absence on our shelves, such as works dealing with the various systems of shorthand, and especially books on Music. If there are any friends of the Public Library who have any volumes of the character mentioned and are willing to present them to us for the public benefit, I am quite sure the Library Board will accept them with many thanks. In this connection I may mention the great value that would attach to the gift to the Library of year old editions of the City Directory. We could very easily receive twenty or thirty of these and exchange them with libraries of other cities and towns for copies of theirs. I know that there are many merchants who would be pleased to present their discarded copies rather than consign them to the garbage can or the dust heap. By this method of exchange a very valuable and serviceable reference library of the province would be acquired at the smallest of cost.

My third and last point is the need of obtaining books for our soldiers and the soldiers of our allies across the border. The American Government has just inaugurated and carried to a fairly successful issue a "war library week." The War Council that it "will buy books and maintain libraries at thirty-two training camps and cantonments of United States soldiers, sailors and airmen at home and abroad, in order that the library may follow the soldier with its sane, recreational and promotional influences." Contributions are requested of books on almost every conceivable subject, from works dealing with patriotism and good citizenship to drawing and lettering and grammars and dictionaries. The idea, of course, is not only to provide recreation for those who have offered their services to their country, but in so doing to provide such as have never had the opportunity with a chance of gaining the education they lack. Any donations sent to the Library will be carefully attended, to and those meant for our Canadian soldiers or for those of our neighbours to the south will be consigned to their respective destinations. I remain,

Yours truly,
FRED. M. DELA FOSSE.

Sunday School Convention To Be Held Here

400 Delegates Will Meet in Peterborough Week After Next

Peterborough has secured for the first time in ten years the Eastern Ontario Sunday School Convention. This convention, which will be held on October 30-31 and November 1, will assume unusual proportions, being composed of about 400 delegates who will be billeted about the town.

The Programme.

The meetings of the convention, which are undemoninational, will be held in the Central churches of the city. The object of the convention is to confer upon improved methods of teaching and for instruction for Sunday school teachers. There will be 12 to 18 important speakers present.

Western Convention.

The convention originally represented all Ontario, but with the greatly increased numbers it was found necessary to divide into eastern and western sections. Kitchener has been selected for the western meeting.

APPEALED TO CHIEF WHEN COAL DEALERS REFUSED HER ORDER

Unable to buy wood or coal from the local dealers during the past two weeks, a woman called on Chief Thompson this morning for a way out of her difficulty. She had the money to pay for fuel, but she had been told that there were no supplies available. The Chief sent her to Mr. F. W. Miller, the city's relief officer, with the expectation that she could obain a quantity of wood until the dealers could provide her with coal. Chief Thompson said he did not think the fuel scarcity was so acute that a woman had to be left entirely without a supply, and remarked that if the City's fuel depot could not meet such demands the regular dealers should make some effort, by concerted action, to relieve cases that border on distress.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN SAILORS' SOCIETY CENTENARY FUND

Sir,—At the invitation of the Directors of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society I have undertaken to issue a special appeal on behalf of the great National work carried on by the Society for our Sailors and for those who are dear to them. Her Majesty Queen Alexandra has graciously expressed her approval of the appeal, and her earnest hope that it will receive the generous support of the British people.

The British and Foreign Sailors' Society is about to complete its hundredth year of service and a sum of not less than £250,000 will be needed to ensure the continuance of its beneficent agencies. The success with which this work has been carried on, before and during the war, has won the confidence and appreciation of the authorities generally, and of the seamen themselves.

On the definite request of the Admiralty authorities, the Society is about to erect additional Naval Rests at various Naval Bases, for the welfare and comfort of Sailors when on shore. The Society has also been urged to extend similar provision for Merchant Seamen in many ports.

I have seen evidence of the splendid relief work of this Society in providing clothes and food for Sailors interned in Germany; dispensing immediate practical assistance to disabled Sailors and dependants of Seamen who have fallen on war service; in providing an education for Sailors' orphans, and especially in feeding, sheltering, clothing and forwarding to their various homes many thousands of Merchant seamen whose vessels have been sunk by enemy action.

Surely there is no one who would willingly turn a deaf ear to the claims of these brave men and women, to whom the whole nation owes so profound a debt of gratitude? For their sake I sincerely hope that I may rely on the co-operation of your readers in a really generous response to the Centenary Appeal of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society. Letters can be addressed to me at the Mall House, Admiralty, London, S.W., marked "B.F.S.S. Centenary."

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Gwendoline Jellicoe.

A SKETCH OF MR. MATTHEWS BY TORONTO STAR

Under the heading, "Principal Witness at Investigation," the Toronto Star has the following reference to Mr. T. F. Matthews:

Thomas Francis Matthews is secretary-treasurer of the Matthews-Blackwell Co., of Peterborough and Toronto, and lives in Peterborough. He was born at Lindsay in 1869, and after working for his father, went to Peterborough, where he entered the employ of George Matthews, pork packer, becoming manager and then secretary and manager of the Matthews Company in 1894. In 1911 the business was amalgamated with the Park, Blackwell Co., of Toronto, and the Laing Co., Montreal. He was chairman of the Peterborough Waterworks Commission for years, and chairman also after the amalgamated Waterworks and Hydro-Electric Commission and of the Peterborough Utilities Commission formed in 1914. He is a curler and golf player, and married in 1892 a daughter of James Stratton. He is a Mason, Knight Templar, and a Baptist.

In his evidence yesterday before the Government Commission Mr. Matthews said in reference to the price of bacon:

"If the Wm. Davies Co. and ourselves had been off the market prices would not have been so high.

MR T. F. MATTHEWS PRINCIPAL WITNESS AT BACON PROBE

Outstanding Feature of the Inquiry Yesterday Was the Submission of a Series of Cables Between Matthews-Blackwell Co. and Their Agents—Important Evidence Given

TORONTO, Oct. 19. — An outstanding feature of the resumed inquiry before the Government Commission into the alleged excessive profits in bacon in Canada at the City Hall to-day was the submission of a series of cables between the Matthews-Blackwell Co. and their agents, Mills and Sparrow, regarding the direct cause of the British War Office action in terminating bacon contracts in Canada. While the general reason given was that it was a matter of finance, several cables showed that Canadian packers held the view that American packers were bringing pressure to bear on the War Office to get a share of the business and complaining of preferential treatment to Canadian producers.

Numerous contradictions of these allegiations were contained in cables from Matthews-Blackwell to their London agents. One, dated August 26, from Matthews-Blackwell Company to their London agents stated that American interests were endeavouring to induce the United States to place an embargo on pork sides from Canada because American packers alleged that Canadian packers had contracts with the Imperial Government at cost plus a percentage.

In this connection Mr. Matthews stated that E. C. Fox, of the Davies Company, and himself went to Washington and saw Food Controller Hoover.

Mighty Advance in Dressed Hogs.

When the inquiry resumed this morning T. F. Matthews again took the witness stand. Commissioner A. B. Brodie, quoting from a statement submitted by Mr. Bain, showed that dressed hogs increased from $10.71 in 1914 to $21.75 in 1917, showing an increase of $11.04 per hundred pounds. Smoked increased in the same period from 18.66 cents to 29.87, showing a percentage increase of 103 per cent. in the first case and sixty per cent. in the case of smoked hams. "Then," asked Mr. Brodie, "there is a parity in the buying and selling prices?" Witness said that was not necessarily so. "It is fortunate that it is not on a parity," put in Chairman Henderson, "or God help the public."

Mr. Gordon Waldron then examined witness in regard to the Matthews-Blackwell Government contracts, seven in number, covering four-week periods, from 23rd Feb., 1917.

Did you have any preference or knowledge over other vendors from Denny and Co., the British War Office buyers?

I am not aware of the privileges of other packers.

What privileges did you have?

We had the privilege of selling a quantity of bacon at prices arranged between us and Denny.

Shipping Privileges.

Did you have any shipping privileges —I don't think we had any privileges over other packers.

Witness agreed that those who shipped to the Admiralty through Denny and Co. had a privilege.

What was the privilege? — We shipped becon f.o.b. to an Atlantic port on this side. Bacon not sold in these contracts were shipped in the ordinary way and we had to find our own space on ships.

The agreement with Denny and Co., on behalf of the War Office gave you the privilege of delivering your bacon on this side of the Atlantic seaboard, and the British Government assumed the risks of crossing the ocean?—Yes.

If any of your competitors were permitted to ship their consigned bacon by Admiralty transports they would have an advantage over you? —They would have an advantage we did not have.

Could you tell me the measure of that advantage?—During the first two months of our contracts the ocean rates advanced from $1.75 per hundred pounds to $3.50 and $4.00. The advantage would be the difference between the rate we would have to pay as an ordinary buyer and one dealing with the Admiralty.

Would the figures be material in the business?—Oh, yes.

It was therefore a distinct advantage to ship in transports? — Not transports. Space was reserved on steamers for us.

Witness admitted this was also an advantage in respect that the longer consignments were left waiting on ships the greater was the shrinkage in the product.

How the Pickle Diminished.

The brine and pickle would diminish?—Yes.

Mr. Waldron: Mr. Yocour, of the Cudahy Packing Company, stated that American packers had difficulty in reaching the English trade—difficulties of shipping and probably as Mr. O'Connor spoke of the accumulation of products through delays of shipping at seashore ports. Is that true?

It might be true. I would not say that was a fair statement.

You arranged the price with Denny?—Yes.

The price was not arranged by the Produce Exchange in London?—I believe not.

I gathered yesterday that the universal practice was to fix the price in London every Friday?—In normal times that was done week by week.

Was the Exchange performing their functions as usual in February, 1917?—Until the maximum price was named by the British Food Controller.

Your contracts were fixed by negotiations with Denny and yourself? —Yes.

Others who were not dealing with Denny and Co. had their prices fixed in the open market?—Yes.

Chairman Henderson: What effect would the fixing of prices by the Food Controller in England have on the value of business from Canada?

Witness: I don't think it had any effect.

What was the fixing of prices done for?—To prevent the prices from going up.

Did that check the advance of the cost of raw material here?—No.

So that you were in a safe position —I would not say that. We endeavoured to get cost.

You would not have sold to Denny at less than cost?—Yes, sir, we would.

Did you sell below cost?—I cannot say.

Material and Handsome Profits.

You made material and handsome profits?—On the average we did.

Then you had two preferences I want to show. You had the advantage of shipping from the Atlantic seaboard and selling bacon on contract. Did you have any other preferences?—No.

Were your relations with Denny from time to time such that you had the advantage of borrowing from Denny product to fill your English domestic trade?—So far as I am aware, all bacon shipped to Denny was turned over to him.

I am told it would have been to your advantage to maintain domestic trade by those intimate and friendly relations with Denny and Co.? — There were times when bacon was selling in the open market at more than we were getting.

If a competitor of yours had that privilege he would have an advantage over you?—I cannot conceive of such an arrangement.

How did you fix your price in bargaining with Denny?—You have the cables.

Mr. Tilley here objected to disclosing prices between Matthews-Blackwell Company and the British War Office. Mr. Matthews seconded his objection, saying the information would be of no value to public, but valuable to their competitors.

Mr. Henderson: If counsel believe it necessary to put in the contracts, I would not say it is not, but I believe Mr. Matthews is magnifying the danger.

It finally was decided to submit the contracts as evidence, and seven were put in, all providing for delivery to the Admiralty at an Atlantic port, and for payment at weight at the port of landing.

Mr. Waldron: When shrinkage loss is ascertained a debit memorandum would come back? Mr. Matthews: Yes.

And what is your experience with such memoranda?—They have been slow in coming back. We have transactions unclosed since May 5.

What are shrinkages?—They vary from ½ per cent. to 1½ per cent.

Did it ever occur that Danish bacon was put on the English market cheaper than Canadian?—Yes.

Would not then your contracts with Denny give you a decided advantage? —The reason Danish bacon was sold for less than Canadian bacon was that it was landed out of condition on account of submarine activity in the North Sea.

What was the effect on prices here when Danish bacon fell below Canadian? Did you reduce your prices to hog producers?—We did not in buying or other dealing pay more than casual attention to the price of Danish bacon. It had, of course, a sympathetic effect.

Yes, but it did not get beyond sympathy.

Here telegrams were submitted showing communications between the Matthews-Blackwell Co. and their British agents regarding price and market possibilities.

One on February 10, 1917, from Mills and Sparrow expressed the opinion that the Matthews-Blackwell Company was not getting its share of contracts.

Mr. Matthews explained that his Company often asked regarding allotments of contracts because competition was very keen. He stated he did not know just what was the fair share for the firm. It was felt they were not getting as much business as they could handle, which was the basis on which they hoped to get contracts.

In discussing cables, Mr. Waldron asked why only large firms were considered.

Mr. Matthews explained it was because his firm was so big.

Didn't Consider Little Fellows.

Mr. Waldron: Then you didn't consider the little fellows? Mr. Matthews: No.

In discussing a message regarding asked if Chicago prices affected prices in Canada.

Mr. Matthews declared: We assumed our share of responsibility for forcing prices up by reason of large trade with the British Admiralty. We were aggressive.

Mr. Waldron: You had a zeal to fill up your cellars at prices within your limitations?

Mr. Matthews: Yes, but often we could not because competition was so keen.

Then this competition forced the prices up?—Yes.

And you and Davies alone operated largely in American markets?" "Yes."

A message dated late in March from Mills and Sparrow was read, saying that Denny would accept an extra 200 weekly, but did not want to aggravate competition.

On April 14 another cable asked if Canadian prices could not be controlled.

A cable early in June gave the information that Davies was withholding shipments for domestic trade in England.

Mr. Matthews said he had learned this in a casual conversation with Mr. Brock, and explained that bacon had been kept off the market because there was at that time an accumulation, and they felt privileged to manipulate so they might get a better price.

Cause of War Contracts Ending.

Mr. Waldron then submitted several cables between Mills and Sparrow, agents, and the Matthew-Blackwell Company. One, written on July 17th by the agent to the company in Toronto, said: "Our impression is pressure from States asking prohibit your cure, American hogs. We beg to suggest you go easy on American product in making your proposition Canadian. Can you arrange cure. Chicago and Cincinnati."

On July 21st the agents cabled: "More tight general situation. Every thing depends on action of American. Canadian control."

That telegram referred to the operations of the Food Controller in America, said witness.

From Mills and Sparrow, July 17: "We are very sorry cannot increase the quantity, but Canadians' orders all similarly decreased, and likely to continue. Our impression is pressure from States working prohibit your curing American hogs."

August 23:

Denny has instruction not to buy Canadian or Canadian cured September, as far as can be ascertained. The reason is finance. They are not buying American meantime owing to price. How long these instructions will hold good impossible to say. Our opinion is prices, including commercial, must be paid upon the basis of cost, but may be wrong in this, as your side got so completely out of hand that we may find very slackened demand."

Aug. 26.—From Matthews-Blackwell, Ltd., to Mills and Sparrow:

"American interests endeavouring induct United States Government place embargo on pork sides for Canada, stating that Canadian packers have Imperial Government contracts at cost plus percentage, permitting them to pay any price for hogs, thus raising markets. We believe recent stupendous advances in

KEEP YOUR HOLIDAY HEALTH

Make it your business to always look and feel as well as you do at the end of your vacation. Sunshine, fresh air and exercise are nature's great restorers and the health gained during a holiday should carry you well along to the next vacation.

It is most important that the blood be kept cleared of impurities. This is the business of the Kidneys. One hour's incapacity on the part of the Kidneys and the blood begins to get clogged with poisons which are carried to all parts of the body—giving rise to one or more of the following symptoms:—

Rheumatism follows the crystalizing of uric acid in the muscle tissues and joints. Uric acid poisons should be eliminated by the Kidneys.

Swollen joints and ankles indicate the immediate need for Gin Pills. Pains in the sides and back and through the groins, constant headaches, restless nights, derangements of the urinary system, stone and gravel, puffiness under the eyes and frequent chills—all these should be taken as warnings and a treatment with Gin Pills taken at once.

"PEEL OFF CALLUSES WITH THE FINGERS"

To painlessly and quickly remove any callus spots from the bottom of the feet apply a few drops of freezone directly upon the hardened skin and shortly it will peel right off without pain, soreness or bleeding.

This drug is an ether compound. It simply loosens the dead callused skin. It doesn't eat it away, but loosens it so it peels right off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of this freezone costs little at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath and surrounding, is found pink and healthy, and not inflamed, or even irritated. This is a good thing to know.

EXEMPTION TRIBUNALS.

Exemption Boards have been chosen in such a way as to make them absolutely independent and removed from all influence. There are over 1,250 boards throughout the country, each composed of two men, one appointed by the county judge in the district concerned and one selected by a joint committee of Parliament. Being familiar with local conditions where they sit, the members are well-fitted to appreciate such reasons for exemption as are put before them by men called up.

Exemption will be granted to those who can establish that it is in the national interest that they remain in civilian life. This is for the Exemption Board to decide after having received full information in each case.

The grounds on which exemption may be claimed (which are similar to the grounds recognized in Great Britain and the United States) are as follows:—

(a) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he is habitually engaged.

(b) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he wishes to be engaged and for which he has special qualifications.

(c) That it is expedient in the national interest that, instead of being employed in Military Service, he should continue to be educated or trained for any work for which he is then being educated and trained.

(d) That serious hardship would ensue, if the man were placed on active service, owing to his exceptional financial or business obligations or domestic position.

(e) Ill health or infirmity.

(f) That he conscientiously objects to the undertaking of combatant service and is prohibited from doing so by tenets and articles of faith, in effect on the sixth day of July, 1917, of any organized religious denomination existing and well recognized in Canada at such date, and to which he in good faith belongs.

(g) That he should be exempt because disfranchised under the War Time Election Act.

No Claim for Exemption should be put forward unless one or other of these grounds in fact exists, and no loyal citizen should assist in, or allow himself to be made a party to, any Claim for Exemption unless thoroughly satisfied that it is made in good faith.

Exemption may be applied for by the men selected themselves or by their parents, near relatives or employers. Application for exemption must be made on printed forms to be found at every post office, which are to be filled in and left with the postmaster if exemption is desired. The postmaster will forward the form to a Registrar, who will send it to the appropriate Exemption Board. In due time, then, the Applicant will get notice as to when he must present his case before the Board.

"A Patched Up Affair" Says Sir Wilfrid

This is His Characterization of the Union Government

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—The aftermath of the Eastern Ontario Liberal conference held here yesterday is not as yet ascertainable. Reports of the proceedings are somewhat conflicting, but that there were undercurrents is certain. The resolution endorsing Sir Wilfrid's leadership was moved and declared carried amid cheers after Sir Wilfrid had delivered himself of a frank exposition of his views on conscription and union. The new union he characterized as a "patched-up affair," which was still the Borden administration. The general impression of Sir Wilfrid's views has been that he would not repeal the act but would enforce it until after a referendum had been taken.

PETERBORO' HOUSEKEEPER COMPLAINS OF RECEIVING SHORT WEIGHT BREAD

Purchased Three Loaves of Bread From Three Different Bakers With the Same Result—Local Council of Women Will Look Into the Matter—Regular Monthly Meeting—Lady Aberdeen to Visit Here

At the monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women held yesterday at the Y.W.C.A., arrangements were made for carrying out the programme for the coming visit of the executive of the National Council of Women. This meeting, at which Lady Aberdeen is expected and 25 members of the executive, will be held on November 28th and 29th.

The Committees.

The following committees for the programme were formed:

Entertainment—Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Medd, Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Cruikshanks.

Billet—Mrs. Harstone and her own committee.

Mrs. Bookhout arranging suitable rooms for meetings.

Open Meeting.

One feature of the visit of the National Council will be a large open meeting, when prominent speakers will occupy the platform on November 28th. Luncheons for the visitors will be held on the 28th and 29th.

Food Cards.

The benefits of the food cards which have lately been distributed, were discussed and it was found in the majority of cases the cards were quite unnecessary, as the housekeepers were already practising economy. In this connection a discussion of whole wheat as a substitute for white flour in bread, advised on the food cards, came up and it was decided to ask the Food Conservation committee to meet the bakers and determine what they could do.

Light Weight Bread.

A report from one housewife of the city on the fact that lately she had bought three loaves of bread from three different bakers, all short in weight, resulted in Mrs. Parsons being appointed to look into the laws governing the weight of bread.

Distributed Posters.

Ladies were appointed for the distribution in the business sections of towns the war posters sent by the government to Mrs. F. C. Neal.

Oleo Margarine.

The President, Mrs. Neal, read a communication stating that the use of oleo margarine, so long deferred, would probably be permitted in the near future. The petition for the use of this commodity was first made by the Local Council.

SCENE FROM "FAIR AND WARMER."

"Fair and Warmer," the Avery Hopwood farce with which Selwyn & Company made the outstanding hit of many seasons past both in New York and Chicago, and which will be presented to local playgoers at the Grand Opera House, on Tuesday next, October 23, has a most uncommon distinction. During the year of its run at the Eltinge Theatre, it was advertised only by its audiences. The billboards which were allotted to it were used by other plays, and the theatrical printing ordered for it waited in the store rooms. "Fair and Warmer" sold out on its second night at the Eltinge Theatre. Every night thereafter was sold out from one to twenty days ahead, and advertising was needless. It was not till Selwyn & Company placed this merriest of farces on tour that they began to advertise, and then only to advise the persons who were looking out for it, the date of its arrival.

Selwyn & Company are sending it here with an ideal cast, and Peterborough is one of only seven Cities in Canada which this excellent attraction is appearing.

KERENSKY AT THE FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Oct. 20.—Premier Kerensky, it is announced officially, has left Petrograd for the fighting front.

A Marvellous Picture

Booked For the Grand Next Week

Never in the memory of the oldest amusement caterer has there been attempted anything so pretentious as "A daughter of the Gods," the William Fox $1,000,000 picture beautiful, featuring Annette Kellermann, which will be shown at "The Grand" next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 25, 26 and 27.

To give one an idea of the colossal undertaking it may be said that for the purposes of finished production, Mr. Fox built a city, with all modern improvements, that accommodated a resident population of about 20,000 persons. To shelter this great body and to produce the picture, Mr. Fox took over an entire island at Kingston, Jamaica, and, like a supreme sovereign, governed it in every detail from his office in New York, some 1,500 miles away.

Meeting with the obstacles of war, plagues, floods and hurricanes, he kept steadily at work, undaunted by his natural enemies and finally accomplished the most ambitious screen fantasy of the century. For two scenes alone, the one the mythical kingdom of Gnomeland, the other the armed camp of the Mad Sultan, Mr. Fox undertook that which had never before been attempted by an individual.

For the former scene it was found necessary to create the effect of a mountain torrent and to do this it was decided to divert the natural course of a river. For the war camp, a range of hills was razed to the level of a plain upon which the armed supporters of the Mad Sultan, to the number of about 10,000, with their tents and horses were given shelter. These instances give a faint idea of the large and unusual undertakings found necessary in the production of this beautifully attractive and thrilling picture.

Rest Room 2nd Floor — The GRESSMAN Company Limited — Store of Better Values

Chicago were purposely manipulated by American interests so that Canadian packers might be blamed. Early in the war American packers made strenuous efforts to get products through to supposed neutrals—your Prize Court records prove this. Canadian packers took products off American markets and kept up supply to England, and this should now have consideration. We have asked no concession, being satisfied with fair field and open market. Intend making representations to Food Controller at Washington. Have official confirmation sent to Food Controller Hoover that we have no contract on cost plus percentage basis, and that sales are made periodically on market values."

August 26, from M. B. to M. and S.

"Is stoppage of buying from Canadian packers caused by financial consideration or is it influence of American packers coupled with effect of O'Connor report? With our Government carrying on campaign for saving by people in order that surplus may be exported for army use, impossible to comprehend buyer's action. Is there any probability of Admiralty refusing space for consigned goods? Would you have an opportunity to sell such to army buyers?"

August 27th, from M. and S.

"Position continues unsatisfactory but expect something develop next week."

August 28th, from M. and S.

"Cannot get reliable information actual cause stoppage Canadian orders, but nothing since has been bought anywhere owing to prices and present contracts thought sufficient to last extended period. Fully appreciate your position and expect in few days to send better news. Changes and control being made and general position will be cleared."

August 28th, sent to M. and S.

Important you have meeting packers and agents immediately.

Aug. 28, sent to Sheede, Thompson & Co., London, by the Wm. Davies Co.:

"Repesentatives of the Banks of Commerce, Montreal, Dominion, and Standard, who all carry important packers' accounts, are receiving instructions from their banks to meet representatives of Davies, Matthews, Harris, Gunns, Chatham Packing Co. respecting bacon situation. It is believed concerted action by all is only effective means of rectifying present difficulties. You will all meet and arrange appointment with proper authorities to find out what real difficulty is. If false charge has been made about Canadian packers, ascertain exact nature, where it comes from, and ask authorities not to cut off Canadian packers until we have opportunity refuting charge. If there is another cause if difficulty, surely authorities will consent to discuss it with an important body of people representing important Canadian interests. It is inconceivable, after three years of war, should be summarily stopped and business diverted to large American packers without any reason being given. Remember, it was American packers who caused so much trouble with respect to shipments for alleged consumption in neutral countries. Remember also that if business transferred to American packers, some large American packers have large packing houses in this country which would enable them to operate on Canadian hogs by being financed by their parent houses in the United States and would be unjust consideration against purely Canadian-owned and Canadian-financed packing houses. Representatives of Canadian bankers and packers should be influential enough to reach right person and are entitled to have whole situation discussed with perfect frankness, so that intelligent plans for future can be made; otherwise packing business in Canada will be floundering in darkness without stability to themselves, and will reflect very serious effects on breeding live hogs this fall, the effect next year of which would be disastrous."

From Sheede Thompson & Co. to Davies:

"The stoppage of orders to Canadian packers is entirely a matter of finance, and if Canada is to continue to receive her share of the business it will be necessary for you to make arrangements with banks and Government to take over the finance of the whole business—in other words, you must arrange to sell your goods on credit to Government, the length of credit would be a matter for negotiation. It is the wish of the Surveyor-General to continue doing business with Canada and if you can put forward any scheme it will receive the consideration of the Treasury."

August 30, from Mills & Sparrow:

August 31, from Mills & Sparrow:

"Arrangements to buy Canadian bacon shipments not yet completed. Arrangement cabled meantime applies States only . . Expect clear Canadian difficulty shortly."

Sept. 2, from Mills Q Sparrow:

"Future army buying American will be co-operated with civilian requirements and centralized through Government Office to be established in States. . . . . Canada meantime must be consigned and army will take their requirements on arrival at prices to be arranged, but meantime based on maximum prices. Should say later when Government purchases States product come along, maximum Canadian will be adjusted correspondingly. It is not intended to penalize Canada in any way, and efforts will be in line with States methods."

Sept. 12, from Mills and Sparrow:

"Government paying market price commandeered bacon."

Frederic Villiers May Speak Here

Famous War Correspondent May Give Address Under Auspices of War Veterans

There is a possibility that citizens of Peterborough in the near future may have an opportunity of hearing a lecture from Frederick Villiers, the famous war correspondent and artist, of the Illustrated London News.

Mr. Villiers is at present in Canada, and the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are considering a proposition to have him appear in this city under their auspices. It will be a rare treat for Peterborough. Mr. Villiers has seen through no fewer than twenty war campaigns, and his lecture on "What I Saw at the British and French Front" should prove intensely interesting. It will be illustrated by a large number of Mr. Villiers' sketches, which are familiar to every reader of the Illustrated London News.

No Need For Alarm Over Sugar Situation

Their Is Enough Sugar in Canada to Last Until Cuban Crop Is Available

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Owing to the publicity given by the Food Controller to the fact that raw sugar is difficult to obtain an unusual interest was started in sugar and a heavy demand has developed as a result. Consumers have becofe uneasy over the situation and have been stampeded into buying as it were. Representatives of refiners state there is no occasion for alarm over the situation, asserting that with a normal demand for this time of the year there should be enough sugar in Canada to carry through until such time as the new Cuban crop begins to come on the market some time in December. Furthermore, Canadian beet root sugar will be on the market within the next week or two and should afford a measure of relief.

Embargo on Tea.

With the report that the embargo on import of tea into Great Britain is likely to be removed there is anticipation among tea dealers that a very active market would develop in Canada should the embargo be raised. Stocks of tea in the British Isles are very low and available supplies in Canada would undoubtedly be drawn upon as one of the nearest sources of supply.

Provisions of all kinds were in steadily firm market. Hams and bacon and barrel pork are now in good demand. Large export shipments of butter have reduced the stocks in Canada considerably and put firmness into prices. Eggs also are in firm market. Honey is firm with supplies dwindling. Advances have been recorded in shoe and stove polish, salad dressing, washboards, soup cubes, tobaccos, powdered bathbrick, cotton twine, dates, lima beans, cornflakes. A decline was recorded in one brand of package cornmeal.

Prices on new pack corn and tomatoes have not yet been announced, but cannot be long delayed. There has been no agreement as yet between the millers and the Food Controller with respect to the price of flour. A meeting is to be held on Thursday of this week, but it is understood no announcement will be given out until about November 1. Business is seasonably good, although is cannot be characterized as brisk.

An Instantaneous Wrinkle Remover

The average woman is always surprised to learn after experimenting with all sorts of patent so-called "wrinkle removers," that the most effective remedy in the world is a simple face wash which she can make herself at home in a jiffy.

She has only to get an ounce of pure powdered saxolite from her nearest druggist and dissolve in half a pint of witch hazel. Apply this refreshing solution to the face every day for a while. The result is charming—marvellous. Even after the very first treatment the wrinkles show less plainly and the face has a nice, firm, comfortable feeling that is thoroughly delightful and lends self-confidence in one's appearance. This harmless home remedy is used by thousands of women to obliterate the unwelcome traces of time.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(By Carl D. Groat.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, October 20.—Germany is centring a large part of the attention of her U-boats on "getting" American transports. That conviction was borne in on navy men to-day as a result of the first torpedoing of an American transport—the "Antilles"—while homeward bound, with about 70 missing. That a U-boat "got" this Morgan liner, however, was largely a matter of fate—of "luck." Recent reports indicating that the Germans are lying in wait for the American transports, especially with the fact that this lurking submarine was on the trail and did her work unseen, clinched the stories as to Germany's intentions. The point that authorities emphasized to-day about the disaster was that it is not of any great military importance, inasmuch as the transport was empty. The German score was no more than the torpedoing of a merchant craft. The fact that American military men lost their lives, however costly though it was, may serve as an impetus to the war spirit here, according to the view of experts. If it does this then the American lives may have not been sacrificed in vain, it is said.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

"Jacob Wrestling With the Angel."
Genesis, 33rd Chap, 24th to 32nd Verses.

We said Jacob continued in the struggle and kept praying on. It was not in his own strength that he wrestled, nor by his own strength that he prevailed, but in and by strength derived from heaven. The angel requests Jacob to let him go, could not he get clear of Jacob's grasp. He could, but then he would put an honour upon Jacob's faith and prayer, and further try his constancy. Jacob resolves to make the best he can of this opportunity, and not to lose the advantage of his victory, but humbly desires to have the blessing given even if he has to suffer pain. Those who would have the blessing of Christ, must be in earnest and importunate for it. It is the fercent prayer that is the effectual prayer. The angel puts a perpetual honour upon him by changing his name. Jacob signifies a supplanter. The angel says, thou shalt be celebrated for true valour, thou shalt be called Israel, a prince with God, a name greater than——all the great of the earth. He is a prince indeed that is a prince with God, having power with God he shall have power with men Jacob gives a new name to the place; he calls is Peniel, the face of God, because there he had seen the appearance of God, and obtained the favour of God. The name he gives to the place preserves and perpetuates, not the honour of his valour or victory, but only the honour of God's free grace. He does not say, 'In this place I wrestled with God and prevailed, but, in this place I saw God face to face, and my life was preserved. It was God's mercy that I escaped with my life.' It becomes those whom God honours to bow before him with gratitude and praise in our hearts and admire the condensions of his love and grace to them. He that appeareth to Jacob is here called God. The prophet Hosea, 12-3, calls him God, even the Angel of the Lord, even the Lord of Hosts, and says that he made supplications to him. We cannot, therefore, doubt what Jacob, Moses and Hosea believed concerning him who wrestled with Jacob. It was the second person in the sacred Trinity, who was afterwards God manifest in the flesh, and who, dwelling in human nature is called Immanuel. Jacob halted on his thigh; he had no reason to look upon it as his reproach, thus to bear in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus. Gal. 6-17. yet is might serve like St. Paul's thorn in the flesh, to keep him from being lifted up with the abundance of the revelations. Notice is taken of the sun's rising upon him when he passed over Peniel. It is sunrise with that soul that has communion with God and the inspired penman mentions a traditional custom . . . which the seed of Jacob had in . . . . remembrance of this. By this observance they preserved the memorial of this story, and gave occasion to their children concerning it. And this use we may still make of it, to acknowledge the mercy of God and our obligations to Jesus Christ that we may now keep up our communion with God, in faith, hope, and love without danger or fear. Jacob having now by prayer committed himself to God, went on his way. Those who have cast their care upon God may look before them with satisfaction and composure of mind, cheerfully expecting the issue, whatever it may be, come what will, nothing can come amiss to him whose heart is fixed, trusting in God Jacob bowed to Esau. The way to recover peace, where it has been broken, is to do our duty, and pay our respects upon all occasions, as if it had never been broken. It is the remembrance and repeating of matters, that separates friends, and perpetrates the separation. A humble, submissive carriage goes a great way toward the turning away of wrath. Many preserve themselves by humbling themselves, the bullet flies over him that stoops. Esau embraced Jacob. God has the hearts of all men in his hands, and can turn them when and how he pleases by a secret, silent, but resistless power.

He can suddenly convert enemies into friends. It is not in vain to trust in God and to call upon Him in the day of trouble; they that do so often find the issue far better than they expected. Esau receives Jacob as a brother, and many tendernesses passes between them. It is remarkable that in nothing are the sacred writers more eloquent, than in relating cases of domestic or friendly tenderness. They set all our best affections at work. They both wept; Jacob wept for joy to be thus kindly received by his brother, whom he had feared; and Esau perhaps from grief and shame, when he thought of the ill designs he had conceived against his brother, which he found himself strangely and unaccountably prevented from carrying out. Esau asks, who are these with you; Jacob returns a serious answer, such as became his character. Jacob spoke like himself, like a man whose eyes are directed towards the Lord. Esau refused the present because he had enough and did not need it, whatever influence Jacob's present had upon Esau to pacify him, he would not have it thought that it had any. It is a good thing for those who have much, to know that they have enough. Those who are content with what they have must show it by not coveting what others have. Jacob affectionately urges him to accept the present, and prevails. Jacob sent it through fear; but the fear being over, he importunes his acceptance of it for love, to show that he desired his brother's friendship, and did not merely dread his wrath. He adds, and I have enough; I have all, so the word is, Esau's enough was much, but Jacob's enough, was all. A godly man, though he have but little in the world, yet may truly say, I have all, because he has the God of all, and has all in Him; all is your's if you will be Christ's: 1st Corn. 3-22, and he has the comfort of all. I have all and abound: Phil. 4-18. Jacob urged Esau and he took his present. It is an excellent thing when men's religion makes them generous, true hearted and openhanded, scorning to do what is paltry and mean. Jacob saw cause, modestly to refuse Esau's offer to accompany him. It is not desirable to be too intimate with superior ungodly relations, who will expect us to join in their circles. Sometimes such friends, deride or ignore religion. Such will be a snare to us, or else be an offence. We shall therefore venture the loss of all things rather than endanger our souls if we know their value; rather than renounce Christ, if we love Him. Let Jacob's care and attention to his family and flocks remind us of the God Shepherd of our souls, who gathers the lambs in his bosom and gently leads those that are with young: Isa. 40-11. As parents, teachers, or pastors, we should all imitate His example. Blessed be His name; He is still the mighty God, the God of Israel; may all who read these reflections be numbered among the true Israel of God. May we record His name and rejoice in His love, through our pilgrimage here on earth, and forever in the heavenly Canaan. Jacob builds an altar in thankfulness to God, for the good hand of his Providence over him. He did not content himself with verbal acknowledgements of God's favour to him, but made real ones. Also that he might keep up religion, and the worship of God in his family. Where we have a tent God must have an Altar. He must have a church in it. Jacob dedicated this altar to the honour of Ebelohe---Israel, God the God of Israel--as a God in covenant with him. God had called Jacob, Israel now he calls God, the God of Israel. Our honours become honours indeed to us, when we are acknowledged by Him to be His own.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

Internal Bathing's Rapid Growth

It is but natural to expect that a relief from Constipation and the many ills which it causes, which is so effectual and so natural as Internal Bathing, should quickly make many converts.

But its general use has increased so tremendously in the past few years, as to suggest other reasons, and these are found in the statement of users that they feel as if "made over new" the morning after an Internal Bath.

The elimination of the pernicious and poisonous waste which is ever present in the Lower Intestine gives Nature a chance to work unhampered. And one arises in the morning clear-headed, able, bright, confident and eager for the day's duties.

Mr. F. E. Smith writes:

"Dear Doctor,—Your 'Cascade' made a new man of me at the age of 49. I persuaded my wife to use the treatment also and to-day she has better health than ever before. Since the use of the 'Cascade' she sleeps better and can walk for hours without fatigue. Fainting spells have become a condition of the past; can eat anything on the bill of fare and drink all beverages. Does not take cold when exposed; hot weather does not cause oppression."

The "J.B.L. Cascade," the most efficient device for Internal Bathing, is being shown and explained in detail at the Warne Drug Company's store.

EDUCATIONAL BOYCOTT OF THE GERMANS

(By John Miller.)

LONDON, Oct. 20.—An educational boycott" will be clapped down upon Germany by the Allies assoon as peace comes. Several large educational institutions of England, it became known to-day, are already laying plans to compete actively with German universities and to break their monoply of education by attracting students from America and other parts of the world. The main drive of the British institutions is directed toward diverting the stream of American students from the Teuton schools into English schools. Already certain concessions to American students are announced. Both Oxford and Cambridge are making changes in their curricula with a view to attracting American scholars after the war. Oxford has decided to grant the Ph.D. degree, which has never before been conferred, for the special benefit of American citizens. In the days before the war thousands of American students flocked to the famous German universities. The astute German professors made it the "fashion" to be educated in Teuton schools. British scholastic authorities see an opportunity immediately after the war before hatred of Germany has cooled to capture that "trade."

PETERBORO' MEN FIND A GRIM RESPECT FOR THE NAME OF NEWHALL IN HABITAT OF NEW YORK CROOKS

A party of Peterborough men who recently visited New York made a sight-seeing tour of that district which is the resort of "gangsters," gunmen, pickpockets and those who ply other questionable professions outside the law. There are guides to conduct those visitors who are curious to see other phases of Manhattan life other than those in the environs of Broadway. Hence, following the custom, the local party got themselves a pilot who went the whole route with them and finally produced a book in which visitors registered their names.

Looking over the long list there were names of prominent Toronto men and others who were known to the men from Peterborough, but the latter declined to record their presence in this particular district.

"We get lots of Canadians through here," said the guide who evidenced a certain pride in his register.

"What town do you come from?" he asked tentatively.

Immediately the keeper of the visiting list manifested a new and plainly evident interest in his party.

"Peterborough," he said, as if he had made an important discovery or found long-lost friends. "that's the place where they have the bad police."

"Why that's where they arrested the pickpockets," he replied, and continued to retail the story of the trouble into which the three Boston sharps had fallen on Fair Day here, when they were arrested by the local police. He had all the facts as correctly as if he had been one of the gang. He mentioned Detective Newhall's name and stated that it was well known in that district. He also stated that the men had got out on bail, and had all the details just as they had occurred.

The incident naturally made a deep impression on the Peterborough party who, if they had any doubts about the fame of Detective Newhall, and the general opinion that crooks have of the local police force, returned home with a feeling of satisfaction and pride in the knowledge that this city has been placed on the blacklist of the New York "dips."

The citizens may not be aware of the desirable reputation Peterborough has gained among the smooth, light-fingered gentry who venture into the towns and cities of both Canada and the United States in search of fat wallets and easy money in any form they can get it, but Chief Thompson's men are fully cognizant of it. Some of the prisoners they have taken have said: "We were fools to come here. We were told to keep away, but took a chance and you got us."

Advises Consumers To Buy Potatoes At Present Prices

Food Controller's Attempts to Fix Price of $1.25 Had Effect Contrary to Expectations--Regulation Was Withdrawn and Market is Unrestricted

A number of citizens seem to be under the impression that Food Controller Hanna's premature announcement of a fixed price of $1.25 a bag on potatoes still obtains. They have even asked Chief Thompson why the police have not prevented the higher prices that are now ruling. One story reached the Chief that Lindsay's police had warned farmers that their price must not exceed $1.25 and had forbidden sales above that sum.

In reply to such enquiries it should be known that the Food Controller's maximum price was withdrawn when investigation showed that the cost of production was more than $1.25 a bag, and that it varied in different provinces. Hence, there are no price restrictions, and the police have no authority whatever to regulate the potato trade. No doubt, as a consumer, Chief Thompson would like to step in and order potatoes to be sold at $1.25 and other commodities at corresponding prices, but the police are in the same boat with the rest of the unprivileged citizens.

Fixed Price a Boomerang.

The Examiner recently learned that the Food Controller's attempt to fix the price of potatoes for the benefit of the consumer had, in effect, a directly opposite influence. When the maximum selling price of $1.25 was announced the whole salers in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, went into the market and bought all the potatoes they were enabled to purchase large the ywere enabled to purchase large quantities at a figure that was entirely favourable to them, and, with the increased holdings, they sat back until Mr. Hanna recalled his ultimatum, and immediately the market shot up under the temporary pressure of the potato interests. Such was the unpleasant boomerang of the Food Controller's well-intentioned essay into the field of price-fixing, and as the man on the street complains, every effort Mr. Hanna has made to ameliorate the high cost of living has resulted in higher prices. In this case, without fully considering the effects of his restriction on the selling price of potatoes, he played into the hands of the very interests from whom the people are demanding to be freed.

Market is Uncertain.

Advices from sources that may be trusted, state that the trend of the market is uncertain. Apparently the crop has been heavy, but it is significant that the big brokers and wholesalers are right in this district with orders that might be filled now but for the fact that farmers are too busy ploughing to both with small potatoes.

One informant said that the public would be well advised to purchase their requirements for winter at the current price

CAN YOU FEED MORE LIVE STOCK?

If So You Will Be Interested in Conditions Under Which Freight Charges Will Be Paid For You on Car Lots

The Ontario Department of Agriculture is anxious that the splendid crops harvested this fall should be used to the best advantage. In cases this can be done by feeding a few more head of cattle or sheep for breeding purposes. The Department therefore calls attention to the announcement of the Federal Minister of Agriculture, offering to pay freight shipments on car lots from Eastern stock yards to country points.

Please Note These Facts.

Individually or in co-operation with your neighbours you can purchase a carload of heifers or ewes, or both combined, and have them shipped from any Eastern stock yard to your station without any cost for freight charges. You will be required to make a declaration that the stock is for breeding purposes only.

Any farmer or drover can purchase a carload of cattle for feeding purposes on the Winnipeg market and have them shipped to any country point in Ontario upon payment of only one-half the usual freight charges.

Every effort should be made to bring the surplus stock of some sections to the surplus feed of others. All indications point to a steady demand for the meat supplies of this country for some time to come.—Sir William Hearst, Ontario Minister of Agriculture.

The District Representative will assist you in organizing a co-operative car for your district if desired, or in giving any other information.

F. C. McRae, Norwood,
District Representative for Peterboro.

A Pullman Conversation That Explains The Scarcity Of Coal

In Which it is Clearly Shown That Consumers Have Purchased Larger Supplies Than They Will Require This Winter—The Incident An Actual Occurrence

People are, just now, talking, reading, dreaming of coal. Those who have it are burning it with misgivings as to whether the supply in hand will last out the winter. No assurances, such as may be offered, even by those who should know the situation, are accepted. To have the coal in sight is the only thing.

Side by side with this uneasiness is the fact, now well beyond dispute, that the amount of coal in Canada, however, up to now distributed, is larger than at any time of the year, the fall of the year, than ever before. But the citizen is incredulous. And many remark, in the memorable words of the Ennismore man, "Who have it?"

Let us illustrate the asserted disappearance of the coal in the form of a true story, and one of recent origin. Of a recent Sunday morning five men were sitting in the smoking compartment of a Pullman, en route from Detroit to Buffalo. They passed on the way trains, freight trains, of which a fair proportion of the cars were loaded with coal.

"It seems to me," said one, "that with the amount of coal we see, and with what we have seen on tracks and storage, that all this scare of shortness of coal is pretty much bluff."

"Possibly it is," remarked another, "but I know I had to put up a pretty stiff fight to get what I wanted. I got it by sticking to it, and not from the man from whom I have bought for years."

"But what puzzles me," said the third man, "is where the mischief they are putting it. In my city there's little enough in sight. It isn't in the air, it is not thrown under water, and I am sure no one is hiding it in the earth. It beats me."

One of the five was a coal man, Importer and seller of coal, and a Canuck. In reply to a remark that the situation seemed to be one that was artificial, he defined the position as one that had been created. And with the consent and help of all who could take a hand. The idea was scouted. Then he fell to prove his assumption.

Questioned, the first man said he was from Cleveland. Burned in his home about fifteen tons in an average winter. "But I told my wife, when I left on my last trip, to put in, say, twenty tons, so as to have a little over for keeps."

Second man said he lived at Madison, Wis. "Think I used last winter about thirteen tons. Anyway I had sixteen put in, so as to make sure. Fellow wants to feel that the folks are all right."

Third man lived in Buffalo. "Got along," he said, "with seven tons, having a small place. Thought I'd get a couple of tons extra, so as to have enough. Last winter was a pretty hard one. We may have another the same, though what I put in lasted the winter, as it was."

The fourth man was from Romé, N.Y. Used, he said, usually ten tons, a part of it in the summer, wood being scarce. He secured thirteen tons for this winter, and though he did the right thing.

Then the coal man took a hand. "I said that the situation all over the continent was one created. It sure is. And you four men have been of those who have done the creating. Last winter was the coldest, by the records, that we have had in forty-six years. And yet you all pulled through on what you put in during the fall of 1916. No more, for you say that when the spring came you could not get it handy.

"Now you have serenely, all of you, created a situation, by each grabbing off the heap thirty per cent. more coal than you bought last year. Just to be safe. If we take the coal burning area of the continent, say north of the Potomac River, and West and East, and Canadian provinces as well, and something for the North-West, and the millions of householders trying to pack in a percentage more, and you find out where the coal has gone, and all this out of a natural increase, at the mines, of only 7 per cent. over 1916 production.

"More coal has been mined than ever in the history of the industry. More is being used. War operations and manufacturing has been a large factor, but the most serious of all has been the insistence of the householder to get and hold what he considers an ample supply for the winter. That's where the coal is. I am in the coal business and I know jolly well."

In that statement you have the crux of the situation. How is it in Peterborough? Go, if you like, to the Custom House. The story is written in the records, for coal is passed through Customs, not all of it for duty, but for record. The Government knows to a ton just what has been handled. Coal men have to give to the authorities an absolutely true statement of taking in and sales. We know how much we have brought to the city.

But, finally, in the words of the Ennismore man, as quoted above, "Who have it?"

ON FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE—Four German Zeppelins were destroyed or forced to land in various districts of France in the course of the air raid undertaken last night.

THE CASE IS STILL PROCEEDING

The case involving the bailiff's use of an automobile while under seizure, which was opened yesterday morning in the County Court before His Honour Judge Huycke, was still being heard this afternoon. The Dominion Register Company of Toronto, authorized the seizure, and H. Laplante, bailiff, put the authority into effect. The owner of the car claims that the machine was used and severely damaged by the bailiff while it was under seizure.

Mr. Doble, who was recalled this afternoon by Mr. Guise Bagley, denied saying that he "would get Laplante for a dirty trick." He also denied giving Laplante permission to run the car while it was under seizure. Laplante, in his evidence, this morning, asserted that Doble deliberately and intentionally ran the car into the ditch while returning from Sunderland to Peterborough. This the plaintiff denied.

The case is proceeding.

SIR JOSEPH FLAVELLE ON STAND

(Canadian Press Despatch).

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—The bacon probe took on renewed interest to-day when Sir Joseph Flavelle, baronet, president of the Wm. Davies Company and chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board, was called to the witness-box by his own counsel. Several special stenographers were in court on behalf of the company to take his evidence. Sir Joseph stated that since the war began he had taken a gradually declining interest in the affairs of the company. After going to Ottawa on the Imperial Munitions Board the harassing duties of that office had caused him to almost completely disassociate himself with the affairs of the company.

Sir Joseph Flavelle explained his famous statement, "To hell with the profits." He said that it was made at a time when the Canadian manufacturers were hesitating to spend the necessary money to carry out munition contracts. His exact words were, he said—he had then just returned from the front—"If it is profits in relation to what I have seen, then your profits ought to go to the hell to which they belong." Sir Joseph said that this statement was not intended to have any application to the William Davis Co.

MEAT PACKERS LOOKING FOR A BIG PORK DROP

Economy of the People Has Aided, Says Cudahy—$10 Hogs Soon.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—At a meeting of the American Meat Packers' Association here there were expressions of opinion that meat may be cheaper before many weeks. Patrick Cudahy, of Milwaukee, said: "There is just as much meat and more lard in this country than a year ago. I believe hogs will sell at $10 per hundred this winter, probably during February and March. They are now $18.65 for top grades. A factor which will tend to lower pork prices is the economy being practised. Economy is a wonderful factor—it makes a long crop of a short one."

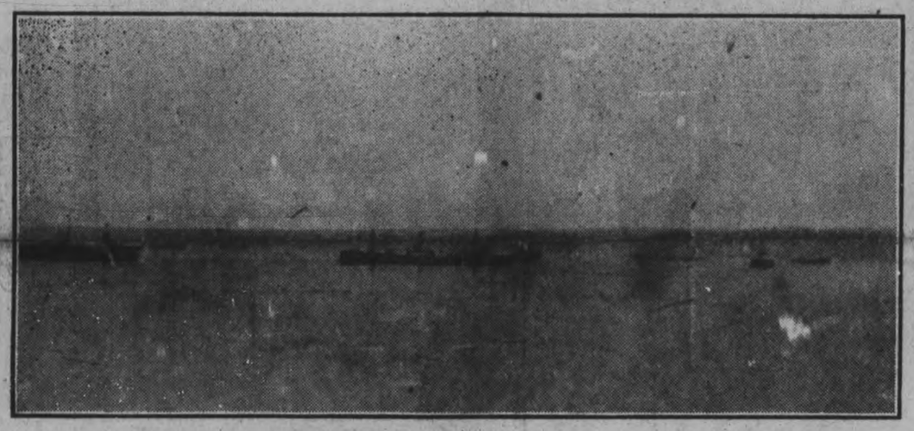
When on board ship, troops gather together in groups and chat. Life is not quite so monotonous as it might seem.



Interned shipping in a harbor along the route. These ships are having a long rest, and their crews are certainly not participating in the gear war.

Holding back the revolting Russians. Troops drawn up to keep back fleeing Russians, during the recent reverses. In some cases the soldiers become panic-stricken.

These French artillerymen on the firing line are ready for action, equipped with gas masks and eager for the next shot. The soldier on the right has both hands on the shell ready to insert it. The other holds the lock-door and awaits the signal for direction. It is a most unusual picture taken during a recent battle.

UNITED KIRKLAND GOLD MINES

Within the past four years—since the Wright-Hargraves was discovered—the Kirkland Lake gold camp has consistently made progress, developed one dividend-payer, and is now attracting more new money into the ground than any other camp in the north.

I recommend the purchase of United Kirkland stock at 30c prior to listing on the Toronto and New York stock markets. I expect to see the stock sell at much higher figures when open markets prevail.

The head of United Kirkland Mines is Mr. R. T. Shillington, one of the best known mining men in the north, than whom there is no man better identified with Kirkland Lake during its entire history. Mr. Shillington has one of the largest followings of any mining man who thoroughly understands the opening up and development of a property. Mr. Shillington has made his money out of mining—out of the ground. He and his associates have acquired more territory in the Kirkland Lake camp than any other group of capital, and they were among the first to see the remarkable trend of the camp.

United Kirkland has 2,000,000 shares, half of which are reserved for treasury account. Stock is $1 par. Present offering price is 30c. Properties consist of about 140 acres lying along the contact vein system which has made Kirkland Lake the surest, safest and sanest mining camp in the north.

Reservations of United Kirkland stock should be made by mail, or preferably by wire at my expense, letting remittance follow by check, draft or money order.

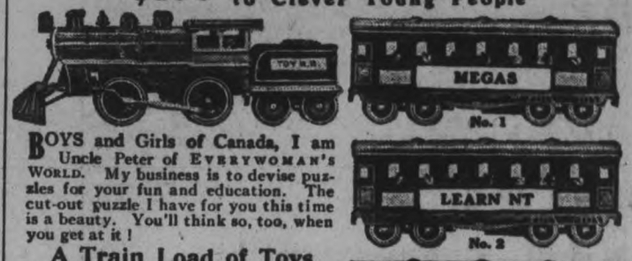
Christmas Cut-Out Puzzle

$100 in Cash Prizes to be awarded to Clever Young People



BOYS and Girls of Canada, I am Uncle Peter of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD. My business is to devise puzzles for your fun and education. The cut-out puzzle I have for you this time is a beauty. You'll think so, too, when you get at it!

A Train Load of Toys

SANTA CLAUS has a train load of toys for you this Christmas; Every car contains one kind of toy, and the name is on each car, but the man who painted the name on each car got the letters all jumbled. Worse still, the man who coupled the cars got them in the wrong order!

Now I want you to straighten things out for Santa Claus! I want you to re-arrange the letters forming the name of the toys in each car and to put the cars in their right order behind the locomotive. I want you to cut out each car, solve the puzzle of the name on each car, and then arrange the cars in their right order. Then I want you to take pen and ink and a piece of paper, and give me your solution.

How to Solve this Puzzle

I'LL give you a little start. Car No. 6, "DOES ILL," contains "Dollies." The other cars may contain gloves, candy, baseballs, animals, bicycles, building blocks, skipping ropes, nine pins, engines, skates, Noah's Ark, perfume, lanterns, tools, footballs or something else. It is for you to find out!

And here is something to help you get the cars in their right order behind the locomotive: the first letter of the name of each Christmas present in the cars, when these first letters are all put together, will spell out the name of a great Nation in Europe—one of the Allies; a nation whose navy controls the oceans.

Now it is for you to solve the Puzzle!

You must be Clever to Win!

NOW, Boys and Girls, see if you can solve my puzzle. If you can, and will observe the simple conditions carefully, you may win one of these Fifty-three Cash Prizes:

$25.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl who sends us the best reply.

$15.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the second best reply.

$10.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the third best reply.

DOLLAR BILLS. Fifty bright, new, crisp $1.00 bills to the fifty next Boys and Girls with the 50 next best replies.

TO qualify your entry for these prizes, I want you to perform a very small and pleasant service for me—Show a copy of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD to just two friends, and get them to know and want this great Canadian monthly magazine for Canadian women.

I'll send you a copy of the latest issue of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, post free, on receipt of your entry. Your mother or big sister, or aunt, or cousin, or neighbor will count as one of the two friends to whom I want you to show EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, and that will leave just one other friend!

NOTE.—If you would like to have this train of cars in colors, and of larger size, on fine white paper, as printed in EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, send a 3c. postage stamp to me to pay postage for mailing it when you are sending your solution to the puzzle, and I shall tell you at the same time how you may win a Shetland Pony and Cart, or a bicycle, or other fine prizes in a pleasant contest more interesting than this one.

Begin This Very Evening!

BEGIN this very evening! It may take you many evenings—it depends on how clever you are! There are fifty-three cash prizes; and in addition I have other fine rewards for every boy and girl who qualifies his or her entry in this fascinating competition. Write me personally, and I'll tell you about them. Wouldn't you like $25.00 cash? Wouldn't you like a Shetland Pony? or a bicycle? These fine prizes will go to my young friends—and I'd like you to get the best of them.

Address your entry as follows:
Uncle Peter, c/o Everywoman's World, 351 Continental Building, Toronto.

CHIEF DAN WHETUNG MAKES ABLE REPLY

Editor, Daily News:

In your issue of October 9th, Mr. Lucius F. Hardyman has written a letter, in which he says he noticed that the Indians of Ontario, at their annual conference, discussed the question of getting the privilege of a vote, and he further stated that he thought it should be provided that in order to get a vote that the Indians should be able to converse intelligently in the English tongue and read and write.

I am the chief of the Chippawa tribe at the Chemong Reserve, near Peterborough. We have a first-class brick school upon the Reserve as good as can be found in any section of this county and better than in a good many sections, and in addition to that every child in the reserve is attending school, and is receiving the same education and training that children receive in the public schools of this Province. I do not think there is a single man or woman or a child above the age of six years who cannot read and write. We have a large number of daily papers coming to the different Indians on the reserve. There are pianos, organs, gramophones, and a large number of books, as the Indians of my tribe are persistent readers.

They are prosperous, dress well, and in their dealings are as honourable and fair as any of their neighbours off the reserve.

It seems to me that it is hardship to the Indian that Italians, Poles, and other foreigners may be naturalized and given a vote, and some of them can neither read nor write, while the Indians, doing what they have in military duty, are still prevented from exercising their franchise.

I would appreciate if you would give this letter the same publicity that you did to the letter of Mr. Hardyman.

I attach a letter written by His Worship Mayor Duffus to me, which shows Mr. Duffus' opinion as to whether our tribe is entitled to the franchise or not.

Curve Lake, Oct. 18.

This is the letter from Mayor Duffus:

Chief Whetung,

Curve Lake P.O., Ont.

My Dear Chief,—I have read with a great deal of interest the report of your conference, and particularly that part with reference to the Indians not having the franchise, and it gives me very much pleasure to offer you my services in assisting you in any way I possibly can towards securing the franchise for yourself and friends.

I assure you I have no hesitation in stating that I am most emphatic in the belief that you are fully entitled.

Trusting I may be of some use to you, I am, yours sincerely,

JOS. J. DUFFUS, Mayor.

Peterborough, Oct. 18, 1917.

PROVINCIAL ESTIMATE OF GRAIN CROP YIELDS THROUGHOUT THE DOMINION

Yields in Some Cases Are Lower Than Those Reported at the End of August—Quality of the Grain Crops—Condition of Root and Fodder Crops.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The Census and Statistics Office have published the second or provisional estimate of the yield of the principal grain crops of Canada in 1917, a statement of the quality of these crops at the time of harvesting and the condition of root crops on September 30. The report is compiled from the returns of crop correspondents made at the end of September.

Yield of Principal Grain Crops.

The estimates of the yield per acre of wheat, oats, barely and flax are somewhat lower than those reported at the end of August, and the reduction applies to all the provinces. The later returns being based to a larger extent upon threshing results appear to indicate that the first estimates, based upon the appearance of the crops in the field, were too high. The total yield of wheat for Canada is now provisionally estimated at 231,730,200 bushels, the average yield per acre being 15 3-4 bushels, as compared with 16 3-4 bushels reported a month ago and with 17 bushels the yield of 1916. Of oats the total yield is 393,570,000 bushels, as compared with 410,211,000 bushels in 1916, the average yield per acre being 29 1-2 bushels in 1917 as compared with 37.30 bushels in 1916. Barley yields 51,684,000 bushels, as compared with 42,770,000 bushels in 1916, the average per acre being 21 1-2 bushels as compared with 23.72 bushels in 1916. The yield of rye is 4,239,800 bushels, which is slightly more than the quantity returned a month ago, the yield per acre is 20 bushels as against 19.3 bushels in 1916. or the three prairie provinces the yields are as follows: Wheat 209,794,200 bushels, oats 237,925,000, rye 2,534,000 bushels, barely 36,727,000 bushels, flaxseed 6,747,000 bushels. The total yields of the remaining grain crops, now reported for the first time this year, are as follows: Peas 2,786,600 bushels from 151,030 acres, an average of 18 1-2 bushels per acre; beans 635,700 bushels from 43,000 acres, average 14 3-4 bushels per acre; buckwheat 7,189,600 bushels from 336,400 acres, or 12 1-4 bushels per acre; mixed grains 15,741,000 bushels from 469,140 acres, 33 1-2 bushels per acre and corn for husking 6,198,300 bushels from 173,600 acres, an average of 35 3-4 bushels per acre.

Quality of Grain Crops.

Correspondents were asked to report on the quality of the grain crops at the time of harvest, as measured against a standard of 100, representing grain well headed, well filled, well saved and unaffected to any appreciable extent by frost, rust, smut, etc. The average results for the whole of Canada are as follows: Fall wheat 76, spring wheat 72, all wheat 73, oats 74, barely 75, rye 79, peas 69, beans 71, buckwheat 63, mixed grains 79, flax 67, corn for husking 67. The figures are generally high for Ontario, wheat being 80, oats 92 and barley 89. In Quebec wheat is 67 and oats are 74. In the Prairie Provinces wheat is 75, in Manitoba, 70 in Saskatchewan and 75 in Alberta. Oats are 62 in Manitoba, 57 in Saskatchewan and 56 in Alberta.

Condition of Root and Fodder Crops.

The condition of root and fodder crops, measured against a standard of 100 as representing a full crop, was, on September 30 as follows: Potatoes 64, turnips 72, mangolds, carrots, etc., 77, sugar beets 76, corn for fodder 72 and alfalfa 81. The condition of the potato crop by provinces was on September 30 as follows: Prince Edward Island 81, Nova Scotia 77, New Brunswick 57, Quebec 47, Ontario 81, Manitoba 69, Saskatchewan 71, Alberta 89, and British Columbia 70.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANTHONY HUNTER.

The news of the sudden death of Mrs. Anthony Hunter, at Elm Grove stock farm, North Monaghan, on Saturday, will be heard with sorrow by a large community that has known her for so many years.

Mrs. Hunter has not been in the best of health for some months past, being affected with trouble of the heart. On Saturday morning she was moving about the house as usual, till nine o'clock. Being missed at the dinner hour, and search being made, she was found in her room lifeless in bed.

Sarah Ward Hunter, who was seventy-four years of age, was born in the township of Cavan, where she was united in marriage to the late Anthony Hunter, who predeceased her seventeen years ago. They came to reside in North Monaghan thirty-five years ago, on the farm where both spent the rest of their lives. Mrs. Hunter was a Presbyterian in religion, a most regular attendant of the Springville church, and she took a deep interest in its welfare. She was held in the highest respect in the neighbourhood, though her chief interest and her chief activitly centred in her household, where she was in a very effective sense, a home maker. She leaves behind her to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother, two sons, ex-Reeve Thomas M. Hunter, and Albert J. Hunter.

Funeral on Tuesday, October 23rd, 1917, from the family residence, 11th concession, North Monaghan, at one o'clock p.m. Friends are requested to omit flowers.

THE PUMPKINS WERE RETURNED

Some days ago the theft of an automobile load of pumpkins was reported to the police. The owner of the pumpkins was fortunate in that he secured the number of the car. Armed with this means of identification the victim of the theft went to the Police Station for the purpose of securing the name of the owner. He was referred to Mr. William Lytle, issuer of automobile licenses, where he learned that the owner of the car was a Peterborough grocer. He then called up the offender and ventured some remarks concerning the loss of the pie material. A night or two following this conversation the pumpkins were returned to the yard of the owner by the same means that were used to take them away.

BOOTS FOR RUSSIA.

These contracts, with those placed by the War Department for the American armies, make the enormous total of 88,400,000 pairs of footwear which have been placed within the past week.

WONDERFUL TALE OF AN ACTRESS

Struggled with Sickness and Discouragement; How Relieved.

Dayville, Killingly, Conn.—"I shall be glad to have every woman know what I know now, after using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Although I am only 24 years old, I have suffered for the past eight years. I hated the doctors, for a doctor told me to give up the stage where I was playing with my husband.

I had bearing down pains, my health failed me, and I could not work on the stage, and wasn't able to tend my baby or even get around myself. I was always downhearted and discontented with the world, and only lived for the sake of my little girl. The doctor said to move to some quiet little town away from the noisy city, and I might be able to live and feel well, so I went to Dayville in November. At that time I was so sick I could not walk around, and my husband kept house and I stayed in bed. One day in January I read your advertisement in a newspaper, and I sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and started taking it. Within two weeks time I was a different woman, could get around, and felt so good that it was a pleasure to do my housework. I felt contented and happy, and now am the picture of health, and am tempted to return to the stage. We appreciate my health as the most precious thing on earth."—Mrs. H. L. KLEMETT, Box 35, Killingly, Conn.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER X.

The great chest in the corner of the outer room, with its red velvet covering, its straps of brass, had belonged to Ramona's mother. When The Dio del Oro was sunk, Ormiston had had it taken aboard his boat. Its contents, a few bits of jewelry, some costly dresses with which Ramona had designed to charm the gallants of her father's little court, had proved disappointing booty, but the chest had been retained. Ormiston had felt at least that consideration for his lovely captive.

She went over to it, and softly raised the lid. She knew that in her flight with Barton she could take with her only such things as they could conveniently carry. The bulk of her belongings she would perforce have to leave behind. In some way she would be obliged to explain this to him, for he would doubtless think it strange that she should be willing to abandon all the many costly things with which she was surrounded. Some tale must be invented, having to do with a sale of her effects to be arranged by a supposed agent, who would account to her later. How she hated the lies that the circumstances seemed to demand, hated herself, in fact, for telling them. If she could but once free herself from the coil of intrigue that surrounded her, Barton should have no cause to complain; she would be truthfulness itself.

Lucia came in to put an end to her self-accusations.

"Help me pack," she told the girl.

"Pack, mistress?" The mulatto's eyes grew wide with surprise.

"Yes. I am going away."

"Where? I—I do not understand."

"What does it matter? To life, to love, to happiness."

"But, mistress—the Firebrand!" The girl gazed at her aghast.

"I shall be far away when he returns. Come, we have no time to waste," Ramona admonished her, and began to take dress after dress from the chest.

Lucia, seeing what she was about, began to cry, very softly. She had a deep affection for her mistress. The thought of her going away seemed unsupportable.

"Nay, Lucia, do not weep," the latter said, patting the girl's arm. "Come; help me make myself ready. If you are a good girl, I may take you with me." She tossed one of the bright-coloured dresses into the mulatto's arms. "Here is a present for you," she said.

"For me," she cried. "Oh — thank you, mistress." She held the dress before her, admiring it.

"Come—help me to choose," Ramona went on. "I can take but a little bundle. Where is my green satin? And the yellow and red? We must see which is the best. Must I not make myself beautiful for my fairy prince—my husband?"

"Your husband!" The girl gazed at her in wonder.

"Surely. Did you not know? The Puritan marries with me to-day. Make haste, Lucia. This is a pretty one, is it not" She held up a gown of pale green satin, once part of the wardrobe of a Spanish lady of quality. "Nice and plain, do you not think? Yes, Lucia. I will take it. And this one." She drew from the chest a robe of sheerest China silk, heavily embroidered with gold. "Ah—no—it would not do. They say it is very cold, in that country. I should freeze myself." She tossed the dress to the maid. "You may have it, Lucia."

"Do you think he will like it?" she asked the girl, then threw it aside.

"No—it is red. The Puritans do not like red. They think it a wicked colour. You see, Lucia, they are a very funny people. That a colour should be wicked! Is is not droll?"

"This one"—she drew forth another—"no, it is too worn. I'll take nothing that is not fresh and new. And, Lucia, you must pack my little ivory chest, and put in all my jewels and laces. This is pretty, is it not? Green and silver." For a moment she gazed at the shimmering bit of finery, then tumbled the whole mass back into the chest. A sigh came from her lips. "Am I not a fool?" she whispered. "He does not want all these things. Only me—only me. You may have them every one, Lucia. I'll take nothing with me—nothing, that has to do with the past. Dios—far better to forget. Take everything, girl. It is all yours."

"Truly?" The mulatto's eyes bulged with astonishment.

"Everything. I give everything to you. I am free—free. I shall wear a plain white dress"—she took a simple gown of muslin from the chest—"this one, so sweet, so clean. I shall go to him free of all the past, Lucia. I want nothing from it, nothing. Go quickly, girl, and see if he is sleeping, and if so, send Pedro to me. Make no noise, or you shall have nothing at all."

Lucia drew aside the grass-cloth curtain and peeped in. Barton lay sound asleep upon the bed, with the hunchback on guard beside him. She beckoned to the boy, and he came noiselessly out.

"Pedro," said his mistress, "go quickly to the town. A ship is coming in. Find out whether it is that of the young Puritan. Bring me word, as soon as may be. And Pedro, see what vessels are sailing to-day or to-morrow, and whether passage may be had on them. Make haste. I await your return."

The boy nodded and went out. Ramona crept into the adjoining room and sat beside Barton's bed. The heat of the forenoon was beginning to be felt, although the interior of the house was still comparatively cool. She took up the dried palm leaf that the hunchback had been using, and fanned the sleeping man with it.

He lay very still, a smile of happiness parting his lips. The efforts of the morning had tired him; he slept soundly. For hours Ramona sat watching him, her heart filled with a great peace. It seemed so wonderful, to be happy, after all these years of suffering.

It was early afternoon when the hunchback returned, and Barton still slept. The boy brought news that caused Ramona to tremble with both happiness and fear. The new arrival was a Dutch merchantman, bound for New Amsterdam. She had been driven far out of her course, and had put in for stores and water. It was expected that she would resume her voyage at noon of the following day. Pedro had spoken with her certain. He was quite ready to take passengers, if he were well paid for it. This much made the girl very joyous indeed. It was the second part of the boy's story that terrified her. The Dutchman had fallen in with Morgan's fleet in the Windward Passage. They had captured seven Spanish vessels, and were engaged in transferring their cargoes and scuttling them when the merchantman passed. Morgan himself had hailed her, and sent word of his speedy return to Port Royal with a fabulous amount of treasure. The news had already spread throughout the town, and the tavern keepers, the women of the streets, the traders, who dealt in captured goods, were all moistening their lips in anticipation of a rich feast.

Shortly after the hunchback's return, Barton awoke, very much refreshed. He found Ramona bending over him, ready with milk, fruit and broth to minister to his growing appetite.

She told him what news Pedro had brought concerning the vessel they had sighted; of the expected return of the buccaneers she said nothing. If they could get away on the morrow, there was no need for him to know.

"Let us take passage on the ship to New Amsterdam," she said. She did not know where New Amsterdam was, but that mattered little. At least it was somewhere in Barton's country. "I do not want to wait longer. We will set out in the morning."

No suspicions of her reason for haste entered his mind. He loved her, trusted her too greatly for that. He held out his hand, a profound happiness glowing in his eyes.

"It shall be as you say, sweet," he told her. "Perhaps my comrades may not come back, after all. We can leave a message, in case they do, telling them that I am safe and well again. But can you be ready so soon?"

"I am ready now, John," she replied, with little blushes of confusion. "The things here that belong to me will be cared for my those that I can trust. I would come to you very simply, as befits the bride of a Puritan." She grew very red as she spoke the unaccustomed word, and Barton, his thoughts on their approaching marriage, questioned her no further.

They spent the evening together in the garden. It was Barton's first expedition into the open since the night he had received his wound. With some small assistance from the hunchback, he made his way to the hammock, and lay there, while Ramona played and sang to him, songs of her native Seville, love songs, that she had well-nigh forgotten.

They did not say much to each other. The night was very warm, very languorous, with the scent of flowers heavy about them. There was no moon, but the stars shone with a brilliance strange to Barton's eyes, accustomed as he was to the more sparsely jeweled heavens of the north. A roar of distant surf came to them from the foot of the hill. It soothed Barton's mending nerves, as did the tinkling notes of the guitar, the tender cadences of Ramona's voice. Everything combined to make perfect this first night of their love.

When at last she put aside her guitar, and sat in the hammock beside him, the cup of his happiness seemed filled. He held her within his arms, at their pressure she seemed to melt into his being; their kisses lost perhaps some of the austerity with which Barton, in his first realization of her love, had invested them. Youth, demanding full tribute to passion, spoke through their straining lips. They felt the message he brought, and longed for the coming day.

Barton told her of his plans. They were to set out for the town at daybreak. Should other means fail, the captain of the Dutch ship should marry them. Ramona, eager only to get away from Port Royal and all that it meant to her, acquiesced in all he said. For her, she knew, the coming night would be all too long. She prayed that Ormiston would remain away another twenty-four hours.

After a time Barton became sleepy. He laughed at it, but Ramona packed him off to bed.

"You will need all your strength for the morrow," she told him. "Do as I bid you, John." She spoke playfully enough, with her hand in his. "After to-morrow, as you well know, I shall have to obey you in all things."

"Good-night, beloved," he said, straining her to him. "May the day, and all the days to come, bring you only happiness."

"Amen," she whispered, her voice very full of tears.

When she threw herself upon the couch in the outer room, she found herself for a long time unable to sleep. A presentiment of evil grew within her, as the hours dragged out their leaden course. The night was half gone before she slept.

It seemed but a moment later, when a soft knocking at the door aroused her. In dreadful fear she rose, and throwing about her the scarlet cloak, called to Pedro.

The boy had also heard the sound, and crouched before the curtain, knife in hand. She bade him unbar the door.

He did so. Lucia, limp and trembling, staggered across the threshold.

At first the girl could scarcely speak, so frozen were her lips with fear. Ramona shook her fiercely by the shoulder.

"What is it?" she demanded.

"Madre de Dios! Someone is coming up the hill."

"Who, fool?" Ramona cried. "Answer me!"

"I am not sure. He was singing. It sounded like the voice of the Portugee."

We Can Help You Stimulate Business

A little stimulation in Midsummer may put you back in the running again, and even yet, if you concentrate your efforts, use liberally the means that have made others prosper in your line of business you can succeed as they did.

Some Merchants Say:—

"As Soon as Business Picks Up I'll Advertise"

This is not consistent. The farmer does not wait until harvest time to sow his seed—and, remember this, that if you ever reach the point in business where you believe you can get along without advertising, somebody else will own your business. ¶ It isn't the age of a house that counts most. It's the efficient, up-to-date, daily publicity that brings its goods before the buyers that spells SUCCESS.

Carter's Iron Pills will help this condition.

Why this highly nourishing Food is so Inexpensive

THE most economical food is that which gives most body-building nutriment for every cent you pay. Foods refined by costly processes are really the most expensive because they lose so much of their essential dark parts containing the body-building protein and saline elements.

Dr. Jackson's

is an inexpensive food because it is so rich in these precious body-building elements. It is actually a better tissue builder than meat. It costs no more than wheat or oats used alone, yet it is so much more nourishing! Besides, it prevents indigestion and relieves constipation without the use of costly drugs, or we return your money.

Roman Meal is composed of entire berries of wheat and rye with flaxseed and bran. The flaxseed is rendered absolutely tasteless and odorless by electricity.

It is the dark parts of grains that contain the body-building elements and health preservers. The white parts are mostly starches which cannot possibly build up tissue. Any food that is deficient in body nutriment is dear at any price, especially if it gets you into trouble. When the bowel muscles do not act, due to impoverished food, which is also lacking in waste, you have constipation. Roman Meal is a fully balanced ration, highly nutritious and having the correct amount of waste. It incites the digestive tract to full natural action and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor.

Roman Meal makes the most delicious porridge when you follow directions and do not stir it while cooking. Never stir it except while mixing meal and water or you positively spoil the porridge. Stirring while cooking destroys the granular form and restores the taste of flax which Dr. Jackson removed by electricity.

Roman Meal also makes splendid bread, pancakes, muffins, cakes, etc.—all kinds of delicious baked products. At all grocers.

Don't Stir.

HOME INTERESTS

The Family in War Time

"SHOULDERING a gun or making bandages isn't the only way of being patriotic," observed Aunt Jane. "Some folks are not fitted for either of those occupations. But they can be patriotic just the same.

"True patriotism consists in aiding your country, and every housewife can be of inestimable use just now in learning something about economy in the food line.

"It's a great thing to have a big army in the field and a brave navy on the sea, but it won't do to have famine over the land at the same time. It's up to us home staying folks to look to our food supply, and look right sharp.

"One of the most useful ways of being patriotic just now is to give up extravagant foods and get back to the simple life. We might as well learn to cut down on our supply of meats and high priced vegetables now as later.

"It's a great chance for us to learn something about sea foods, which nature grows for us free of charge on grounds which don't need to be cultivated, ploughed or seeded.

Give Up Extravagant Food.

"The more fish we eat and the less of other things the more we aid our country just now. First of all, we will be learning the sadly needed lesson of economy. And, again, we will be taking nothing from the soil or our other resources. We needs not worry how much onions are selling at, or how much larger the hole in the doughnut has grown or that frankfurters have become as expensive as a pedigreed dachshund.

"Eat fish and lots of it. The good Lord made the finny tribes for just such a time as this.

"Did you ever notice the way the average woman buys? It shows a woful lack of economic instinct. If she's buying meat or vegetables she always asks the price of such meat a pound, or of such a vegetable a quart or peck. But when it comes to fish she just says, offhand, 'Give me a haddock,' or, 'Three pounds of cod.'

"Now, strange as it may seem to any one who hasn't given it a thought, different kinds of fish are sold at different prices. Sometimes one variety costs considerably more or less than other varieties. The patriotic housewife will watch the fish market as closely as she follows the meat or vegetable market, and buy accordingly.

Advantages of Fish.

"Another thing many women don't seem to realize is that small fish are just as good as and sometimes a bit better than the big ones. And, as there are more of 'em caught, they are apt to be cheaper in price. Steak or large cod, for example, always cost more a pound than market cod. One of the handiest of fishes is the scrod, which is nothing more or less than a cod or haddock just big enough for a family of two or three.

"The careful buyer will see that the eyes of the fish are bright and the gills red. These are signs of freshness. Also she will not attempt to buy migratory fishes out of season.

"If she is experienced she will not turn up her nose at fish from the freezer either, for such fish, frozen into an airtight envelope of ice, soon after being caught, are just as healthful and palatable as the freshly caught article.

"One of the chief advantages of fish is that practically any kind of vegetable goes with any kind of fish. Rice, strongly urged as a substitute for the expensive potato, for example, goes nicely with any variety of fish, whether it be a shad, a mackerel, a cod or a lowly but delicious herring. Carrots, turnips and even cabbage can be served with fish.

"Another point about fish is that although it can be served with elaborate and expensive sauces there is no variety which cannot be served plain, and consequently most economically. A slice of lemon makes a fine garnish for any kind of broiled fish. Boiled and fried fish, especially if bacon drippings are used for frying, are sufficient unto themselves.

"While a pound of broiled or fried fish surrounded by some freshly cooked rice makes a respectable looking meal, a pound of beefsteak with the same trimming does not. And think of the difference in the cost?"

What Every Girl Should Know

A GROUP of women seated about a tea table recently were relating experiences and, as women will, drifted into personal reminiscences.

After listening to a number of the stories an older woman, with hair softly graying and a face in which time had chiseled much of the beauty of living, quietly said:—

"It is a strange thing, but I have lived here for nearly twenty years and never yet have I had an adventure such as you girls relate. Never, in all my experience, has a strange man deliberately spoken to me on the street, nor have I ever received any impertinence from men in public at any time in my life that I can recall."

Cheap Admiration.

"Don't tell that," said one of the young girls in the company, "for no one would believe it, and if they did most certainly would not consider it a compliment to your charms."

The woman's face flushed slightly and she made no reply. But she had told the truth.

Never had she met with what so many women choose to term adventures, those escapades which are harmless in themselves, but which tend so inevitably to break down the barriers of reticence and pride, without which woman must lose much of her charm.

In her youth she had wealth, beauty and position, so what was it that she lacked that precluded the attentions that the other women in her circle boasted?

It was nothing that she lacked. It was what she possessed. She did not seek to attract. She did not wish to attract. Her life had been filled with real things, with true adoration, with sincere love, with deep devotion from many.

There was nothing in that beautiful nature that sought the light admiration of the many, that desired to attract the adventurer.

For, say what we may, the woman who attracts a man lightly has something in her that responds to that lightness.

Instinctively a man knows when he must be circumspect in his glance as well as his actions. And in spite of the fact that so many girls are proud of it, it is no compliment to them to meet with adventurers at each turn of the road, for sooner or later it cheapens them, no matter whom they may be.

Do you hold yourself high or cheap? It is the woman who values her own worth whose worth others value.

It has been said frequently that it is the woman who is easily won who is sought after. But it is these women, too, times without number, who make unhappy marriages.

It is not at all necessary to be prudish. Nothing is more disagreeable than a prudish attitude.

But there is a difference between friendliness properly expressed and impudence boldly asserted. And every woman should guard against the latter for the sake of her own self-respect.

Preserving Winter Relishes

MANY appetizing winter relishes can be concocted out of what used to be termed of no account and cast aside in our careless day. Even unripened fruit may be pickled separately in brine or in vinegar or combined with other fruit and made into chow chow, catsup &c.

Blackberry Catsup.

This catsup is very good with cold ham, pork or poultry. Six quarts of blackberries, one pint of water. Cook the berries until soft, then rub through a fine sieve and add one pint of vinegar, one pound of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one tablespoonful of mustard, one tablespoonful of ginger, one tablespoonful of nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls of salt, one-half tablespoonful of pepper. Cook until thick, stirring continually. Bottle while hot, pouring one-half teaspoonful of salad oil into each bottle. Seal and dip the top of the bottle in melted sealing wax.

Preserved Watermelon Rind.

Cut one pound of watermelon rind into one inch squares. Remove the peel and all the pink heart. Soak overnight in limewater (one ounce of limewater to two quarts of water). The following morning let stand for two hours in clear water, then drain well and boil rapidly for fifteen minutes in strong ginger tea (one ounce of ginger to one quart of water).

Finish cooking in a thirty degree syrup made by using one pint of strained ginger tea, one quart of water and a pound and a half of sugar. Cook rapidly until tender and transparent (for about two hours). After the rind has boiled for half an hour add half a lemon, cut into thin slices. Pack and proceed as with preserves.

Chili Sauce.

Scald and peel twenty-four ripe tomatoes; chop these up with two red bullnose peppers, two green bullnose peppers and two large onions. Put into an enamelled saucepan and add the following:—

Four cupfuls of vinegar.
One and a half cupfuls of brown sugar.
Two tablespoonfuls of salt.
Two teaspoonfuls of whole allspice.
Two teaspoonfuls of whole cloves.
Two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon.
Two teaspoonfuls of ground ginger.
Two teaspoonfuls of ground nutmeg.

Cook until the sauce begins to thicken and the onions are well done; this should not take over an hour. Remove the vessel from the stove. Put the chili sauce into jars and seal while hot. This will keep in a wide mouthed bottle if it is well corked and dipped in paraffin.

Tomato Chutney.

One peck of red tomatoes.
One quarter of a peck of onions.
One-quarter of a peck of apples, chopped.
One tablespoonful of salt.
One pound of seeded raisins.
One and a half ounces of whole ginger.
Twelve ounces of brown sugar.
Eighteen to twenty-two capsicums, as preferred.

Skin the tomatoes, peel the onions and pare the apples; cut all into fine pieces and mix with the other ingredients. Boil all together for half an hour. Add one quart of vinegar; boil for ten minutes longer, then put into jars and seal

A Woman's Impression of the "Gallery on the Moors"

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM E. ATWOOD'S GALLERY.

By GUSTAV KOBBE.

NEW YORK, Saturday.

WITH a dash back to the city Miss Jane Peterson brought her tour to California and return to a close, only to dash off again to East Gloucester, Mass., where there is a large summer and autumn art colony. An exhibition is being held there in the Gallery on the Moors, which belongs to Mr. and Mrs. William E. Atwood.

"If ever two people were disinterestedly kind and generous," said Miss Peterson, pausing long enough between dashes, "these two are Emeline and 'Billy' Atwood, of Gloucester, Mass., who have just opened their 'Gallery on the Moors' to the public for the second annual exhibition of paintings by Gloucester artists. They are dear, good, old friends of mine, and when I arrived in Gloucester from my California trip I hastened over to say 'Hello!' and 'How do you do?' and found them knee deep in the midst of pictures, envelopes, cards and blue books. From this chaos soon developed an exhibition of the most recent things done by artists on the north shore. Beautifully embossed cards already were winging their way to make happy the hearts of the fashionable summer colony.

"'How did you happen to conceive this original, brilliant and generous idea of being the fairy godparents to the lucky artists and at the same time give such a fine treat to the deserving rich?' I asked.

"Mrs. Atwood answered. 'It was like this,' she said. 'One day we were motoring through Gloucester and, always interested in art, were going from studio to studio to see what the artists were doing and to purchase some pictures for our home on Chebacco Island. We found many of the artists tucked away in dark little lofts, chicken coops, stables, tiny rooms, poorly lighted and unattractive makeshift places such as one might find in an old time fishing village—little spaces that had been discarded by the fishermen. We were inconvenienced by the difficulty of seeing the pictures and thought others might be. We felt in this active summer colony there might be many like ourselves who would welcome an opportunity to see what the artists were doing. Here was our chance—beautiful pictures, a leisure public anxious to see them. We would provide the place. Ralph Cram, architect of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and of St. Thomas' Church, New York, was an old and close friend. The idea of an art gallery was most enthusiastically welcomed by him.

"On a beautiful seventeen acre plot on the moors, in the centre of Gloucester, rising like a beautiful flower from the wild brush and tangle, built on the weatherbeaten old rocks and part and parcel of them—for they themselves were quarried to create it—rises this little gem of old Gothic. It is a gem in reality, as it is a labor of love. Every timber is hand hewn, every fixture hand wrought. Beautiful should be the paintings to do credit to it."

Sixty artists are represented in the exhibition now being held. Among the painters are the Misses Cecilia Beaux, Elisabeth Spahawk Jones, Martha Walters, Jane Peterson, Louise Upton Brunback, Felicia Howell and Alice Worthington Ball, and Walter Palmer, Charles Hopkinson, Louis Kronberg, Henry B. Snell, Haley Lever, Carl Nordell, Paul Cornoyer and John Sloan. The sculptors include the Misses Ann Vaughn Hyatt and Louise Allen, and Charles Grafley and Albert Atkins.

The Gallery on the Moors has been opened for various patriotic charities and more than $4,000 has been taken in there.

Sculptor of "Joan of Arc" Farms and Grows Vegetables

MISS HYATT MILKS THE COW AND FEEDS THE CHICKENS.

WHEN Miss Anna Vaughn Hyatt, sculptor of the "Joan of Arc" statue in New York, goes to her country place at Annisquam, Mass., she devotes much of her time to growing vegetables and farming. She goes out in the early morning hours and tends her vegetable garden. Only when this has been attended to does she begin her modelling.

She also feeds the chickens and late in the afternoon milks the cow. Sometimes she issues invitations in which her friends are asked to come "half-after-milking-time," which is her favorite hour for entertaining.

Miss Hyatt was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1876. Her father was Professor Alpheus Hyatt. Her first art studies were prosecuted in Boston with Henry H. Kitson. Then she went to New York and during the winter of 1905-1906 she studied at the Art Students' League with Hermon A. McNeill. For a while she was also under the tuition of Gutzon Borglum. Her "Winter," "Hunting Tigers" and "Fighting Goats" are in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and at Dayton, Ohio, there is a large sculptured lion by her.

Her best known work is the statue of Joan of Arc, which was unveiled December 6, 1915. The French Ambassador, Jules J. Jusserand, made a speech at the unveiling, after which he awarded to Miss Hyatt, on behalf of France, the Rosette of Public Instruction. The statue is of heroic size and of bronze. It represents Joan in armor on her charger, standing in her stirrups, holding the reins in her left hand and a sword upraised in her right. The horse was modelled in Paris after a Percheron. The pedestal contains stone from the dungeon in Rouen in which Joan of Arc was imprisoned and a fragment from the Rheims Cathedral. Miss Hyatt is said to be the first woman to have modelled an equestrian statue of Joan of Arc which has been set up, although the statue is understood to be the fifteenth equestrian sculpture of the Maid of Orléans.

How the Women May Help

WITH our country involved in the great conflict of nations and the very atmosphere we breathe tense with excitement, it is difficult for us to realize that with the coming of new duties of service the old obligations have in no wise been lifted.

When there are so many calls upon one's time, when everywhere one turns the khaki uniform and martial music are reminders of the terrible strife, it is not an easy thing to go quietly about the everyday business of living.

A Sane Outlook.

Nevertheless, never has there been a time when the quiet, well poised woman going about her everyday duties was more needed than she is to-day.

In the stress of the moment we are all too prone to forget that, while the American armies are marching away to take their place on the battlefields of Europe, here they are leaving behind them the same old ordinary duties for daily performance.

Because the son or the brother, the father or husband or lover has donned the uniform of the soldier and gone to do battle for democracy by no means is abated, the importance of those everyday duties which formerly made up the sum of living.

On the contrary, the entrance of the men of America into the world war has rendered it more imperative that the women of America take up those old and homely duties and keep the country normal so far as in their power lies.

The government, both central and municipal, has the same old duties to its citizens, in spite of the new duties which are pressing upon them, and there are many ways in which the women of this country can help in the administration of affairs here.

It would not seem possible that by keeping a clean back yard one could possibly aid President Wilson in this present grave crisis, but this is not only true but keeping the back yards of America clean is one of the most important duties of American women to-day.

In time of war, when we live at such high pressure, the rules of living must be more or less unrestrained, and laxness in sanitation is one of the negligences that must be closely guarded against.

The health of the community is of paramount importance, not only because this is at all times of great moment but because the country needs efficiency, and every worker taken from the home or the commercial life means one cog out of gear in the great machine which is being operated in the interests of democracy.

The woman who keeps her back yard clean, who sees that her refrigerator cannot possibly pollute the household supplies, who watches the drains of her kitchen and bathroom and insures their sanitation is doing a most effective part in helping the government in its war programme.

There is a great temptation to neglect the small daily duties for what seem to be the greater obligations, but it must be borne in mind that it takes more than men and bullets to win a war.

It is not necessary to neglect one branch of service in order to aid another. That would be considered very bad war practice on the battlefield.

Insure Sanitation.

Do your Red Cross work, your relief work, by all means. But do not allow your enthusiasm to lead you into the error of considering that the sole duty in life.

Get up an hour earlier if necessary, neglect your social duties if need be, pay less attention to dress, but for the sake of your country and its great need of clean homes and healthy families do not forget that disease is an enemy which follows the path of neglect.

While you do the big things, do so with the knowledge that your doorstep is clean and your kitchen garden flourishing.

A Mother's Plaint

THE mother was hurrying away from her home. It was evening and the darkness kindly hid her wearily set face and the tears of vexation that would keep welling into her eyes, try as she would to keep them back. A friend chanced to meet her, one of the friends sensitive to note weariness and sadness in faces.

"You act as if you were running away," she exclaimed to the mother, catching her hands warmly into her own.

"That is just what I am doing," said the mother with a brave attempt at a laugh. "My husband is away on a business trip, so I did not have to stay at home on his account. I am running away from the voices of my family! Every nerve in me is jangling. Voices, voices—I hear them all the time! Such loud ones, too!—loud in calls, laughs, conversation!

The Rasping Voice.

"I am going to make a little call upon the Raymonds because peaceful silence is such a factor in their home. They are bright and happy, but never at a sacrifice at that blessed peace of silence that we all need to calm and restore our souls.

"I have tried to teach my children to speak low, to wait their turn in conversation, not to shout, but the modern vogue for loud, assertive speech has proved stronger than my teaching. It has 'won out' with flying colors.

"When my children were little I could control them in this matter more or less, but now that they are young men and women I do not even pretend to. The struggle is beyond me. My standard seems to them something very much out of date. The noise that they make is not bedlam to them.

"I simply cannot think what it is that has even given sanction to loud voices. Social sanction it certainly has, for it obtains among the younger sets of the very nicest families, and many an older person brought up to know better has fallen into the way of it—in self-defence, I suppose.

"One wants to be heard, and to be heard among loud voices one simply has to pitch one's voice as high. A great reaction will come against it, I am sure. It is too flagrantly lacking in refinement to endure. Taste and common sense will do away with it eventually and the low musical voice and laugh will come into their own again.

"My children are calling out to one another and to me constantly, calling at the top of their voices. Have you ever thought how seldom it is necessary to call, and how carefully one should pitch one's voice when it is necessary so as not to startle the person addressed in the call? And you know how a call attracts the attention of every one that hears it besides just the person at whom it is aimed. Any call for which one has no good excuse is a ruthless disturber of general peace.

"My home is rife with ruthless calling. The idea of making the effort to go to the person one wishes to speak to and say what one has to say so that others in the home are not disturbed is an old-fashioned absurdity, as is also the consideration for the person whom the call may startle.

"To-day I had a very sad letter from my sister. I could not speak to my family about it, as the letter was confidential. I went to my room to have my cry out. There, torn by grief, I had to answer three calls, one from my son asking if I had seen his umbrella, one from Kittie, asking me if I thought she had better wear her yellow frock to a party this evening, another from Louise asking me if I knew what time it was. My children bound into the house calling out questions, and it is the same when they leave.

"My husband feels as powerless as I do before this vogue for loud speaking. It is some strange mistaken notion of vivacity. I love vivacity, high spirits—all that. But they can all find expression without shouting.

"The musical laugh has spread its wings in flight from the younger set. They guffaw, nothing short of it.

"My pretty girls laugh in loud common tones. My sons do the same. This evening my nerves gave way and I fled from the din of it all."

An Incessant Talker.

"Let me go with you to the Raymonds," pleaded the friend. "I, too, long for a little respite with people who respect silence.

"I, too, was running away for a little while. My sister-in-law is visiting me. She has a low, gentle voice, to be sure, but she talks incessantly. She is one of those people who think and see aloud. The result is continuous chatter.

"When she is reading a book or the paper she is continually calling my attention to what interests her as she reads. Without even asking my leave she will read aloud long selections—even whole articles. She does all in the sweetest way, not remotely aware of how selfish she is—egotism, blind to itself. To be with her is to hear her voice every minute, except the few that she reluctantly allows you for a few words."

This is not a fairy tale. It is true. Think it over.

A BUTTON DESIGN.

If you are looking for a different way to sew buttons on your new frock and you aren't particularly anxious that buttonholes should pass over the buttons, try this method:—Place four or six buttons to overlap each other like a drawn out deck of cards. Use the buttons in groups like this and you will have an individual note added to your costume.

BROCADE GOWNS.

Brocade will rise to a splendid height this fall and will be considered the fabric of the hour for formal gowns. The mills at Lyons, which control the silk fashions of the world, have turned out miles of marvellous brocades. Rodier, the great master designer of fabrics, has put his stamp on full moons, palm branches and odd flowers subdued in masses of color, and he calls the achievement silk.

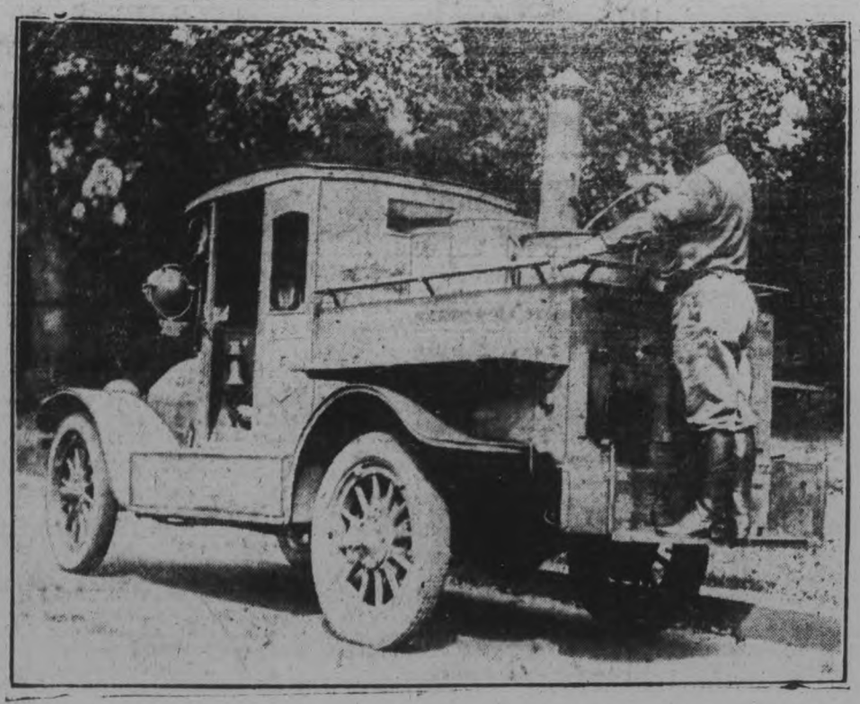
SOAP FROM GREASE.

Save every tiny bit of waste grease that can't be made clean and sweet enough for cooking purposes and make it into soap to use in the laundry.

Use the directions on a can of lye. Apart from the few white bars of soap for fine laundry work and dish washing you will have enough soap for use, and that means the saving of several dollars a year. Besides the soap keeps the clothes much whiter than the cheaper soaps generally used for laundry work.

REPAPERING WALLS.

Wet the wall with a brush to soften the old paper. Scrape it off, then put on a new paper. The paste used for wall paper should be thoroughly cooked. The walls will look much nicer and be more sanitary by removing the old paper.



NEW MILITARY "ROLLING KITCHEN" TO FEED U. S. TROOPS WITH HOT MEALS. GOULASH CANNON," as the new rolling kitchen reserves are called, will soon be a part of the United States army regular equipment. The new kitchen will be capable of supplying 250 men, and has a capacity for feeding 250 more. The most important feature of the new kitchen is that it will enable the commissary to furnish hot meals to the men whether on march or in camp.

Wireless In War.

There are several forms of wireless equipment used in warfare, and under favorable conditions a range of from 150 to 200 miles is possible with one of them. The most portable "station," however, is the cavalry type, which weighs 640 pounds and is carried about in equal proportions by four horses. Its range is not a wide one. It works over a distance of from twenty-five to thirty miles. The engine and dynamo are mounted on opposite sides of a rigid saddle on the first horse, together with four gallons of petrol and a quart of lubricating oil, tools, spare parts and a telescopic driving shaft. The second horse carries the transformer—which changes the current to a lighter or lower voltage—in a wooden case and in another wooden case the receiver, while the third horse carries the masts, which in some cases are in sections and in others are made on a telescopic principle. The fourth horse carries halyards, stays and the aerial wires, which are wound round drums and pack away in a fiber case.

A New Railroad.

The last rail has been laid of the Ootapao-Kedah Railway extension of the Siam Railway connection in the Federated Malay States. Three construction trains, which also carry passengers, are being run from Ootapao with Singora connection. It is intended to run a weekly train from Singora, connecting Penang with the home mails. The federated Malay States railways are reported to be running construction trains to the frontier.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musey mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ROMANCE OF A RIFLE.

Secret of Perfection in the Barrel Is Unending Care.

The making of a rifle calls for manufacturing skill in a very wide variety of mechanical operations. Few sportsmen realize how many different kinds of machines must be used in the production of the rifle that often seems so very simple.

Rifle manufacture differs from the manufacture of other articles made from steel in at least two important particulars. For one thing, accuracy of a very high order is necessary in firearms and this means that every operation from beginning to end must be carefully watched to prevent any defective part getting into the complete arm and causing trouble for the hunter when he is far from a gunsmith. The other particular that sets rifle making apart from any other trade is the fact that it includes the art of barrel making. This art is so peculiar to the manufacturer of firearms that the machinery used can not be applied to work on anything else.

You as a sportsman may have looked through the smoothly-shining bore of your new rifle and wondered to yourself just how the makers had succeeded in getting it so straight and true and how they cut those wonderful spiral grooves.

The secret of perfection in the making of a rifle barrel is unending care, from the selection of the raw material to the last inspection. Without it no amount of costly material would be able to turn out the right kind of work.

The rough bar of steel from which the finished barrel is finally evolved, is rolled while red hot from a short thick billet. This is done by means of ponderous rollers into which a number of grooves of gradually diminishing size have been cut. The embryo barrel is then treated to remove the rough scale left by rolling and powerful lathes turn it to the proper shape. Drilling is the next operation, and you can realize what a delicate job it is to run a drill through such a long piece of steel without having it go astray and come out at the side instead of the end. The drills are, of course, of special shape, and a funny thing about this operation is that the drill stands still and the barrel is rotated at high speed. Reaming operations follow to remove the drill marks and then the barrel is straightened.

In spite of all the efforts of skilled engineers who have been working on the problem, straightening a barrel is strictly hand work, for no machine has ever been made which could take the place of the man with the hammer and V-block anvil. You are probably wondering how the man who straightens barrels tells when they are crooked or where to hit with the hammer to take out the kink. It is very simple when you know, as the instruction books say. All you have to do is to look through the barrel at a black line painted across a window and watch the reflection as the barrel is turned by hand. It may be simple, but the fact remains that very few men ever learn how to do it, and the ones who can are exceedingly well paid.

After the barrel is straightened, it is sent to the rifling machines. These machines, which by the way are shockingly expensive, are so made that they run a long bar with a tooth with a sharp edge on it back and forth through the barrel and rotate it at the same time so that it gradually cuts the grooves that cause the bullet to spin and travel point first. This operation and the machines that carry it out are used only in rifle making and they are absolutely worthless for any other purpose.

It seems hard to believe a fine rifle barrel which almost appears to be a thing of life was once but a clumsy bar of rusty iron and the owner of every fine rifle should prize it highly as a wonderful example of manufacturing skill.—Alf. P. Lane.

War Time Sayings.

How Bees Live.

The drone bees do no work. They are the royal consorts. They fertilize the eggs after which they soon die or are killed. The queen bee lives in the hive and never departs from it except at swarming time. If she be removed the whole swarm will follow her. If more than one queen bee is found in the nest they fight among themselves until only one survives. The survivor becomes the queen of the colony. The only exception to this is when a colony becomes too large for the one queen to rule when another queen is grown and a new home is prepared. On the new queen's appearance the old queen leaves the hive followed by a part of her workers.

Lese-Majeste.

Andre Chevalier writes for the Paris edition of the New York Herald an account of the looting of French chateaux by Prince Eitel Friedrich of Prussia, "a large red-faced cabbage-eating man with a huge paunch." Germans will look for Gott to strafe a citizen of a republic who thus describes a prince of the blood, and who has the hardihood to question the divine right of a Prussian prince to commit grand larceny.

Russia Needs a Strong Man

IT is to be feared that occasional Russian attempts to take the offensive against the enemy are spasmodic and of merely local importance. On the front as a whole the Russian armies refuse to fight; they refuse to stand. If they continue these tactics the Eastern front is likely to run along the Nevski Prospect. M. Kerensky talks about a policy of blood and iron, and by superhuman personal efforts stays the Russian retreat for a few days. Then he returns to Petrograd and the retreat is resumed. Here and there loyal troops, as under Korniloff, fire upon their retiring comrades. The Kronstadt revolution peters out. Finland demands complete separation. There is a sudden return to an offensive. Russia takes a step forward and then two steps backward. She continues to slip. What is the meaning of the new shift in the supreme military command? One can very well understand why Korniloff should be promoted if there were a vacancy. He seems to be a great soldier. But why should Brussiloff, also a great soldier, be deposed? The whole Russian situation is a welter. Unless there is someone in Russia capable of performing a miracle we need not look to that country for much more help in this war.

F. Cunliffe Owen, the well-known American writer on foreign affairs, says that both Arthur Henderson, who has been representing the British Government on a mission to Russia, and Albert Thomas, who has been doing a similar duty for the French Government, are convinced that Kerensky is not the man for the crisis. He cannot carry the whole burden on his own shoulders. The trouble with Kerensky and his Government appears to be that they do not represent anything more than a mere fraction of Russian public opinion. They are Socialist visionaries. It is true that Kerensky, now that he is confronted with terrible realities, finds that what is wanted is a dictator. But his efforts to assume autocratic powers will surely be resisted by his colleagues, most of whom are more intent upon establishing a new social era in Russia than in prosecuting the war. Mr. Owen expects the collapse of the present Government or near-Government almost any day. In his view it will be unable to survive an ecumenical council of the entire Russo-Greek Orthodox Church, which is to be held next month.

The present Government has earned the hostility of the Church by its confiscatory policy with regard to church lands, and there can be no doubt that among the ignorant peasantry the clergy have tremendous influence. The idea of nationalizing the land of the country except the small holdings, the maximum size of which is to be determined by the Government, is one of Kerensky's own, proposed, indeed, before there was any war crisis. It was this proposal, however, which gave him strength with the socialists, and also endeared him to the peasants. Had he gone through with the scheme in the manner which the peasants expected he might at least have counted on their support, and since the peasants are about 98 per cent. of the Russian people, he would have had a tremendous lever in his hands. The simple, childlike moujik expected that when the Czar was removed the land of Russia would be immediately divided up, everybody having first choice.

What Kerensky meant, or seems to mean, is that the land become not the property of the individual moujiks but of the State. Instead of paying rent to a landlord the moujik will pay rent to some petty official. The peasants feel that they are being defrauded and many thousands of them have proceeded to carry out the original programme of possessing themselves of nearby estates and cutting the throats of the former proprietors. The peasants were also enraged at the proposal of the Government to grant the Jews all the rights of other Russian subjects. The Jews have been enraged because the programme has not been carried out. Similarly the Orthodox Church sees itself threatened with the loss of all its possessions, and perhaps of special rights and privileges. In this crisis the Government cannot count upon the undivided support of the army. In fact it has no great basis of support, and its downfall should surprise nobody.

It is said that the peasants throughout the empire continue to inquire who will be the next Czar. Little interest is felt in the fate of Nicholas. It was his office, not the man, that inspired their veneration. The Russian peasants are used to czars, and their experiences since their last Czar was deposed have not been such as to make them delight in their freedom. It appears that what Russia needs is a dictator of some kind, and the Grand Duke Nicholas occurs as the man for the job. Undoubtedly he was a great leader. He was profoundly respected by all the Russian armies; and he has the full confidence and admiration of Allied commanders and Allied Governments. He was the strong man of the old regime and never for a moment was suspected of being pro-German. It was because he was a strong man that he was either imprisoned or banished into private life by the revolutionaries. If from some source he could secure the necessary backing for a coup d'etat he might once more stiffen the backbone of the Russian armies and save the nation from ruin and disgrace.

Life in a Tree.

Sap is pumped up through the wood in a tree and will even go through dead wood, but will not return by the same medium. Therefore a tree may live until the roots starve. Sap ascends on the inside and descends on the outside. Therefore the descending sap alone builds new tissue of wood and bark.

HUNS' ELABORATE PREPARATIONS TO KILL CIVILIANS—Only one or at most two machines penetrated the London defences, says the official report of the air raid. The others, it appears, were driven off by our anti-aircraft guns. Our photo shows German machines drawn up ready to start on a raid of London.

Meaning of $7,000,000,000.

America's war loan of $7,000,000,000 surpasses the powers of the mind to grasp. Spent at the rate of a dollar a minute it would take 13,315 years to dispose of the appropriation. Loaned out at 6 per cent. $15 could be spent every second for an indefinite period without touching the principal. The interest on the loan is greater than the entire running expenses of the government less than half a century ago, while the amount itself would conduct the affairs of the government for fully seven years on the basis of the annual expenditures for the last decade. Another and more cheerful way of looking at the situation is that, great as the loan is, the wealth of the United States is such that it amounts to the lending of $1 out of every $40 of our existing tangible resources. A penny a day saved by every inhabitant would cancel the principal within twenty years.—Thomas F. Logan in Leslie's.

Eat Less; Do More.

A fat nation is no good. Lean nations accomplish things. We should eat less and think more, have smaller girth and larger chests, less on the hip and more on the thorax, have fewer potatoes at dinner and more books after dinner, more exercise and less chewing. A strong person can subsist on a little oatmeal and philosophy and outwalk, outtalk, outthink, and in every way outdo the person who travels the long route from soup to nuts and goes to sleep afterward as an anaconda full of sheep or monkeys might. Life is a lean affair of hungry appetites and ambitions. Then they stimulate to earnest performance. The regeneration of the American nation begins at the dinner table. We need stoutness in soul not soutness in fat. Eat less and do more. Grow more above the neck and less below the stomach

IMPORTANT MEETING OF WAR VETERANS

All members of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are reminded of the special general meeting in the recreation room of the Armouries to-night when a conference will be held with leading citizens in regard to the possibility of a campaign for permanent headquarters. The G.W.V.A. executive are desirous of having a representative attendance of members on this important occasion, and urge every member of the Club to make a special effort to be present to-night.

Children's Day At St. John's

Importance of Work of Children Was Made Prominent

Yesterday was "Childrens' Day" in all the Anglican churches of the Dominion. The importance of the work of children in the church was made the "special intention" at all the services in St. John's. Intercessions were offered for Sunday school scholars and workers, also for the Sunday School Commission. Both morning and even the Rev. Egerton Ryerson claimed for Sunday school work more active co-operation between Sunday school and congregation, paying special attention to the psychological aspect of religious education.

At the children's service in the afternoon a record attendance for this season was established, and a bright, happy service was held, all the Bible classes participating. The scholars marched to the altar rail and each one presented an offering for the work of the Sunday School Commission.

The offertory numbers were sung by a trio of boys, Harry Murduff, John Yarnold, Sherward Kennett, who sang Sir John Stainer's beautiful setting of "Christ Who Once Amongst Us." Both in solo and combined the boys sang splendidly, the result of skilful training.

St. John's Sunday school is run along the lines of the Commission, and for the last year has joined the lantern slide exchange, which now possesses thousands of slides on Biblical and historical subjects, which are found to be a great help to Sunday school work all the world over.

Makes Fortune From One Crop

Farmer Gets Into Business on "Shoe String" and Pays For Land and Outfit First Season

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 22.—There have been many instances of men getting into farming in Western Canada on a "shoe string," but one of the most interesting of these strokes of fortune has just been reported to the colonization department of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The information is to the effect that Charles Myer last spring succeeded in buying a section of improved land at Zeneta, Sask., with outfit complete, for $35.00 an acre on credit, the owner being willing to take a chance on the buyer's experience as a farmer and his reputation as a worker. The greater part of the land was ready for seeding and Myer put in 550 acres of wheat.

The crop turned out well, producing 12,000 bushels of No. 1 northern quality. The grain will bring $25,000 at the fixed price, which is sufficient to pay for the farm and leave a surplus to pay running expenses. In addition to the wheat Myer grew sufficient grain to feed his stock, so that he has practically made a small fortune in six months.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

The lure of the wild comes to every red-blooded man—right now when the trees are attired in their fall colouring. I have hunting shirts of flannel, coat sweaters, heavy wool socks, belts —everything for a week in the wilds. You never pay more at Frank's. "Come to me."

FOUGHT ENEMY FOR HALF AN HOUR SINGLE-HANDED

British Destroyer "Mary Rose" Heroically Engaged With German Cruisers, Battling Until Terrible Concentric Fire Sent Her to the Bottom

CREWS WERE BUTCHERED

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The British destroyer "Mary Rose," fought single handed against the German cruisers in the convoy action in the North Sea, according to the story ascribed to a British official rescued off Bergen, and transmitted by the Christiania correspondent of the Times. The other destroyer, which should have been present, never appeared and it is thought likely that it was destroyed at the beginning of the action.

After fighting heroically for half an hour, during which she was subjected to a most terrific concentration of fire, the Mary Rose sank. Ten members of the crew weer found clinging to buoys and were rescued.

The correspondent says that the reports of butchery of the crews of the merchantmen pass description. Two women on one ship waved a piece of white cloth, which was perfectly visible. They were silenced by a volley from the German cruisers.

The newspapers take two divergent lines of criticism regarding the attack on the convoyed merchantmen in the North Sea. According to one view the incident was one that no foresight or vigilance could avert, and although regrettable in every way, cannot exercise any decisive effect. On the other hand some newspapers ask what has become of the British command of the North Sea.

MR. F. J. MORRIS WILL SPEAK

To-night's meeting of the George treet Methodist Epworth League will be in charge of the Christian Citizenship Department, the feature of which will be an address by Mr. F. J. Morris, of the Collegiate Institute staff. Come and enjoy Mr. Morris' "Humorous Evening." Strangers are especially invited to spend an hour on Monday evenings with the young people of George Street Church.

Reception to Normalites.

Friday evening of this week (Oct. 26th) the Epworth League will hold a reception for the Normal students in the city. There will be a special programme of music and a general social time will be spent in games, etc., and refreshments.

NO FOOD PIRATES

British Government is Gradually Getting a Stranglehold on Profiteers by System of Fixing Maximum Prices

PENALTIES ARE HEAVY

(By Lowell Mellett.)

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 22.— Mrs. British Housewife makes her purchases for the family table those days with the comforting knowledge that no food pirates are wringing extortionate profits out of her family purse.

The British government is gradually getting a strangle hold on the food profiteers. Before long the breed will be utterly extinct. All of which explains why it is to-day that England —the same England that Germany is trying to make her people believe is "beleaguered" and "being starved out"—is living comfortably, plenteously, and, what is more, cheaply.

Through a system of fixing maximum prices, which was begun in July with potatoes and beans, the government now controls the retail prices of all principal foods. There are mighty few British retailers or middlemen, or producers, who dare to attempt profiteering against the government. There is a penalty of $500 fine or six months' imprisonment, or both, and the British food administration isn't backward about obtaining convictions.

CONTROL THE SUPPLY.

The government has adopted the general rule not to fix maximum prices in any food commodity until it is in a position to control the whole supply— from field of production to consumer.

Just such control is now effective over bread, flour, meat, potatoes, sugar, tea, butter, cheese, peas, beans and corn and oats products. In connection with such a system, the government itself purchases all imports of commodities administered, and distributes thees imports through the regular commercial channels. Private importations are prohibited, except by special license. The British government is also buying all supplies for the allies, thus eliminating inter-allied competition, which might have the effect of increasing prices.

Athough London's food prices to-day average about 120 per cent. over those in effect before the war, they would undoubtedly have made an even more tremendous jump if there had been no governmental control. So far England has not tried compulsory rationing, except of hotels and restaurants, and then only on meat, flour and sugar.

The British public generally is responding cheerfully to food ministry's appeals for voluntarily rationing in order to avert the compulsory. Owing to the very severe sugar situation at present "sugar cards" are now being distributed. The limitations will become effective on New Year's Day. Each person will be limited to half a pound of sugar every week.

Thousands Of German Boys Sacrificed In The Ypres Fight

Nearly One-third of the Slain in Recent Hard Fighting Were Youths of the 1918 Class--Terrible Losses Sustained From the British Artillery Fire.

HELP FROM THE EAST

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Oct. 22.— About thirty per cent. of Hindenburg's cannon fodder in the recent Ypres sector fighting, nearly one-third of those whose mangled bodies carpeted the ground in the British advance, or were included in the constant stream of prisoners, were of the 1918 class of youths. Nothing could illustrate Germany's waning man power more forcibly than this crowding of mere boys into the front ranks. Headquarters figures today showed that of the total German draft of 1917, approximately one-half had been made up of what was really the 1918 class.

Thousands of these German boys have been sacrificed in the terrible British artillery fire. One letter found in the pocket of just such a beardless boy soldier declared:

"Of my company of 140 men all have been lost except 18, and the same ratio applies to my whole regiment."

One boyish German diarist entered this note:

"In four days the British have smashed seven of our divisions."

SHELLED OWN LINES.

A captured commander's report exhibited to-day at headquarters complains his own German heavy artillery batteries shelled the German lines for twenty minutes and that two companies had telephoned they were leaving their positions.

There is yet another evidence of desperation of the German high command over this drain on its man power. That is in the constant withdrawal of troops from the Russian front for duty here on the west. For months the Germans have been shunting troops from the eastern war theatre. Now they are bringing guns from that section to bolster up their batteries. Captured documents show that many of the pieces smashed in the great Flanders drive have been thus replaced. There is no mistaking the fact that Hindenburg is now giving the Crown Prince Rupprecht all the available German artillery and men. Fresh divisions are brought up with orders to hold at all costs and to retake captured positions at any price.

There was no falling off in the numbers of men who presented themselves before the local Medical Board for examination on Saturday. Fifty-four, the majority from rural districts, were examined at the three sessions and thirty-one of these were graded in "A" class, a lower percentage of front line men than the average for the week. Five were placed in "B" category, a higher percentage than usual in the non-combatant overseas service grade. The total rejections for the day numbered sixteen.

At the afternoon session the results were:

A category	14
B category	3
C category	2
E category	3

At night the figures were:

A category	6
B category	1
E category	5

Saturdays session completed the third week's sitting of the Board. During that period Majors Cameron and Eastwood and Capt. Greer examined 836 men, of which 493 were placed in A category.

The percentages of the different grades for the three weeks were as follows:

FOUR CATEGORY "A" MEN ARE READY WHEN CALLED ON

Quartette of Local Men Fit For the Trenches Have Waived Their Claims To Exemption and Have Reported For Service

THE TOTAL REGISTRATIONS

Total registrations	130
Reported for service	7
Claims for exemption	123

Four Peterborough Category "A" men have reported for service.

The quartette visited the post office on Saturday and filled in the necessary report form signifying that they waived any claim for exemption they might have, and were ready whenever the authorities see fit to call upon them to don the khaki. They had the honour to be the first men, physically fit for the trenches, to respond to the Royal proclamation.

A Category "B" man, fit for non-combatant service overseas also reported on Saturday, making five for the day who waived exemption claims. A score of other Class One, the majority of them residents of the city, filled in exemption blanks.

The figures given at the head of these articles are the total up to 11.30 to-day, and include some six or seven exemption claims filed this morning.

Draftees should understand that all the post offices have the exemption blanks and report forms, and it is not necessary for men outside the city to register at the local post office. They may apply at the post office nearest their home.

In regard to exemptions the public should understand that there is no general exemption for farmers or for any other class. Each case will stand on its own merits, and unless it can be shown that a young man is absolutely needed on the farm, his chances for exemption are slim. Military prosecutors are looking into the claims and the farmer who has been able to spare his son for two or three years to work in the city, and is now trying to show that he is needed on the farm, may get a surprise when the case is heard before the tribunals. National service is to be the keynote of the hearings and a mere claim from a young man that he is a farmer does not mean that he will be free from the call to arms.

The military representatives are beginning their investigations in their respective districts. Major R. P. Watt is another addition to the local list. He will be the military prosecutor in the Keene district.

Plans Are Held Up By Illness

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Pending recovery from an indisposition which has kept him to his home for the last few days, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's plans have been held up. He was to have gone to Montreal to-day, but has postponed his visit. The date of his conference with the Western Ontario Liberals at London is also uncertain. The illness of the Liberal leader is, however, not of a serious nature.

Thousands Of Serbians Are Starving

(By John H. Hearley.)

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, Oct. 22. — Fifty thousand Serbians are starving and thousands are dying from insufficient rations, in the Monastir district alone, according to the report of the American Red Cross Commission, which was on its way to America to-day. The mission has just returned from the Serbian front. They reported the destruction of 35 villages in the Monastir section, and fearful suffering among the inhabitants.

It is understood the Mission's formal report will be sensational in its revelation of the complaints of the Serbian government and people over political confusion now existing as to Serbia. The general morale of every citizen, it was reported, has been seriously affected by ignorance and suspicion as to allied plans. The Commission, it is understood, will firmly urge a formal statement by the allies, which will clearly set forth their views on the Jugoslav problem.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The holding of the convention of the Provincial Sunday School Association in Peterborough at the end of the present month sonstitutes a demand upon our hospitality and interest. Upon our hospitality, for about four hundred delegates from all parts of the Province will requie homes during their stay with us. Peterborough, on similar occasions in the past, has splendidly shown the grace of hospitality, and we are sure will not be wanting on this.

We want our visitors to carry away with them a good report of us. After they have dipped their fingers in our "salt" we want them to take with them a good opinion of its savour—and of us. And the presence of the convention should be welcomed for the merit of the cause it represents. We are fighting this war for the sake of the civilization which inheres in Christianity, which has the Church for its exponent and instrument; and the Church is founded upon Him who hailed the child as the first-born to his benediction—the foundation of His kingdom on earth. The child, through the agency of the Sunday School, the only institution which stands to-day for he religious education of all ages and classes—is the father of the Church in that eighty-five per cent. of those engaged in church activities come out of, and are trained in the Sunday School. These self-evident facts are mentioned, not because they are new, but to arouse interest in the Sunday School, which is to be regarded as the great formative influence and, in large part, the foundation, of the highest type of nationhood, consisting in the fullest development of our religious and national life.

THE POSTMEN AND THE POLITICIANS.

A loud and strong appeal is made to all of us to "carry on." It is left to us individually to determine the sacrifice we are to make to "carry on", but it appears that our postmen are to "carry on" without adequate pay or adequate increase of pay. A great many of us will join with the letter carriers in thinking that labour is not represented in the union cabinet, if, as he says, is to be the case, the present Minister of Labour is to continue to fill, or wobble 'round in the position.

The postmen, after having been promised an increase, had their reasonable request for an increase of $20 a month, met by the intimation of an increase of a third of this amount. Naturally not content, but greatly disgusted, with this substitution of a stone for bread, the postmen applied for a board of conciliation under the Industrial Disputes Act. They have got their reply—another refusal. The Minister of Labour says he can't take any action and refers the postmen to the head of the department, the Postmaster-General, who has already "turned them down."

We have a union government now, supposed to be organized to help win the war in which we are fighting for justice and fair play. The letter carriers should get a good brand of justice from the new government. Under the old government, according to Sir Sam Hughes, the "big interests" had the call, and there was little consideration for anything so small as a body of letter carriers. But the union government has promised civil service reform, and it has a good chance to begin with the postmen and practice on them another promise in its policy — "to promote conditions of employment that will assure suitable standards of living amongst the labour classes"— and if any body or class works hard and for limited pay, it is the letter carries—who are not only loaded down with their packages, but also by a burden of unjust treatment.

Knocking the postmen from "pillar to post," may be a good enough foundation for a pun, but it won't pay for coal at $10 a ton.

RALPHIC RHAPSODY.

If eloquent speeches, declamatory declarations of duty and optimistic orations had had any effect the war would have been over long ago. But it is by deed of hand, not word of mouth that accomplishment is reached. We still continue to "carry on" with our mouths and say things that though etsimable in the abstract are not quite founded on effect or even fact. "Ralph Connor," the brilliant novellist, published a long article in extravagant laudation of the union government, which may and may not, deserve the praise he has lavished upon it. We don't know yet; we only hope it will fill the bill. And if it does this it will largely do so by removing the thing—partizan patronage prostitution—that has put so much sand in the "bearings" of war administration machinery, and contributed to so much waste of money and national effort. And some think this has been accomplished. The author of the "Sky Pilot" in the article referred to, rejoices thus:

> Then, too, there are certain by-products of Union Government almost equal in value to those directly secured, such as the elimination of that fecund source of corruption, that incubus the bane of the honest M.P.'s existence—patronage. The Union Government had not been in existence twelve hours whe, like men released from intolerable bondage, members of the Cabinet were chuckling gleefully over letters and telegrams already in their hands soliciting "plums." For the first time in their whole Parliamentary careers they tested the pure delight of telling the vampire rabble of camp followers—well, all that was in their hearts. I was present, and wondered at the beatific joy that, like a sweet spring morning, irradiated their countenances.
>
> "O frabjeous day,
> Kalloo, kallay,
> They chortled in their joy."
>
> And looking upon them one understood something of what their former sufferings had been. What a day for Canada when that well-spring of corruption is filled up. Becuse, after all, many a man for the sacred interests of party will do what for himself he would scorn to do. For that deliverance alone the Union Government is worth while.

If this has been accomplished, "the Union Government is worth while." But the people must have some proof of it before they join in the joy "chortling." The Union Government supposes the utter elimination of partizanship—its members of different political units, had to subordinate them and sacrifice them, in order to make a working condition. To eliminate partizanship the Union Government must be free from it, itself. If the head of the Government does not set an example his subordinates have no official warrant for conducting their departments without partizanship.

We all know the late government was partizan from centre to circumference—that that was one of the chief causes of its failure that necessitated its replacement — if it has really been replaced. When did Sir Robert Borden desert his partizanship. He carried it to the very door of the Union Government, and even boldly brought it inside. In making room for the admission of the non-partizan element into his government to make it "union" he had to displace some of his partizan colleagues, and by a last effort of partizanship compensated their scrifice on the altar of patriotism with fat offices, ranging in amount of emolument from $5,000 to $25,000 per year.

If partizanship patronage was abandoned, if that "well spring of corruption was filled up," when and how was the filling done? We should have had some evidence of it—we should have left these big appointments to the Union Government. We shall believe that partizan patronage is in any degree absent from the Union Government or its head, if we see merit made the ground of appointment—if we see a recognition of the fact that if Liberals were thought good enough for important positions in the Union Gvernment, Liberals may be found good enough to fill offices to help them in the work of administration—appointments made with the same object as the formation of the Union Government—to help win the war. The partizan appointments upon which Sir Robert Borden founded the Union Government were not exactly war-winning offices; they were the rewards of partizanship, unwarranted and improper exercise of patronage, "the fecund source of corruption," which, we are assured, is entirely absent in the Union Government. It is to be hoped that it is so.

Frank Evidence Before The Henderson Commission

One cannot help favourably contrasting with some that has gone before, the evidence given before the Henderson commission in Toronto by Mr. Thomas F. Matthews, secretary-treasurer of the Matthews-Blackwell Packing Co. of Hull, Toronto and Peterborough. It was the testimony of a business man, frank, open and above-board. He apparently had instructions to conceal nothing. The company had been doing a big business and had made large profits as the result principally of huge foreign orders given at prices that apparently suited the purchasers; and the company was not afraid to let the world examine its transactions and its business policy.

The impression is received that the heads of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. were business men pursuing a business policy they regarded as in the best interests of the company and of the trade generally—a policy of which they are proud. If exception is taken to that policy by other business men, they are prepared to defend it; if exception is taken to it by people who are moved more by prejudice than by knowledge, they are content to disregard such criticism.

Now, we can understand that attitude. We know where we are at. It clears the air for intelligent discussion and for the provision of remedies if remedies are found necessary.

The Journal thinks it a pity that Sir Joseph Flavelle was not called by the Henderson commission to testify for the William Davies Co. If he had gone on the stand, instead of some of his subordinates, we believe the impression left on the public mind might have been different. Despite the baronetcy the King has honoured him with and the high position he has held as Chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board, the thing Sir Joseph Flavelle is still proudest of if his business: "If there is one thing about my life that is clean, it is my business", he has been heard to say. He makes no apologies for being able to stick a pig or make a sausage, and he remains the biggest all-round man in connection with the William Davies Co. The best way for Sir Joseph Flavelle to rehabilitate himself and correct possibly erroneous public impressions is to go before the Henderson commission, answer frankly all the questions it may put to him, and talk like a sincere business man.—Ottawa Evening Journal.

Weekly Report On Farm Conditions

Threshing is Active and the Results Continue to Show Average Yields —Live Stock

LABOUR SITUATION

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by district representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Threshing is active; and the results continue to show good average yields for most of the grain crops. The Kenora representative claims an average of 50 bus. per acre for oats, and instances one field that yielded 80 bus. per acre.

Beans and late buckwheat have been more or less injured by frost. Considerable husking corn also got nipped, and will be unfit for seed, although good enough for feed; while from the same cause the general quality of ensilage will also be inferior compared with that of more recent years. Rain has been delaying corn cutting.

Most of the fall wheat will enter the winter with a good top, but some has been sown rather late, and there has been but little October growth.

Potatoes on the whole will be a fair crop both as to yield and quality should rot not develop. They have done remarkably well in the Fort William and some other districts of Northern Ontario. The Durham County representative states that this season has proved to the satisfaction of many farmers that spraying with Bordeaux mixture will control the potato blight.

Some mangels, turnips and sugar beets have been pulled, and are generally turning out most satisfatcory, although a number of turnip fields in Bruce, Oxford and Durham were reported to be injured by the Zebra caterpillar.

Tobacco in Essex has been all harvested and mostly sold at 18 1-2c. a pound for the Burley variety.

The Pastures.

Pastures have been somewhat helped by recent rains, although the week was rather too cold for much growth. Young clover looks well.

Tomatoes have been late in ripening and a larger quantity of green ones than usual had to be picked to escape the frost.

The onion crop, which is growing in importance in some of the western counties, has been pulled. At Leamington they have been selling at $2.30 a bag, f.o.b.

Live Stock.—Market prices for live stock have remained firm except in the case of horses. Some farmers have disposed of their finished cattle, and are purchasing feeders to turn off for the market later on, as there are plenty of coarse fodders on hand, although silage corn is not as well cobbed as usual. Already a number of enquiries are being made with a view to taking advantage of the Federal Department's offer of free freight for breeding stock.

Live stock will be left on pasture for a few weeks yet should the weather not prove too cold. The milk flow, while decreasing, is up to the average for the time of year. However, in Peel some farmers are selling dairy cows on account of the scarcity of labour and the price of milk being too low to net a profit.

Labour.— One representative states that farmers never before worked together in exchanging labour as they have done this year. There is scarcity of help for the fall ploughing, silo filling and threshing now demanding attention, and broken weather during the week has been adding to the strain. The recent rains have made ploughing easier on heavy clays, although some soils are yet very stiff. Middlesex reports that some farmers are buying tractors for silo filling, ploughing, and other purposes.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKETS

There has been a steadily upward trend to the market for hardware commodities during the week. A number of lines of automobile accessories have also been increased in price. While lower prices have been established on iron and steel by the Federal Trade Commission in the United States, this factor has not as yet affected the manufacturing situation, as the mills are mostly working on Government orders and it will be some distance in the future before lower prices can be obtainable for the domestic trade. The only commodity in which there is evidence of weakness is in galvanized sheets, in which slightly lower prices have been recorded. Intimations are made in some quarters that there is a probability of an embargo being placed on shipment of these from the United States, in which event prices will in all probability rule firm again in the Canadian market. Lines in which advances have been recorded include tire chains, bumpers, all cotton products, such as twine, rope, sashcord, candlewick, awning cord and seine twine; firmer chisels and framing chisels, mouse and rat traps, table cutlery, oilers, lubricating oil, revolvers, fishhooks, horse pokes, hay rakes, canthooks and canthook handles, peaveys and peavey handles. Linseed oil was in weaker market with declines registered, while turpentine was in stronger market with advances. Business has been seasonably good. Considerable shipment of winter goods is now going on.—Hardware and Metal.

AMERICAN DRIVE TO BE LAUNCHED BY NEXT SUMMER

PERSHING LEGIONS GROWING RAPIDLY

Troops to Taste Battle Long Before Proposed Great Assault.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—American troops will launch a big drive against the Germans in France some time next summer, but American troops will be on active duty in the trenches and actually in the fighting long before that date—probably before Christmas.

While War Department officials are necessarily reticent as to discussing the prospective American offensive, it is known that Major General Pershing is preparing his army for a big drive next summer. He will not have enough men or sufficient supplies before then.

Meanwhile American troops will occupy small portions of the front line trenches for training purposes and be under fire. They will engage in trench raids and take part in repulsing German assaults. They may even participate in a minor capacity in large British or French offensive movements.

The General Staff realizes that the potential resources of the United States, both in men and supplies, which are now being so rapidly mobilized, would be perhaps the greatest deciding factor even if the war should end before the American army has had a chance to get into action, but they would greatly prefer that history should be able to say that American manhood had as much to do with winning the war as American wheat and American dollars.

PERSHING ARMY GROWING

It is no secret that American troops are leaving this country constantly for France and that Major-General Pershing's army is growing faster than the Prussians imagine could be possible. Everything is being made ready, not merely for holding a portion of the line, but before the drive begins, virtually every man in it will have had actual experience under fire.

American artillery will have had a chance to use the barrage fire while small raids are made, and American aeroplanes will have had much practice flying over the German lines and directing artillery fire.

While not even an estimate as to the number of American troops in France can with propriety be given, it is permissible to say they number more than the public suspects. When Mr. Baker, Secretary of War, sent estimates to Congress to-day for an additional $287,416,000 for the army this fiscal year he stated that the War Department was proceeding upon the basis of an army in the field, partly in this country, and partly in France, of 2,300,000 men before next July.

Both the French and the British general staffs are eager to see the American troops in action. The United States will be given an important place in the line whenever the army is ready. In fact, it is understood on high authority that a definite offer has already been made of a place in the line where Americans will have a splendid opportunity for some important fighting, such as the Canadians have done so gloriously at Lens.

DUE CAUTION OBSERVED

Major General Pershing, however, is said to be proceeding on the basis that it is better to delay a little than go in half prepared, therefore, while there may be numerous American casualty lists before January, the American drive will not begin until next summer. It is the great hope of Major-General Pershing and of the army General Staff in Washington that when this drive begins it will not end without decisive results, and that American troops will strike blows which will add greatly to the growing desire for peace in Germany.

PAIGN.

The campaign that is being carried on by the Woman's Auxiliary, Organization of Resources Committee, in co-operation with Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, is one in which we can all serve. It is not a war campaign, but it is a war-time campaign, a campaign of publicity for the purpose of impressing upon every producer and consumer the urgent necessity of keeping up our food resources. In this war the food reserves are scarcely less important than our reserves of man-power. We cannot all take personal part in the campaign that is being carried on on the Western front, but we can all do something to sustain that campaign by abstaining from wasteful or unnecessary consumption of the necessities of life. What we conserve is so much stored to feed our fighting men and our Allies for the remainder of the struggle. If we could by mathematical demonstration or prophetic inspiration fix the term the war is to last we might feel less, or perhaps more, anxiety than we now feel in regard to the problem of provisioning the Entente Powers. But on that point we are in the dark. No man can say when this dreadful war will end. Therefore, no Canadian patriot can be reckless or even calculating in the matter of drawing upon the food supply. We can simply keep on practicing self-denial in regard to appetite. The publicity campaign we speak of ought to be met half way by all loyal Canadians. In recent issues we have inserted very telling advertisements laying before the public some striking facts as to the food situation. Every line of such matter ought to be read, marked and digested by the Canadian public. Every illustration presented in these advertisements ought to be carefully pondered. The public know that there is great need for conserving the food supply, but knowing never amounts to much for some people unless it is accompanied by sensations of pain. The idea of food scarcity sinks deeply and correctively into some minds; into others it goes half way; in others it hardly ripples the surface of their thoughts. In some way or other the need of conserving the food supply must be carried into the innermost recesses of the Canadian mind and move us all in the same way as the call for defence moved our gallant fighters at the front to volunteer for service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Mr. Tuckerton

A Story of New York When the City Was Decorated For War

By ETHEL HOLMES

It was springtime, and New York city is very gay during the season when the trees are budding—not that trees bud in the metropolis except in the parks, and one would suppose that those who seek New York in spring would prefer the country. But this spring to which I refer was different from other springs. The United States had entered the world's war, and the national emblems which hitherto had floated solely from public buildings were springing into the sunlight like daffodils in a garden.

Fifth avenue, formerly lined with the dwellings of the rich, now occupied by costly buildings used for shops, was one blaze of banners. The flags of ten nations were mingled in profusion. Every day for as much as twenty hours the sidewalks of that busy street are lined with pedestrians, while from sunrise to sunset a policeman of the traffic squad stands at every corner to regulate the passing of vehicles from the cross street, whirling a sign, reminding one of a weather vane, on which are painted in large letters "Go" and "Stop." The autocrat of the street is obeyed implicitly by the thousands of chauffeurs who are passing back and forth, for woe betide the driver who dares dispute his orders!

Two young men, Archibald Potter and Charles Vandergriff, dressed in the height of fashion, were sauntering up this thronged thoroughfare, now taking off their hats to some damsel in a glittering automobile, now looking up at the mingling of banners floating from the houses, now pausing before a shop window to look at one of the many pictures of grim war used by venders of merchandise to attract attention. Presently they met a young man who also seemed absorbed in the display of bunting, autos, throngs and other objects of interest.

"Who is that fellow, Archie?" asked one of the young men referred to of the other. "I saw him last night at the club. I wonder who introduced him. He didn't seem to know any one there, but sat by himself reading a newspaper."

"Van Kleek 'put him up.' All I know about him is that he is an Englishman, a cockney, I believe, but what he's doing over here I don't know. Van Kleek introduced him to me, but I noticed that Van didn't give him any title, just said 'Mr. Tuckerton,' that's all."

"Van knows how to do a thing like that," the other suggested. "If he introduces one he wishes to be favorably received he introduces him as 'My especial friend, Mr. So-and-so.' If not, the party is simply 'Mr. So-and-so,' which means, 'I don't vouch for him.'"

And the young men went on their way, admiring the scene afforded by what, at least at the time, was the most brilliant street in the world.

Let us leave them and follow Mr. Tuckerton. He was walking up the avenue, and his gaze was fixed principally on the flags. The sight of the ensign of one's country displayed in a foreign land is always pleasing, and when Mr. Tuckerton saw the Union Jack of England sandwiched between the tricolor of France and the Stars and Stripes or mingled with the flags of all the allies a smile hovered about his lips. Fifth avenue leads into Central park, and the stranger entered that inclosure, noting everything that appeared with the interest of one who saw it for the first time.

Englishmen are great walkers, and Mr. Tuckerton kept on his feet until it was time to return to his hotel for dinner. He dined alone and after dining went to his room, where he engaged in writing till the middle of the evening, when he ordered a taxicab and departed for the residence of Mrs. Worthington, one of New York's former aristocrats, when refinement stood for what is now represented by millions, but who was sufficiently well to do to maintain her position among the gilded aristocracy.

Mr. Tuckerton found a gathering at Mrs. Worthington's of New York's social representatives. On coming down from the robing room he met Van Kleek, who was a sort of go-between connecting Mrs. Worthington and the money autocrats of New York. Van Kleek and the Englishman went together to the hostess to salute her. The lady received Mr. Van Kleek with a familiar nod, but greeted Tuckerton as she would any other guest.

There are many persons in fashionable New York society who have passed through an experience of social climbing that has given them a full appreciation of the position to which they have attained. This class is naturally jealous of any one attaining easily that which they themselves have been at so much pains to secure. No one at Mrs. Worthington's reception knew Mr. Tuckerton or that he was an Englishman who did not intend to make his home in America. They merely noted the fact that an unknown person was admitted where they belonged, he not having either inherited his ticket or climbed the ladder at the top round of which it was to be obtained. Mrs. Worthington did not introduce her British guests. Van Kleek chatted with Tuckerton for some time and seemed interested in his talk, but this was the only attention he received during the evening.

Finally Mr. Tuckerton espied a young lady sitting by herself who seemed as much out of place among the golden throng as he was himself. He noticed that, though she was dressed in exquisite taste, there was not an expensive article in her makeup. Whether Tuckerton took pity on her on account of her being left alone or whether he saw something in her different from the glittering tinsel that made up the assembly, he was sufficiently interested in her to ask Van Kleek about her. Van Kleek said that she was the granddaughter of one who had been prominent in New York society half a century before. The family had lost their means, but had recently won a lawsuit that had returned to them enough of their property to enable them to enter the social circle. Miss Warren had essayed to claim the social position to which she was entitled by birth, but her place there had been filled, and she must begin at the bottom of the ladder and climb like others.

Tuckerton asked Van Kleek for an introduction to the young lady, and Van Kleek at once granted the request.

The rest of the evening Mr. Tuckerton spent with Miss Warren. No one paid the slightest attention to them; at least no one appeared to consider them, though there was something about them that caused a certain unexpressed interest. Mr. Tuckerton was not exactly like other men, and Miss Warren had received that which the other guests could not buy with money—the stamp of gentility to which one must be born and can never attain.

But this undercurrent of interest did not in the least tend to break down the barrier that separated the couple from the others. No one ventured to show either of them the least attention, Tuckerton could have made a request to be introduced to any of them. Miss Warren as a woman did not have the same privilege. But she was the only person to whom he asked to be introduced during the evening.

This man and woman, then, spent the evening together and seemed to be entirely absorbed in the conversation between them that had started after their introduction. At first their talk appeared to be merely the formal commonplace remarks that come with the introduction of well bred strangers, but gradually it took on an air of interest that apparently riveted the attention of both and finally made them oblivious to their surroundings. By the time the evening was over and adieus were bidden Mr. Tuckerton and Miss Warren seemed like old friends.

A few days after Mrs. Worthington's reception the commission sent over by the English government visited New York and was received by the city officials and by throngs of citizens. When the cavalcade passed up between the multitude of banners that lined Fifth avenue the two men who have been mentioned as strolling on the street shortly before viewed it from a window in a club facing the street.

"By Jove!" exclaimed Vandergriff suddenly.

"What's the matter?" queried Potter.

"Do you see that fellow riding in that carriage—the fourth from the end?"

"Why, he's the chap we met on foot the other day—the man Van Kleek put up and wouldn't vouch for."

"What's he doing in that crowd, do you suppose?"

"I don't know. I'll find out." And he asked one of the lookers-on about it.

"That's the Marquis of Annesley, heir to the dukedom of Abbington. He came over with the commission incognito, or, rather, under his untitled name of Tuckerton."

"Great Scott! Is he a member of the commission?"

Many of those who had been guests at Mrs. Worthington's reception saw the man they had ignored riding up Fifth avenue on that gala day and learned for the first time who he was. And there was gnashing of teeth among them.

One young woman viewed the procession from an upper window, Miss Warren, who had nothing to learn of Mr. Tuckerton's identity. He had visited her at her home and had not sought to keep his rank from her. The reason for his doing so to others was that he dreaded being lionized on account of being a nobleman. The only persons who knew of his identity were Mr. Van Kleek and Mrs. Worthington, and he had pledged them not to reveal it. This was the reason why Van Kleek had not vouched for him and why Mrs. Worthington had not shown him any especial attention at her function and had not introduced him to her guests.

The appearance of the marquis in the procession on the day the British commission was received by the city of New York revealed his identity to the elite of New York, for there were many questions as to who was the distinguished looking man who rode in the fourth vehicle from the end of the procession.

Invitations poured in on him by scores, and he was besieged by persons to secure his attendance at social functions. But he declined them all on the ground that he was in America on important business and it would not be possible for him to make a digression socially.

There were many young women who had millions to pay for the nobleman's hand, and when before he left America it was known that Miss Warren had received it without price there was a wailing and a gnashing of teeth among them. It was reported that the marquis said that there had been a real aristocracy in New York many years ago, and he was proud to have won one of the survivors.

Expert Testimony.

To speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece—

AN eminent telephone man of 30 years' experience says that this is the great need in telephoning. Over half the service difficulties would disappear if distinct and direct speaking were practised.

¶ To speak towards your telephone from a yard or so away, or to speak across it means bad transmission—often wrong numbers, misunderstanding and annoyance.

¶ You can help the service, avoid wrong numbers, misunderstanding and annoyance, by speaking distinctly, and directly into the mouthpiece, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

"Good service * * * our true intent."

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

SHOULD PAY THEIR OWN TAXES.

(Forest, Ont., Free Press).

The Dominion Canners claim that they could not operate the cannery in Forest in 1916 because the building was filled to the roof with canned goods put up the previous year. The claim that there was no demand for those goods is not borne out by the facts. During the two years ending March 31, 1917, Canadian consumers imported, mostly from the States, over twenty-one million pounds of canned beans, corn, peas, tomatoes, etc., on which they paid over $312,000 duty. The hoarding up of food for exorbitant prices has been the main cause of the food scarcity which threatens the Empire to-day. And yet the Dominion Canners have he temerity to ask the people of Forest to pay their taxes for them.

The Walk-Easy Store Has Nice Things Said About It

"I've seen a good many new shoe stores opened in my travels, and I don't remember of a store where they have a Woman's Department that has become so popular as the "Walk-Easy's" department in so short a time." These were the remarks of a man who has seen a good deal of the shoe business. Such a remark should cause Mr. Friedman, the proprietor, to feel a sense of honest pride, to know that his new store is worthy of such a reputation. The "Walk-Easy" store is not the largest, but it is well arranged, well lighted, and near the centre of the business part of the city. The stocks are quickly turned over and the assortments carefully selected. The interest of women especially seem to be intelligently looked after, and the new styles moderately priced.

THE MAIN FEATURES OF SERVICE ACT

An Explanation of What All Men Coming in Class One Are Required to Do—Must Report for Service or Claim Exemption Before Nov. 10th or be Treated as Deserters Medical Examinations Not Necessary Before Registering

In spite of all the official notices and the information that the newspapers have been publishing there seems to be many misunderstandings in regard to the working of the Military Service Act, and this lack of definite knowledge as to what is required of them possibly explains the slowness of the men affected to register.

This article is intended to clear up some of the points concerning which The Examiner has been asked during the past week.

In the first place the Royal Proclamation issued on October 13 calls all men of Class One under the Act to the colours. If you are a British subject, and are a bachelor, or a widower without children, and were not older than thirty-four years on January 1st, 1917, or younger than twenty years on October 13, 1917, you come in Class One. If you have been married since July 6th of this year you are also included in the call.

WHAT THE LAW SAYS.

Assuming that you are in the class called the law says you must do one of two things on or before November 10th next. You must either report for service or you must file a claim for exemption. It does not matter what your physical condition is, whether you are an invalid or a cripple, you must do one thing or the other before the date mentioned. All men who fail to comply will be treated as deserters and are liable to imprisonment for five years. Now to either report for service or to claim exemption you must fill out the necessary forms at the post office. They are available now and whether you have signified your willingness to serve or have asked that you be exempted, the postmaster will give you a certificate that you have compiled with the law which will be your protection after November 10th, when the drag-net goes out for those who have failed to answer the call.

It is not necessary that you should be examined by a Medical Board before reporting for service or filing your exemption claim. However, as a convenience to yourself, your employer and the authorities, it is desirable that you should first be examined and the Medical Board is holding three sessions a day at the Armouries for your accommodation.

We will assume that you have been examined. The Board has placed you in one of four categories, "A" meaning that you are fit for any fighting branch of the service, "B" that you are qualified for non-combatant service, on lines of communication, etc., overseas, "C" that you are fit for duty in Canada, or "E" signifying that you are not physically fit for any war service either at home or abroad.

CLASS "A" MEN.

If you are in "A" Class you are directly affected by the call for the purpose of the present draft is to secure reinforcements for the fighting forces. If you are willing to waive any claim for exemption you can volunteer at once and enlist with an overseas unit or you can go to the post office, fill out a report form that the postmaster will give you and wait until the authorities notify you by registered mail that your services are needed.

On the other hand it is your privilege under the law to claim exemption on any one of the different grounds mentioned in the Act. These various reasons are all to be found on the exemption blanks at your disposal at the post office. You simply mark a cross opposite the clause under which you are appealing for exemption, and fill in the other particulars required. The postmaster will give you a counter foil to show that you have registered and you will be notified through the mails as to the date on which your application will be considered by the Exemption Tribunal.

Supposing you have been placed in "B" or "C" category by the Medical Board, your course is equally clear. As the present call is only for "A" men, the draftees who have been given a "B" or "C" grading have simply to apply for exemption on one of the regular forms at the post office, on physical grounds. Your medical history sheet should be attached to the exemption form and you will be exempted by the tribunals temporarily. If later on it should be found necessary to call men of "B" and "C" categories to the colours you will be given an opportunity to ask for exemption on any grounds that you may have.

THE REJECTED DRAFTEES.

If you have been rejected outright or otherwise graded in "E" category you must apply for exemption on physical grounds. You can do this through the regular form at the post office, or you can apply personally before the tribunal and show your medical history sheet. The post office method is, however, commended as the simplest and easiest way.

These are the main features of the act, and this explanation may possibly help some of the young men who have been in doubt as to what they should do.

In conclusion remember that the law requires you to report or claim exemption before November 10th, or you will be called upon to explain why you should not suffer the penalties prescribed by the Act.

1,000,000 TONS OF SOFT COAL HAD BEEN HIDDEN.

Big Find Made by U. S. Federal Agents in Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. — The Fuel Administration has found approximately 1,000,000 tons of soft coal "cached" in the Cleveland district by private interests now obtaining a steady supply to meet present needs, and has made plans to commandeer much of this surplus at Government rates if the shortage in other sections makes such action advisable. Under this scheme mines would later be directed to replenish the supply seized as it was needed at the price the Administration had paid for it.

EVERY MAN NEEDED ON BATTLE FRONT

Canada a Long Way Behind With Her Supply, Writes Officer.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—The following is an extract from a letter of an officer overseas, received in Ottawa:

"The war is not won yet by any means; in fact it doesn't look too good from any angle. But if they fight on and hang on in the good old English fashion which we were taught as children to pattern ourselves after, they are going to need every man they can get and the deciding factor of his fitness will be in the field; if he can stand it he will be fit, if he cannot he is not fit; the matter will be proved practically, not theoretically.

"Canada could afford to pick and choose if she were supplying the necessary men, but she is a long who are in the line are being workwho are in the line are being worked to death; the source of supply is running dry, and the politician, interested vitally in party and its perquisities, rather than the winning of the war, juggles, in his antics, with the lives of men who believed in their country, thought her worth fighting for, and trusted that they would be backed up. All things after all are comparative, and I am coming every day to have a less bitter opinion of Judas Iscariot.

"I think I am warranted in saying that the Canadian Army Corps in France is the finest fighting unit the world has ever seen; the best engaged in this war; there may be, in fact, there are, better divisions, but as an Army Corps, the Canadians are top notch. They have made a name which will be Canadian if they are supported, but if Canada fails them the glory of their achievement will be personal, and not national. It is good to be a Canadian over here at present, but there are indications, guarded newspaper remarks about the lowering political situation and so on, that indicate a full realization of the fact that we may have shot our bolt."

SCENE FROM "FAIR AND WARMER."

So great was the success of "Fair and Warmer," the Avery Hopwood farce of Temperature and Temperament which Selwyn & Company will present at "The Grand" to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, that before it had reached its first hundredth performance at the Eltinge Theatre in New York, there was a demand for it from every quarter of the country, and its fame had been carried from coast to coast and from the Gulf to Canada by the out-of-town members of its capacity audiences.

Its success was so instantaneous and so unceasing during its year in New York and the following eight months in Chicago, that a nation-wide interest was created. It will come here with a typical Selwyn & Company cast of excellent farceurs, who will give the fullest flavour to the Hopwood lines and situations.

MR. G. N. GORDON ADVOCATES LABOUR PARTY'S PLATFORM

Labour Committee Secured Mr. Gordon's Approval of Platform on Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening a committee of labour men waited on Mr. G. N. Gordon and asked him if he would subscribe to the Independent Labour Party's platform which is as follows:

Declaration of Principles.

The object of the Independent Labour Party of Ontario is to promote the political, economic, and social interests of people who live by their labour, mental, or manual, as distinguished from those who live by profit upon the labour of others.

Therefore, we have established a permanent provincial organization in order that we may act in co-operation as far as possible with independent political organizations of the farmers and the producing class for the purpose of electing men or women who will stand by the democratic principle of a working-class movement, with all that the term implies.

Platform:

Free and compulsory education — Free education in all institutions supported by the government.
Free text-books.
The public ownership of all public utilities and natural sources of wealth.
Nationalization of banking and credit systems.
Direct legislation through the initiative, referenudm, and recall.
Gradual elimination of unearned increment through increasing taxation.
Equal pay for equal work.
Abolition of all election deposits.
for all municipal offices.
Abolition of alal election deposits.
Proportional representation with grouped constituencies.
Abolition of the Canadian Senate.
No court to be legally competent to declare as unconstitutional any act of the Parliament of Canada.
Amending the British North America Act in order that the decisions of the highest court of appeal in Canada shall be final, in all matters, civil and political.
That adequate equal pensions be granted to all disabled soldiers, either officers or men, or their widows and dependents.
Pensions for mothers with dependent children.
Old age pensions.
Creation of national reserves of coal and timber.

We believe that performance is better than promise, and we rest our claim for the support of the workers on the general declaration that we stand for the industrial freedom of those who toil, and the political liberation of those who for so long have been denied justice.

Mr. Gordon replied in the affirmative, stating that he had advocated such a platform for years. He would not say whether he would be a candidate at the forthcoming general election.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.— Whether Canada's Food Controller will follow the example of Food Controller Hoover of the United States and undertake to curb sugar sales to "luxury" dealers as a result of the cessation of the export of sugar from Jamaica, will depend upon a consideration of the matter by the Board and its Advisory Council. Food Controller Hanna is absent from Ottawa to-day, and the officials of the Board decline to volunteer any opinion pending his return. Mr. Hanna will be back to-morrow.

Anniversary Services At Mark St. Church

Rev. Mr. Thomas of George Street Church Occupied the Pulpit in the Morning and Rev. R. Pogue in the Evening.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Exceptionally large congregations attended service in Mark Street Methodist Church yesterday, when the 44th anniversary of the Church was observed. The pulpit was occupied both morning and evening by visiting clergy, Rev. Mr. Thomas, Pastor of George Street Methodist Church, preaching in the morning, and Rev. Mr. Pogue of St. Paul's, in the evening.

A feature of the anniversary service was the special music prepared for the occasion and solos by Miss Mary Dickson, Campbellford.

Morning Service.

Rev. Mr. Thomas chose as his text, Revelations I., 5 and 6, and used as his subject the Psalm of Praise.

In his sermon he emphasized three thoughts: That the basis of praise to Jesus Christ is to be found in the love, exhaltation and deliverance which He bestows upon His followers. The preacher also pointed out that we should show faith and praise not simply in song and worship, but in devoted service to efforts to widen His sway.

Evening Service.

Mr. Pogue's sermon, based upon his text, Matthew XXII., 42: "He saved others; Himself He cannot save," carried with it some uplifting thoughts which cannot fail to leave a lasting impression upon those who heard his inspiring words.

In brief, Mr. Pogue took the words as embodying a great truth for every one who claims to be a disciple of the Church of Christ, could not save himself, spare himself and save others. Nor can the disciple of Christ. Men can only be saved through sacrifice; for every life saved some one must shed his blood. This is the Church's idea of a Christian life. Christ impressed upon His followers that the call to discipleship must be the call to self-denial, self-sacrifice, and self-surrender. Service in the cause of Christ has meant for many a real giving of a life. Some of the men who stand out above all others in service rendered in the cause of Christ were men who died young. Brainard, Marlyn and McCheyne, in their passion for saving souls, literally poured out their life blood to the last drop, in a few years. But because of the fervid natures of these men, burnt out in a few years, we must not think that their's were not happy lives. The most supremely happy life ever lived was that of Jesus Christ; yet no life was so completely sacrificed as His.

The greatest days of the Church's history have been days of the martyrs. When the Church has found followers willing to suffer for her testimony, willing, like a grain of wheat to fall to the ground and die, then she has triumphed, then become a power on earth.

The sacrificial always draws. When the Church is seen bearing Christ's cross, living as He did; when she reproduces in the lives of her members the image of Christ, then outside the multitude will turn to her and will say to her: "We will go with you for we see that God is with you."

In connection wih the anniversary services it is interesting to learn that the church was established as a Bible Christian Church, in 1873. Rev. Geo. Copeland, an ex-president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was the first pastor. This charge is one of the two Protestant churches in East City. It has, therefore, a wide opportunity and good outlook in soul saving and character building, and it has an excellent record through the years. The church and parsonage improvements, increased ministerial support, and the purchase of a new church lot, indicate the interest, loyalty and liberality of the congregation, and give hope and promise of better things for coming days. With well organized departments, especially in boys' and other young people's work, this cause goes confidently forward. As the East City outpost of Peterborough Methodism, Mark Street is a large centre.

The financial returns to date are encouraging and give promise that when a number of contributors who have intimated their intention to add to the amount already at hand, have made their contributions, and the usual week-night service has been held, the full amount requested by the official board will be received.

Sunday, Oct. 21, was a red letter day in the history of Mark Street Church.

Austro-Hungary's Fate Is Sealed

Although Uncle Sam has not declared war on Austria it is not likely that the present situation between the two Powers can last much longer. It was the dismissal from the United States of Ambassador Dumba, the Austrian representative, that lit the fuse that led to war with Germany. Up to the present time no American soldier has fought with an Austrian soldier, and therefore the final step has not been taken. Still, no American soldier has fought with a German soldier. For all practical purposes the United States is at war with Austria. The absence of a formal declaration is a detail. If Germany loses, Austria loses, and the United States is trying to make Germany lose. For a considerable length of time there was a disposition to make a distinction between Germany and Austria. Germany was supposed to be the wicked partner, and Austria the reluctant victim.

The New Emperor's Chance.

Nominally Austria began the war with the ultimatum to Serbia. Since then it has been established that Austria was governed by Germany. When the old Austrian Emperor died and his grand-nephew came to the throne it was supposed that some peace overtures might be made. The present Emperor of Austria was not a pro-German. In the earlier weeks of his reign he seemed to make it plain that he was running his own empire. Ministers who had shown a healthy independence of Berlin were promoted. It was hinted that the new Emperor was ready to make a separate peace, especially since Austria had been considered not as an active foe in London and Paris. This was the time when the war might have been ended by the Emperor of Austria. Austrians had not killed British or French subjects. There was no hatred against Austria.

He Sticks to Germany.

In the past few months the situation has changed. The new Emperor has thrown in his lot unreservedly with Germany. He has made it plain that the Central Empires will sink or swim together. The reason is, probably, that his troops were so hard pressed by the Italians that he found is necessary to pay for German help, and German help would be forthcoming only if he was ready to surrender his own judgment to that of the Prussian staff, and follow all the orders sent to him from Berlin. The Emperor has staked everything on a throw. If the Central Powers win he will win, in a moderate way. If they lose he loses all. The result of Austria's adherence to the German plans is that Britain, France and Italy have announced that the war cannot end without the dismemberment of Austria. The ramshackle Empire must be resolved into its constituent units, and if their plans are fulfilled Austria will become a more duchy or principality.

Austria Must Suffer.

An announcement to this effect was made in New York recently by Henry Franklin Bouilion, a Frenchman of English education, who spoke for the Allied Governments. Previously Arthur Balfour had said that the plans of the Allies did not contemplate a partition of Austria. This statement did not please Italy, which desired a considerable slice of territory now claimed by Austria. After Balfour's statement there was a conference among British, French and Italian representatives, and the result was that they came to an agreement concerning Austria. Henceforth no British or French statesman will arise and say that the dismemberment of the Austro-Hungarian kingdom is not an object in the war. From now on Austria will be regarded as an enemy even as Germany is regarded, and plans will be made for dividing the Empire according to the demands and needs of Italy and Serbia and Roumania.

To Be Divided.

The division may and will take place with regard to nationalities. Austria-Hungary is made up, imperially, from a number of races that detest the domination of the German at Vienna. Bohemia, for instance, the richest and most important principality in the empire, is neither Austrian nor Hungarian. In Hungary there are influential, even controlling, elements that, given a fair show at the ballot-box, would repudiate both Hungarians and Austrians. There is also the powerful tribe of Poles which dream of a revival of their nation. The Entente Powers, but especially Britain, France and Italy, have pledged themselves to carry on the war until all these aspirations are accomplished. They say that one of the conditions of peace is the dismemberment of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Thus Austria has put her head in the noose, and has made it impossible to conclude a separate peace with the Allies that does not contemplate the destruction of her empire.

CHARGED WITH STEALING DOG

The arm of the law is long. In the year 1914 Frank Londo, then of this city, was accused by Cyril Lech of stealing a hound dog. Before the police could garner Londo in he had disappeared and subsequently police circulars were sent out in accordance with the usual custom. As a result Londo languishes in the cells at the local police station. He was apprehended at Blackstock by Constable John Steiner of Uxbridge. In the morning, Frank Londo will appear before Police Magistrate Dumble in answer to a charge of stealing a hound in the year that the great war was precipitated upon humanity.

UNION IS ONLY FOR THE WAR

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—It is said by those who profess to know that the union government was formed upon the clear understanding among those entering it that there will be a dissolution of parliament immediately following demobilization after the war. The House of Commons which is to be elected upon the war-time franchise, will, therefore, be limited in its duration to the period of the war and the return of our soldiers.

The Military Discharge Depot at Quebec for the discharge of all invalids returning from overseas after active service will continue to be open throughout the winter. This was officially announced at Quebec on Thursday. In the summer season the invalids reach Quebec mostly by vessels that come direct from overseas, while in the winter they come to an Atlantic seaport, then proceed to Quebec by rail. This will be done this winter again. All through this summer the Quebec Discharge Depot has passed an average of one thousand men a month.

A cable has been received from Lieut. "Dick" Crisp, former Machine Gun Officer of the 93rd Battalion, and now with the Royal Flying Corps to the effect that he is leaving England for Egypt for duty with the Flying Corps. It will be remembered that Lieut. Crisp was badly hurt in an aeroplane accident some time ago. He has entirely recovered and his cable stated that he was feeling fine.

FLIGHT LIEUTENANT MISSING.

Fenelon Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—A cable has just been received at the Manse, Fenelon Falls, announcing that Flight Lieut. T. Vernon Lord is missing. Lieut. Lord is a son of Rev C. S. and Mrs. Lord, who have two other sons in the war.

Definite announcements about both matters will be made in a short time.

A number of Peterborough soldiers invalided home from overseas, arrived home on Saturday evening, and were welcomed by representatives of the city. Included in the party were Pte. R. L. with the gift that will outlast the Christmas season, and even the war itself—that will serve his comfort and convenience every day he is serving his country, and for many years of peace to follow.

WHATEVER his rank or branch of service—sapper or aviator—naval patrol or heavy artillery—that man whose life is so dear to you would be sure to prize your gift of a Gillette Safety Razor.

Good razors are scarce and hard to get in Europe to-day, so every Gillette is warmly welcomed at the Front. To the man who in peace enjoyed your standard of living, a clean, fresh Gillette shave every morning is a precious bit of home comfort in a life whose luxuries are few indeed. He'll appreciate your good judgment as well as your good-will if you choose a Gillette for his Christmas present. Or, if he already has one, send him a supply of blades.

Gillette Sets are light, compact, well cased for active service. Prices of razors start at $5.00. Blades cost $1.00 per box of one dozen. Ask your druggist, jeweller or hardware dealer to show you an assortment.

Mails are congested—shipments slow. Send his Gillette early!

DEATH OF EX-CHAMPION

"Bob" Fitzsimmons Failed to Rally From Attack of Pneumonia

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Robert Fitzsimmons, ex-champion heavyweight of the world, who died here early to-day, was taken sick last Tuesday while appearing in a vaudeville theatre and his ailment was at first diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning. Later it was discovered that he was suffering from double lobar pneumonia and doctors declared that he could not live. His remarkable vitality sustained him until Saturday when he lapsed into unconsciousness—from which he did not rally except at rare intervals. Fitzsimmons made a fortune in the ring, but his earnings soon vanished. He had a varied matrimonial career, having been married four times.

CRIME WAVE IN PETROGRAD.

Police Hunt 18,000 Offenders — Anarchy in Provinces.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Times to-day devotes a column to a dispatch from its Petrograd correspondent describing "the state of anarchy spreading throughout the Russian provinces." The dispatch mentions agrarian disorders in the districts of Mohilev and Saratov; rioting in Kharkov resulting in the arrest of fifty ringleaders, street fighting in Kursk, and illicit distilling at Veronesh, which led to wholesale drunkenness and severing of commuincation between Tashkent and Petrograd.

"In Petrograd," the correspondent adds, "conditions are little better, with the police searching for 18,000 criminals. Questionable resorts and night clubs are multiplying. Gambling is enormously on the increase, at one resort the minimum stake being 20,000 rubles. There are many accidents in the streets from motor cars colliding and tram cars are being derailed. Robberies are increasing. In fact, no one seems to care about anything."

The Government, he says, is combating the malady through the assistance of district committees.

Elections by Agreement.

The formation of the Union Government is having good effects over and above the concerting and consolidating of the nation's energies against the enemy. It is bringing out the best that is in politicians. We are glad to say that from both sides of politics there have been some recent examples of candidates putting the success of the Union Government's national undertaking above party and above self. In North Huron the Liberal-Conservative Association, acting upon the suggestion of Mr. James Bowman, the Conservative who sat for the riding in the last Parliament, appointed delegates to confer with the chief officers of the Liberal Association of the riding on the subject of organizing a convention of both parties to decide on a candidate to support the Union Government. There seems to be a strong feeling among Liberals in the riding in favour of avoiding an election if that can be done by the two parties joining together to select a Union Government candidate.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Carrick, who in the general elections of 1911 was returned by acclamation as the Conservative member for Thunder Bay and Rainy River, was nominated when overseas as the party's candidate in the next election. Yesterday he sent to the president of the Liberal-Conservative Association at Port Arthur a strong expression of his approval of the Union Government and an offer to resign the nomination in favour of Colonel Don Hogarth, D. S. O., so that thereby a war-time election in the constituency might be avoided. These examples of a self-effacing spirit in the interest of the Union Government and of unity in ridings are most praiseworthy. If that spirit spreads there should be many members of the next House returned by acclamation.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reply to "Cook's" letter, in last Saturday's Examiner, I beg to offer the following recipe for jellied chicken:

Put on chickens to cook, with just enough water to cover them. When tender take them out, and remove the bones and skin. Then cut them up into small dice. Soak one tablespoonful of Cox's Gelatine for half an hour; then dissolve it in the chicken stock. Season with pepper, salt and a little nutmeg. Now put the chicken back in the saucepan with the stock. Stir all together, and let it come through the boil. Press into moulds.

SUGAR SHORTAGE IS ONLY FORETASTE OF MORE FAMINE

American People Are Urged to Conserve Wheat, Meat, Fat and Sugar

(By George Martyn.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The sugar famine is just a foretaste of wheat and meat famines to follow, if American consumers don't heed conservation warnings of the Government, a high food administration official said to-day.

This will be one of the chief arguments used to enlist the country's 22,000,000 housewives in active wheat, meat, fat and sugar conservation during the food pledge campaign week of October 28. On the assumption that the arbiters of America's dining-rooms will make the requisite conservation of these foods, the Government is going ahead with its plans to supply the European Allies with wheat, meat, fat and sugar to make up their enormous shortage. Failure to restrict their use on American tables will bring acute shortages, as of sugar.

Last spring when M. Hovelacque, of the French War Mission, said that the world was confronted with famine, many intelligent people scoffed at the idea. The truth of Hovelaque's statement is daily coming to light.

Herbert Hoover also warns that there is a real world shortage of wheat, meat, fat and sugar. The saving possible is shown by the fact that twenty pounds of sugar a year is the least amount a human needs to keep fit. Americans eat ninety pounds a year. Eating an ounce less a day would end the famine and adequately supply both America and the Allies.

No Possible Terms Of Peace Are In Sight

Lloyd George However Tells Large Audience of Success of Britain's Campaign Against Subs

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 22.— Premier Lloyd George gave an enthusiastic audience of ten thousand persons in Albert Hall this afternoon, some of the reasons why the country was confident of victory and was "determined to prosecute the war to a victory." For the first time he revealed some of the statistics showing Britain's speed-up campaign to beat the submarine. "Our monthly tonnage loss now," Lloyd George asserted, "is a little over a third of the April figures. The submarines lost in ten months by the enemy total more than twice the number destroyed during the whole of last year.

"We have increased our shipbuilding four fold. America has done the same."

The audience wildly cheered the Premier when he declared emphatically: "This country is determined to prosecute the war to a victory."

The Albert Hall meeting was a mass gathering inaugurated as a nation-wide campaign of economy. Lloyd George took occasion at the outset of his speech to thank 120,000 members and workers on the War Savings committee for their economy campaign, which he said, had "saved from five to seven per cent. of the food supplies."

NO PEACE TERMS.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Oct. 22.—"I have scanned the horizon intently," said Premier Lloyd George to-day, "and can see no terms in sight which will lead to enduring peace. The only terms now possible would mean an armed truce, ending in an even more frightful struggle."

Lloyd George said Germany would make peace now only on terms which would enable her to benefit by the war. He asserted that would be encouragement to every buccaneering empire to repeat the experiment.

OCCUPYING GUELPH FARM.

First Batch of Invalided Men Have Taken Up Quarters There.

GUELPH, Oct. 22.—The old provincial prison farm at Guelph is no more like a jail. Friday fifty returned soldiers, the first of the invalided men to be treated here, arrived. They will be quickly followed by more, until 850 are housed here. Everything is ready, even to a theatre and bowling allies. All the industrial and vocational training formerly carried on at the reformatory will be continued for the returned men.

Lieut.-Col. Delamere is in command, and all the staff are first contingent men. Capt. (Dr.) Urie, of Guelph, who recently returned after a long service in Mesopotamia, is the medical officer in charge. As soon as the men are all here it is the intention to have a formal opening, with the Duke of Devonshire presiding.

ELECTION OVER BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—It is now certain that the general election will be over before Christmas, and December 17th, as already mentioned, is likely to be the date of polling in Canada. The work of organization is proceeding rapidly. No election ever before was held in Canada under similar conditions, and it is unlikely such conditions will ever present themselves again. Not only ordinary election machinery must be set in motion, but a complete new system devised for the holding of military and navy polls in France, Belgium, Greece and other remote places in the world, as well as on the high seas of Europe and North America. For this purpose hundreds of new ballot boxes and bags have been made. The operation of placing the new women voters' names on the list and striking off the disfranchised will cover a period of 28 days. Colonel Purney, who is in charge of the overseas voting, is proceeding overseas immediately.

PROSPERITY IS PROMISED.

Ottawa Thinks Military Service Act Will Help the National Condition in Future.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The prospect opened up for Canada by the Military Service Act is one of prosperity insured and safeguarded. The object of the Act is to reinforce our men at the front while keeping in Canada those whose presence here is required in order that necessary business may be carried on as well as those whose going overseas would lay a heavy burden on the country through the needs of dependents.

No heavy tax on the manpower of the country will be made. The Act calls for but 100,000 men, and authorities estimate that there are in the country 400,000 of the first class alone, unmarried men and widowers without children between the ages of 20 and 34. This class may well supply most of those needed.

Men in the first class called will be withdrawn for military service only as they are required by the military situation. The process will be gradual, thus leaving a portion of the men to follow their regular vocations until such time as they are required.

The cost of the war must be reduced to the minimum by the system which sends out of the country only those who can best be spared, from the standpoint of the nation as a whole. General prosperity must also be encouraged by the safeguarding of essential industries and the retention at their work of men whom the highest interests of the country require at home.

The advertiser who is deceived as to newspaper circulation is not entitled to much sympathy."

A FREAK TOMATO

Mr. E. W. Curtis, R.R. No. 9, Douro, just east of the "finger board," has left with The Examiner a freak tomato which is a great curiosity. It is a tomato—in the main, of the yellow variety, a lemon yellow. Its peculiarity is that on one side there is a signet of deep red extending from the blossom end to the stem, which occupies about one-quarter of the tomato. The edges of this red "inset" are as straight and sharply defined as if they were outlined with a rule. Possibly this tomato growing among red ones was inoculated partially by the pollen of the latter.

Mr. Curtis says his yellow tomatoes were grown by him from seed, the first time this year. They bore well and ripened well.

Vacancy In The Cabinet Is Not Yet Filled

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—At noon today the niche left in the Union Cabinet for Nova Scotia Liberal representation was sill unfilled; A. K. McLean, of Halifax, who arrived yesterday, secured access to Sir Robert Borden shortly before noon, but no announcement was given out. That Mr. McLean is coming in is taken for granted.

The writs for the election had not been issued at noon. The Council meets, however, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when it is expected that both matters will be disposed of. The election date will fall between the 17th and 22nd of December. That much appears to be certain this morning. The final setting of the date may serve to speed up the selection of candidates to run in the Union interests. Western Union Ministers are now engaged on that difficult and somewhat delicate task.

Capt. J. H. Burnham Has Returned To Peterboro'

"How's the political situation?" Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., was asked this afternoon.

"The national situation," corrected Capt. Burnham, as he folded up a copy of the Toronto Globe and proceeded to give his impressions of the corrected situation. The Federal member has just returned from a honeymoon trip, having surprised his immediate friends by becoming a benedict during a recent trip to the Capital.

Mr. Burnham said that all true Canadians now had ceased to talk politics in the ordinary sense, and were talking politics in a national sense. It was a fine thing to find men who had fought bitterly against each other for party opinions dropping all differences in the face of the foe.

Locally, Mr. Burnham said that he had no opinion to express. It was a free country. There might be opposition, he added, reflectively.

The Union Government, in the person of the Prime Minister, had endorsed his own candidature.

"The Union Government is the greatest event in the history of Canada," observed Mr. Burnham. "It represents the union of the foremost Liberal and Conservative leaders in a great effort to unify public opinion. Another important phase of the present situation is women's suffrage. The opponents of the Government state that the Government's programme is so advanced that it will require twenty years to carry it out. The programme outlined by Sir Robert Borden is the people's programme if ever there was one. The sentiment in Peterborough is of a most healthy kind," said Mr. Burnham in conclusion.

Music & Drama

EVERYWOMAN.

The popularity that the beautiful play, "Everywoman" gained during its visit here last season, was evidenced at the Grand on Saturday afternoon and evening, when two capacity audiences greeted the return of the wonderful production. Many of those who had attended had seen the offering before, but they found fresh beauty in it on this occasion, and were as enthusiastic as the first time they saw the play.

"Everywoman" is different to the usual theatrical offering. It is drama farce, musical comedy, all in one. Briefly, "Everywoman" is the story of every woman. It is hardly necessary to dilate upon the details of the action. Theatre-goers are familiar with "Everywoman's" adventures in search of Love. Her quest, accompanied by her attendants, Youth, Beauty and Modesty, leads her first to the play house, where she meets Bluff and Stuff, theatrical managers, Wealth Witless and many others, including Passion, whom she first mistakes for Love. Modesty leaves her during her career as an actress and afterward; when she is entertaining her new friends at a lively dinner, Beauty flies. Then Youth is killed by Time and "Everywoman" is an outcast on the great white way, with "nobody" as her friend. Finally she is led to follow Truth, and eventually finds Love in the home from which she had gone. The moral is so obvious that it does not need to be mentioned.

The title roll was most charmingly played at the afternoon performance by Miss Paul Shay, who was seen in the part here last year, and in the evening by Miss Helene Daine, who also invested the role with a delightful charm. The part is a most lengthy and difficult one and both proved equal to the demands that were made upon their histrionic ability. Percy Parsons showed a proper appreciation of the party of "Nobody," reading his lines with a dignity and grace that made his speeches most effective. Frank Kilday and F. J. McCarthy, as Bluff and Stuff, the theatrical managers," were responsible for most of the comedy of the play, and both did clever work in their roles. The balance of the company were equally accomplished and each part was in good hands.

The production was beautifully staged.

Mr. Larocque was born in Point Fortune, Quebec, 59 years ago, whence he came to Peterborough to reside 35 years ago. For 30 years he had conducted a hotel business in which and in all business dealings he, through his honest and upright principles, was a man respected and admired. In his home as well as amongst his wide circle of friends, he was greatly beloved and well known for his charitable and kindly acts, never turning an unheeding ear to any fellow creature's wants or troubles. In sporting circles he will be greatly missed, especially with the Hunt Club, whom he accompanied so many years to the north country. In religion he was a Roman Catholic and in politics a Liberal and was a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters. He leaves of his immediate family his wife, Delina Breault, his mother, Mrs. Larocque of this city, his brothers Bernard and Philip of Montreal, Archie of Toronto, Andrew of Edmonton, and Valois of Michigan, his sisters, Mrs. Gordon and Miss Elizabeth of this city, and Mrs. Morin, of Montreal.

MRS. ANTHONY HUNTER.

The news of the sudden death of Mrs. Anthony Hunter, at Elm Grove took farm, North Monaghan, on Saturday, will be heard with sorrow by a large community that has known her for so many years.

Mrs. Hunter has not been in the best of health for some months past being affected with trouble of the heart. On Saturday morning she was moving about the house as usual, till nine o'clock. Being missed at the dinner hour, and search being made she was found in her room lifeless in bed.

Sarah Ward Hunter, who was seventy-four years of age, was born in the township of Cavan, where she was united in marriage to the late Anthony Hunter, who predeceased her seven years ago. They came to reside in North Monaghan thirty-five years ago, on the farm where both spent the rest of their lives. Mrs. Hunter was a Presbyterian in religion, a most regular attendant of the Springville church, and she took a deep interest in its welfare. She was held in the highest respect in the neighbourhood though her chief interest and her chief activity centred in her house hold, where she was in a very effective sense, a home maker. She leaves behind her to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother, five sons, ex-Reeve Thomas M. Hunter, Albert J. Hunter and George, all of North Monaghan; W. A. Hunter, of San Francisco, and Joseph Hunter, of Portland, Oregon. Funeral on Tuesday, October 23rd, 1917, from the family residence, 11th concession, North Monaghan, at one o'clock p.m. Friends are requested to omit flowers.

RAILWAY BOARD TO CONSIDER GRADE CROSSINGS

The Peterborough Automobile Association has been notified by the Board of Railway Commissioners, Ottawa, that a hearing of the Board on the subject of grade crossings and the reduction in loss of life due to same, will be held in the Toronto City Hall on Tuesday morning, Oct. 23, 1917, at 10 o'clock. The local association are invited to send a representation, and the Municipality is also requested to do the same.

A meeting of the directors of the Motor Association was held Saturday evening at the office of G. A. Gillespie, the president. The City was represented at the meeting by Mayor Duffus and others. It was decided that owing to the great danger existing from grade crossings, even in our local district, that this matter should be followed up closely. Suggestions as to warning signs and signals, the removal of sign-boards, buildings, freight cars, etc., from proximity to grade crossings were adopted, and it was decided to send representatives from both the local Motor Association and the City to this hearing to protect, as far as possible, the interests of the people of Peterborough, including the motorists, from the dangers of unprotected grade crossings.

ALLIES LAUNCH NEW ATTACK

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—Between Draeibank and Polecapelle, on the Flanders Front, the French and British troops began a new attack yesterday.

A Lost Trade Secret.

It has frequently happened that valuable trade secrets have been lost beyond recovery. For instance, the best watch oil, it appears, cannot be obtained today because the secret process of mixing it perished with the inventor. It is said that the last quart of this famous fluid was sold for $200, and that was thirty-five years ago. Since then every effort has been made to analyze the product in an attempt to reproduce the oil, but without success. The man who made it and who alone knew its composition died, and, it further appears, not even his name or the place of his burial is known. He never revealed to any one the details of his process, and it was not until after his death that the real value of the oil was appreciated.

The Eskimo Skin Canoe.

The kayak, or skin canoe, of the Eskimo was in use on the coast of northern Russia two or three centuries ago, according to Dr. MacRitchie, F. S. A. (Scot). Evidence of this is obtained from statements made by Burrough in 1556 and from the chronicles of a Danish expedition to Vaigatz in 1653. It was further shown that three kayaks were captured off the northern shores of Scotland about the end of the seventeenth century. One of these is still preserved in the museum of Marischal college, Aberdeen. An important fact is the occasional presence of a kayay-using race of Finns or Finnmen in the Orkney islands during the last twenty years of the seventeenth century, as testified to by three writers of that period.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

To-kyo.

It is remarkable how many persons, some of whom may lay claim to education and familiarity with Japan, persist in misspelling the name of Japan's capital. Of course if government officials and western diplomats in Japan insist on spelling it To-ki-o, western people, ignorant of the Japanese language, cannot be blamed for pronouncing it in three syllables (To-kee-yo), much to the amused disgust of the Japanese. The Japanese ideographs are only two and are best represented by the two romaji syllables To-kyo, pronounced with a very slight emphasis on the first syllable.

Hastings' Tanning Company's Plant Destroyed By Fire

Damage is Estimated at Two Hundred Thousand Dollars—Two Hundred Men Out of Employment

HASTINGS, Oct. 23.—The plant of the Hastings Tanning Company was destroyed by fire early this morning. The damage is estimated at two hundred thousand dollars, including a large stock of finished leathers. Two hundred men are out of employment. The Breithaupt Tanning Company of Kitchener controlled the Hastings concern.

Has 7 Brothers With Germans, 7 With French

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 23.—With fourteen first cousins with the Allies in the war, all enlisting in England, Arthur Davis of the Plasterers' Union said he expected to join them ultimately in the trenches.

"My family record isn't unusual for England, however," he said. "I know a surveyor in Seattle whose family record is unique. He has seven brothers in the German army and seven in the French army, fighting each other. They lived in Alsace-Lorraine. The seven fighting for the Kaiser were sent to fight the Russians because, like all other Alsatians, they refused to fight their own people in France."

Dandruff Soon Ruins The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

BRITISH NAVAL INQUIRY CALLED

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A British naval inquiry is to be held to investigate the recent escape of two German cruisers following the raid of Wednesday last.

Every Man to His Job!

The man who has education, but who lacks the moral courage to do battle vigorously, who will not go to the mat at the drop of the handkerchief whenever a matter of principle is involved regardless of the size of his opponent, and who will not fight doggedly—employing every resource which the ethics of the business game allow, keeping at the same time a cool head and a clear judgment—had better be content with those quiet paths which may be traversed with perfect safety in starched collar and white cuffs.

The Most Formative Years.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer says:

"Fathers must realize, as well as mothers, that the first five years of the child's life are the most important in the child's development. It is then that he is most formative, most impressionable. It is then that he needs most serious and careful thought from both parents. And if the child is properly handled through this period half the battles of the future man in the child are won."

Served Him Right.

"Serves me right for pretending."

"Huh?"

"I talked a lot of highbrow talk to my new girl, and now she has gone and bought me a set of Emerson's essays for a birthday present. I could have used a fancy vest."

Bad Habits.

Shun bad habits. Every evil and wasteful habit draws upon our strength and resources without making any proper return. On the other hand, every task faithfully done, every responsibility manfully borne in the path of duty, steadies us like well bestowed ballast.

In the Wealthiest Homes as well as in the most humble domicile, cocoa has become a necessity — in the first instance because of its invigorating and nourishing effect, in the second instance from its economical and high food value. Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 325 cars, with 6,352 cattle, 334 calves, 1,831 hogs, and 2,616 sheep and lambs.

The market was again overloaded with a heavy run of common rough cattle. Loads of good to choice butcher steers and heifers were extremely scarce among a total offering of over 6,000 head of cattle.

Owing to the comparative scarcity of good quality cattle trade was very slow and prices looked anything but secure. At the close it was found that there had been very little, if any, change. The few good loads had sold about steady with last week. Choice fat cows were steady to firm. Canners and cutters steady.

Light rough stockers easy. Choice steady.

The feature of the day's market was a sharp come down in the price of hogs. Packers were bidding from $16.75 to $17 fed and watered. Yesterday's sales were mostly at the latter figure.

PERSHING'S SPRINT

A Foot Race Forced by the Taunt of a Navaho Indian.

IT HAD A CURIOUS CLIMAX.

The Redskin Athlete Was a Fleet Runner, but the "White Captain," In Spite of a Sprained Ankle Handicap, Won the Contest in a "Crawl."

At the time General John J. Pershing held the rank of captain in the army he on one occasion proved himself superior to the best Navaho athlete in a foot race.

The story is an interesting one Pershing was stationed near the Navaho and Moqui reservations in Arizona. In 1890, when General Morgan, then commissioner of Indian affairs visited these Indians, Pershing was in command of a small escort which went with him to Keams' canyon to attend a council of the tribes. He was accompanied by Captain Chauncey Baker, who had been his classmate at West Point.

While waiting for the council to begin they sat on a large stone watching the Indians at their games. The Navahos were wrestling, racing on foot, racing their ponies and pole vaulting. It was a holiday occasion, and the Indians were enjoying themselves hugely.

One finely formed Indian saw Pershing sitting on the stone and, approaching, said something to him in the Navaho tongue. The Navaho interpreter Chee, who was with the party, was asked what the Indian wanted.

"He is challenging Captain Pershing to wrestle with him," said Chee.

Pershing looked the Indian over and observing the grease upon his body replied to Chee:

"Tell him that he is too dirty to wrestle with a white man."

When this was interpreted the Indians who had gathered around sent up a shout of derision at the expense of the Navaho athlete. The latter was not slow to reply, saying:

"Tell the white captain I'll run a foot race with him, and if I am too dirty all he has to do is to keep ahead of me."

The Indians now laughed at Pershing, and Chee explained to him that he would have to run the foot race or lose caste with the Indians, who appeared greatly to admire him.

Pershing accepted the challenge and preparations were made for the race. A triangular course was laid out, with three stakes 100 feet apart. Pershing stripped to the waist and put on a pair of moccasins so that he could run with greater ease.

Judges were chosen and a toss of a coin gave the Indian the inside track, so that he had a few feet the advantage in clearing the stakes. Both men started in lively fashion, but, as Pershing afterward explained, he purposely kept just far enough behind so that the Navaho could barely see him out of the tail of his eye. This prevented the Indian from setting too hard a pace and at the same time enabled Pershing to use the Indian as pacemaker.

As the two sped toward the first stake not a foot's difference was discernible between them. They appeared to be running almost abreast. Once or twice the Indian made a spurt, but Pershing always kept up with him and never undertook to pass him.

They rounded the first stake with the Indian still on the inside and then started for the second stake. When half way Pershing increased his speed and the Indian, fearing that he meant to try to pass him at the stake, did likewise. Just as Pershing expected, the Navaho shot slightly beyond the stake, and Pershing was enabled to come on the inside, thereby gaining an advantage of several feet on the homeward run.

Now, Pershing had previously sprained his ankle, and his only concern in the race was caused by a fear that his ankle might give way. The speed of the two men as they ran for the home stake was tremendous, but Pershing maintained the lead until the expected happened.

When within about ten feet of the home line his ankle turned and he was seen to fall in a heap, and the spectators breathlessly watching the contest cried out in consternation. It all happened in a moment, it seemed, but somehow Pershing doubled up like a ball and turned a complete somersault and landed across the line several feet ahead of the Indian.

Then there was a bedlam of shouting. The Indians unhesitatingly pronounced Pershing the victor, and the elation of the white men was only exceeded by their solicitude for Pershing's weakened ankle. The defeated Indian was jeered and taunted unmercifully by the other Navahos.

They had one particular collection of Indian unpronounceables which they applied to him. Pershing and Baker got Chee to interpret it. Chee explained that the Indian had always been called the Navaho athlete, but now his comrades had lengthened his name and were calling him "the Navaho athlete who was beaten in a foot race by the white captain crawling."

Warned.

Betty—Jack says he will stop drinking if I marry him. Mrs. Wyse—Well, be careful, dear. It's easier for him to begin again than it is for you to get unmarried.

LOOK SUCCESSFUL.

Have Confidence In Yourself and Show It In Your Manner.

To be successful you must look successful. If you will carry yourself with a self confident air it inspires others with the belief in your ability and your success. You get to believe in it yourself. You begin to walk as if you were master of yourself. You will believe in your ability to do things, and you are confident of results.

It does not take a keen observer to pick out a successful dealer. If he is prosperous every step, every movement, every look, indicates it. There is a great deal in assuming the part of the character you desire to play in this drama of life.

There is nothing negative about the positive man. He is a success, and, like Hercules, he has conquered the moment he looks upon you. This is personal magnetism. Cultivate it, then you will not need bolstering up. Learn to stand alone. Your very silence should carry power. Learn the value of reserve force.

Self confidence is the power to marshal all the faculties and unite their strength in one mighty cable. It matters not what your talents may be, what your abilities or ambition may be, if you are lacking in self confidence you can never use them to the best advantage. Self trust is as necessary as ability.

Concentrate your facilities and your good qualities. Carry yourself with a self confident air and you will win still more confidence. Failure or success has its true worth in these two little words, "I can't." or "I will." Look successful!

TRAVEL IN THE AIR.

The Safety That Goes With Transportation by Aeroplane.

It is a new idea that the aeroplane is a safe means of transportation in safe hands, yet it is an idea that we must firmly get into the popular mind. The average citizen is still frightened at the prospect of leaving the ground and having no support except the air itself. Yet at the speed which we expect an aeroplane to maintain—seventy or eighty miles an hour—there is no means of transportation that is so safe.

The obstructions that cause accidents with trains and automobiles do not exist for flying craft. A locomotive has to follow a definite track, which may cause a frightful calamity. The aeroplane is not so circumscribed. Its tracks are wherever it wishes to go. There are no obstructions in the air—unless we regard "air pockets" as such—no bridges to cross, no mountains to penetrate, no signals to run by and no switches to be misplaced.

Or compare this new craft with the rough road of the automobile. The slightest mistake or even inattention on the part of the driver, going, say, forty or fifty miles an hour, may hurl the machine over a precipice or overturn it on an embankment. But such a lapse on the part of an aviator has no such deplorable results. There are no precipices to fall from and no obstructions to collide with.

The aeroplane is even safer than some forms of water travel. The motorboat, going at a speed of forty miles an hour or even slower, is a more risky form of transportation than an aeroplane. If such a boat strikes even a small obstruction, such as a floating plank, its side is punctured and it sinks in a few seconds. But there are no such dangers in the air.

Marines.

Marines—soldiers serving on shipboard—date back to the year 1664, when an order in council, dated Oct. 16, authorized 1,200 soldiers to be raised and formed into a regiment. More regiments were later on formed, and in the latter years of the French wars they numbered 32,000. The marines are today a feature of every navy, and in most countries officers of the marines are equal in rank with those in the army and navy.

The center of the dial of the clock on Philadelphia's city hall tower is 361 feet 1½ inches from the ground level. The length of the minute hand is 16 feet 8 inches. The weight of the hand is 225 pounds. The weight of the dial frame with glass is five and one-half tons. The clock is equipped with a pneumatically operated thermostat for controlling an electric governor provided to protect it from extremes of temperature. The steel pendulums are inclosed in cast iron cases to protect them from magnetic influences.

"Solid Gold."

Commercially speaking, the term "solid gold" is a misnomer, since such gold has not been used for many, many years. Some of the ancient Roman jewelry and some of that of the renaissance period was, indeed, made of pure gold, worked up by hand with the crudest of tools, but since the old days there has been a constantly increasing employment of alloys, for the reason that jewelers found that the harder the gold was rendered by good alloys the greater its wearing qualities and the more secure, therefore, was the setting of the gems it contained. Nowadays jewelry is of 18, 14 or 10 carats, according to the design and character of the article, and it is much more frequently 10 than 18 carats.

Old Time Spelling Reform.

Centuries ago spelling reformers published whole works in the "rational spelling" and left an interested or uninterested public to take them or leave them, as witness the following, published in 1585: "AEsopz Fable's in tru Orto-graphy with Grammar-notz Heryuntoo ar al'so joolned the short sentencez of the wyz Cato imprinted with lyk form and order; both of which Autorz ar translated out of Latin intoo English. By William Bullokar."

Fixed Ammunition.

It is to Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, whose reign began in 1611, that history gives credit for the invention of fixed ammunition. In his cartridges the bullets and the charge were united in a paper case. It was not, however, until 1850 that the first successful metallic cartridge was patented by an American.

He Didn't Mind.

Mr. Hardhead—I have called, sir, to ask you for the hand of your daughter. Old Gentleman (with emotion)—She is the only child I have, and her mother is gone. Mr. Hardhead (hastily)—Oh, that's no objection, sir, I assure you.

Apparently So.

"I can't find that record by Sousa's band. Do you know what became of it?"

"No. I guess somebody stole a march on us."

The Egotist.

She—Who would you rather be if you were not yourself? He—I can't say that I have any second choice.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"Bar the door," she whispered.

With fluttering hands the mulatto did as she was bid. Pedro, with a quick glance about the room, vanished into the shadows. Ramona darted to the bedroom door, and drawing out gently to, locked it, and placed the great iron key in her bosom. Then she fell upon her knees before the crucifix and began to pray.

A grinning face suddenly appeared at one of the grated windows. It was the Portugee, his eyes reddened with liquor. In the faint light that came from the hanging lamp, his features seemed distorted until they resembled some hideous and grotesque mask.

"Ah, sweet mistress. At your devotions early, I see. You are so devout. A little surprise, is it not?" He smiled at her knowingly through the iron bars.

Ramona struggled to her feet. Her trembling knees scarce served to support her.

"The Firebrand! He has come back " she gasped.

"Ay. We made port an hour ago."

"Where is he?"

"Do not fret, sweet mistress. He will be here soon enough. I left him at the tavern and came on ahead, having private business with you."

"You have no business here, Portugee."

"Why not? Are you not glad to see me?"

"What do you want?" she asked pitcously. "What do you want?"

"All in good time. First, I would inquire as to your lover. How is he, this morning?"

She recoiled from him in terror.

"What do you mean " she asked.

"A pretty tale, by my faith, told me a while ago by Mistress Devereuv, whom I met by chance in the town. She tells me you have had a lover under your roof these three weeks."

"She lies!"

"So I told her, but she swears by all the saints the tale is true. She was watching the house, to-night, she tells me, and saw you in the fellow's arms. Now she is seeking the Firebrand, to inform him. I sent her the wrong way." He chuckled with saturnine glee. "I shall not betray you, my angel, if so be you treat me well. Is the Puritan better this morning?"

"I know nothing of any Puritan," Ramona cried, facing him with clenched hands.

"Do you think I would believe you, after what Mistress Devereux has told me? There is somethingan your manner, sweet jewel, that tells me she spoke the truth. Come, if she has lied, open the door, and let be look into your bedroom." He pressed his grinning face tightly against the bars of the window.

"It is a lie, I say," Ramona muttered in desperation. No avenue of escape seemed open to her.

The Portugee shrugged his shoulders with a careless laugh.

"It's all one to me," he said, "but when the Firebrand knows——"

"Dios!" she exclaimed, clutching at the side of the window for support.

"You would not likt that, eh? No—ro. I shall not telel him. But if I do not, it may be that you will grant me some favours, eh? Speak quickly, though. There is little time."

She realized better than he the truth of this.

"What do you want of me?" she asked.

"A little thing—such a little thing. Open the door, before it is too late, and let your lover go free. Then we will go away together—just you and me. There is a boat close at hand, on the beach. We will lose no time. A quick passage to Trinidad, and then ——"

"No! No!" Ramona could not even pretend to hide the loathing she felt for the man whose face pressed so tightly the cunningly wrought grating of the window.

"Then the Puritan dies," the Portugee said. "I offer you this chance to save him, not because the fellow's skin means aught to me, but because, sweet mistress, I want you. Decide quickly. You have small time for hesitation."

The situation as he set it forth, seemed indeed without remedy, save in the way he offered. She must sacrifice herself, to save Barton's life. There was nothing else that she could do. For one ghastly moment she hesitated, then visions of Ormiston, in his red wrath, rose above the whirl of impressions that swept through her brain. She would do as the Portugee asked.

Yet even as she began to speak to him, telling him what she had decided, he was gone. So suddenly did the grinning face vanish from the opening of the window that for a moment she wondered whether the whole affair had not been a horrible dream. And then, above the dull silence of the night there came to her the sound of voices, of laughter, hard and boisterous, of the trampling of feet. Now indeed she knew why the Portugee had slunk away so quickly. Ormiston had come, and even the opportunity to sacrifice herself, that a moment before had terrified her, seemed priceless, now that it had been taken away. No courage, no hope remained to help her meet this situation. She stood utterly helpless, staring at the barred door, while outside the noise made by the approaching party grew until its clamour, increased a hundredfold by her fears, seemed almost to deafen her.

Almost at once there came a thunderous beating on the door, then in an angry voice she heard Ormiston calling to her.

"Open!" he cried. "Open! Hell's fire! Are we to stand here half the night?"

CHAPTER XI.

It was a grim and rather sorry-looking crew that clustered about Ormiston as he mounted the steps of the house, and began to beat a tattoo upon the stout oak door with the hilt of his rapier. The marks of conflict were upon them, and their tarrying at the Turk's Head had not improved either their appearance or their tempers. All, in fact, were more or less drunk.

Graves, his arm in a sling, carried a lantern, with which he swayed to and fro in imminent danger of measuring his length in the dust of the road. Long Rodgers, a great cut across his cheek, stumbled along in sleepy good humour, roaring out snatches of his one and only song.

De Rocheville, ever the dandy, in a laced shirt of immaculate whiteness, seemed ready to take his place at some court ball. It was a source of amazement to his companions that he could present so unruffled an exterior, and yet measure swords with the best of them. Tench's head was circled by a cotton bandage. A Spanish pike had come near to splitting his crown. He puffed continually at his short clay pipe and swore beneath his breath at Ormiston, because the latter had dragged them forth from the tavern at this hour of the morning.

The Firebrand, save for a slight cut on one arm, was unwounded, but in a bitter temper. He had not yet seen Mistress Devereux; although Ramona did not know that, but a woman at the tavern had aroused his suspicions by a chance remark; it had been the cause of his sudden determination to visit the house. A vast amount of rum, which he rarely drank save when victory made sobriety an unnecessary virtue, had rendered him savage, quarrelsome, impatient of all opposition or delay. Even the fact that he found the door barred against him proved a source of exasperation, although he well knew that to secure it was Ramona's invariable habit, when he was away. That it was not thrown open instantly, in response to his first summons, still further enraged him. He drove the rapier hilt against the panels until they seemed ready to crack apart.

"Open, you lazy wenches!" he roared, "before I break in the door."

Ramona supposed from this that Ormston's mission was to seek the man who had dared find shelter beneath his roof. No sound came from the bedroom. In spite of the clamor without, she concluded that the Puritan was still asleep. Perhaps the thick door she had closed between the rooms explained this.

Today's Is Enough; Never Mind Yesterday's or Tomorrow's.

A wayfarer carried a heavy sack, under which he toiled and complained unceasingly. From none could he get help or comfort.

And as he slowly journeyed, groaning under his burden, the Angel of Opportunism came to him and spoke kindly, saying:

"Brother, what carriest thou?"

The man answered surlily, "My worries."

The angel smiled pityingly upon him and said, "Let us look into thy burden and examine thy worries."

And so they looked in. But, lo, the sack was empty!

"Why, surely," cried the man, "there were two great worries, too heavy for man to bear! But—ah, yes, I had forgotten—one was a worry of yesterday, and so it is gone."

"And the other?"

"That—why, that was a worry of tomorrow, and it—it has not yet come."

Then the angel smiled with infinite pity, saying:

"Hearken. He who bows himself down under the worries of yesterday and tomorrow wears himself out for naught. But he who carries only the worries of today has no need of a sack for his sorrows. If thou wilt cast this black thing aside and give all thy strength and cheer and courage to the things of today real misfortune never can burden thee."

Wondering, the man did as the angel commanded.

And as he took up his journey and went lightly, swiftly on, his heart and his hands were free to relieve many a brother wayfarer of his burdens and to pluck sweet fruits and flowers along the wayside.

And when he came at last to the setting of the sun it was with smiles and a song.

Soot as a Fertilizer.

Amateur gardeners recommend the use of soot as a fertilizer. Scotch soot, which is generally used in Great Britain as a fertilizer, is from coal that differs greatly from the hard coal used in the eastern United States. Soot from our hard coal must be used with caution around plants or it may do more harm than good, particularly immediately after the application. A sad experience several years ago leads a gardener to warn others so they may not be obliged to gain their knowledge by a like unfortunate experience.

Chattel Mortgages.

A man who gives a chattel mortgage should always examine the document carefully to make sure it is not "on demand."

Sharp money lenders who loan funds on chattel mortgages often try to have this clause inserted, and when it is the borrower may expect to part with his chattels at almost any moment. It is a trick by which advantage is often taken of the unwary.

Jam Started as Medicine.

Jam in its early days seems to have been regarded as possessing medicinal properties. Galt in "Annals of the Parish" notes "a new luxury that got in among the commonalty about 1760. By our young men that were sailors going to Jamaica and the West Indies heaps of sugar and coffee beans were brought home, while many, among the cabbages in their yards, had planted berry bushes, which two things happening together the fashions of making jam and jelly came to be introduced into the village. It was found that jelly was an excellent medicine for a sore throat and jam a remedy as good as London candy for a cough or a cold or a shortness of breath." Did it ever occur to you that "jam" was abbreviated from Jamaica?

When Hubby Fooled Her.

Mrs. Scatterbrain was constantly bemoaning her lot. Her husband, who was entitled to place half the letters of the alphabet after his name, had the most treacherous memory in the world. He could remember nothing his wife told him, in spite of bits of string around his finger and knots in his handkerchief. Only once did Mr. Scatterbrain remember to do his wife's bidding.

Said a friend to Mrs. Scatterbrain:

"I think you are getting as bad as your hubby. I got a note from you yesterday dated a whole week ahead."

"Heavens!" gasped Mrs. Scatterbrain, trembling with the shock. "My husband must have posted it the very day I gave it to him!"

Womanly Retort.

"Women are terribly inconsistent," protested Mr. Kwibbles.

"John," replied his wife, "you know the poet says, 'Consistency's a jewel.' And you told me yourself that much jewelry is not good form."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

His Legacy

It Was Not Property

By AGNES G. BROGAN

The December afternoon was drawing to a close when John Gordon decided suddenly to go out to the house. All day the sun had been shining, but now coming shadows warned him that he had not much time to spare. He had postponed the ordeal as long as he could, for surely it would be an ordeal to spend precious time plugging along on a suburban trolley, transferring at some wayside country station and then, maybe, if no vehicle could be obtained, walking the rest of the way uphill.

This much he knew: The house was situated upon the top of the hill, the village straggling at its foot. But why James Laidlaw, deceased, had seen fit to leave the house with its belongings to John Gordon's own mother he could not understand. That the eccentric old man had been a youthful friend he had often heard, and now that his mother had also passed into the great beyond John Gordon must accept the property as the next of kin and incidentally go out to look it over.

The trolley was late, of course, and he restlessly strode up and down the platform. This trip was a nuisance and no doubt the property scarce worth the trouble. Time was when John Gordon had not been so indifferent to country homes or legacies.

He was weary of superficiality, absorbed and buried in business. The second wait, at the tiny cross country station, was doubly annoying, and, his destination finally reached, no vehicle was obtainable. In fact, John Gordon was the only passenger to leave the train at Elmhurst. The station agent inconically directed him "hillward," and, turning up his greatcoat collar, he bent his face to the wind.

He had not gone a dozen yards when the sudden storm was on him. Snow, heavy, yet as thick as down, fell in swirling clouds. But the key was in his pocket. He had come thus far on his troublesome journey, and he would not turn back. A few moments before the storm had descended he had glimpsed the house, high and solitary upon its hill. It seemed a place not to be lightly despised. He muttered an imprecation as the wind of the height battled him back; but, after all, the distance was not so great as it seemed, and he stood breathless upon the deserted front porch.

He laughed a little at the incongruity of the situation as he fitted the key into the lock. The heavy snow had changed the daylight to gloaming, and he determined to go through the house as quickly as possible, returning to town by the next train. With difficulty the unused door gratingly opened, and Gordon found himself in a wide, silent, ghostly hall, ghostly because of the white draped furniture. Evidently nothing had been disturbed, awaiting his coming and delayed settlement of the estate. He shivered even in his greatcoat as he hastily inspected the rooms upon either side of the hall, then ran upstairs. Here the almost impenetrable darkness caused him to grope to the window, vainly trying to peer through the pane. The snowstorm had turned into a blizzard, hiding the lights of the village below. To start back now would be folly; to stay in this deadly vault of a house, worse.

The telephone, of course, was disconnected, but even if available what person would venture to come to his assistance up through this blinding, cutting storm? John Gordon sank back upon a damp couch to smoke and think things over; useless in this darkness to continue his investigation of the house. A drowsiness came over him, and in real terror lest he should sleep in the freezing atmosphere he moved cautiously toward the hall. Here another stairway confronted him. There had been a tower room, he remembered. Perhaps from there he might be able to see the direction of the lights below.

Numbed with cold, he reached the upper landing, then paused, blinking his eyes at a spark of light which, like a firefly, came for a moment but to disappear. Surely this was an afternoon of uncanny adventure. Again the spark shone high upon the wall.

"Who is there?" called John Gordon, and immediately smiled at the nervous folly of his own question. With coldly shaking fingers he lighted and steadied a match, then another.

"Jove!" he exclaimed and stood gaping into the darkness. High upon the opposite wall, on a ledge of what seemed to be a bookcase, dangled the hide of a white polar bear. It took a third match to satisfy him that the beast's gaping jaws and glaring eyes were artificial. Then directly from behind the white shaggy head a small electric torch was leveled at him.

"Oh!" breathed a relieved feminine voice. "You are the real estate agent, of course. I did have such a scare."

John Gordon was still too astonished to speak.

"You have matches," continued the girlish voice. "Please, will you light the gas?"

"Gas?" queried the man stupidly.

"Certainly." Her tone was impatient. "I know you suggested bringing matches along when you phoned the meter was in, but I forgot. Please hurry."

Mechanically John Gordon sought and found a chandelier. The tower room was flooded with light. He rubbed his eyes and looked again. Ensconced in the white bear skin upon the very top of the bookcase ledge was seated a girl! And such a girl! Her eyes sparkled back as though the numbing cold, the impossible situation, were all part of a joyous adventure.

"I've been nearly frozen to death, and so I confiscated the bear rug," she explained. "You promised over the phone to call for me here at 5, but I suppose the sudden storm detained you. I was up on the ladder, going over the books, when it left me in darkness. There was nothing else to do, so I sat where I was, reading by the light of my torch. Those wonderful old books are interesting enough to make one forget everything. Now," she ended abruptly, "will it be possible for us to go back?"

"I am afraid not yet," John Gordon answered perplexedly.

With a quick motion the girl discarded the fur rug and came nimbly down the bookcase ladder.

"We will light the grate, then," she said and put out her hand for a match. As the fire curled about the gas logs he came eagerly toward the warmth, bending with wrinkled brows to study the face of the girl. Unconscious of his puzzled and admiring scrutiny, she removed her hat, the firelight glinting upon the soft waves of her hair. She seemed to be an unusual young person of decided action.

"Now," she said, "as we will be obliged to remain here for a time, we can talk things over. I've brought a little lunch." Deftly she was arranging sandwiches upon a box cover.

"Have one?" she smiled.

John Gordon smiled too. Dreaming or waking, real or unreal, the discouraging adventure of an hour ago had turned, fairy-like, to one of pleasure. "Thank you," he replied. "And now may I ask just how you come to be here"—he waved an arm about—"here in the tower room of this deserted, ghostly old house?"

The girl's eyes opened wide. "Why, I told you," she said, "I came after the books."

"Books?" It seemed the lawyer could now only repeat, parrot-like, her words.

She nodded impatiently. "But I had no idea there were so many. It will be impossible to remove them at present. You gave me no idea of their number or value over the phone. Whatever"—she gazed dreamily into the fire—"possessed Uncle Laidlaw to leave his books to father and the house to that rich lawyer's mother? Now, if he'd left us the house and the lawyer the books—well," that would have been more reasonable."

John Gordon leaned forward in sudden understanding. So this was the solution of the problem. He wished he had finished his reading of the will.

"Your father"— he began.

"Is an invalid," she finished.

"We have such a tiny apartment in the city. This country air would have done him so much good. And the garden—oh, what a garden I should have made of it in summer!" The girl sighed. "When does the lady take possession, Mr. Perkins?" she asked.

John Gordon stared, then silently accepted the real estate agent's name. "I—I haven't heard," he replied. "I'll have to talk things over with you later."

"And the books may remain for a time?" she asked him.

"Yes," he said.

The girl jumped up, going over to the window. "There's light at last!" she cried. "And the storm is going over. Do you think we dare venture yet? Father will be so anxious. He is alone until I come. There are just we two."

Half regretfully John Gordon followed to look over her shoulder to where the lights now shone below. "Can you walk it?" he asked anxiously. She had already started down the stair.

As the key turned rustily in the front door lock the two stood for a moment looking into each other's eyes. Into John Gordon's heretofore empty heart came a feeling of great and protective tenderness. He held out his arm, and quietly the girl placed her own within it; then downward they started through the drifts.

At the station she gave him her hand in farewell, but he was going into the city tonight, he told her, so they traveled together. Next day came a letter, which Miss Laidlaw, with glowing cheeks, read aloud to her father.

Mr. Gordon (so the agent Perkins wrote) upon being consulted as to the disposal of his property suggested that a caretaker be found, with salary to cover expenses. He himself did not care to trouble with the estate, so if Mr. Laidlaw and his daughter were willing to accept the position indefinitely—

"Willing!" cried the girl, and joyously hastened to write their acceptance.

It was necessary many times throughout the winter for the agent to make his way to the Elmhurst home to see that all was satisfactory. It seemed also necessary for Miss Laidlaw herself to drive him after each visit down the hillside to the station, and into the life of John Gordon came the realization that all service has not its mercenary motive, and into his heart came a sweeter realization still.

It was when the flower borders of the garden were blooming gloriously that he approached, almost timidly, the bending figure of the girl.

Reading the unmistakable message of his eyes, she arose suddenly, waiting before him.

"Dear," he said gently, "will you take me into your care, as you have taken this neglected garden? I love you—love you so!" And when his arms were close about her John Gordon breathed a sigh of real content.

"My true legacy!" he murmured happily. And then he told her all about it.

WHERE DUTY CALLED.

He Was "at the Front" When the Crisis Came, and He Won.

In the spring of 1913 occurred the disastrous floods in Ohio. Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, could not rest content with merely directing relief from his office in Baltimore. He rushed immediately to the scene of suffering and destruction, where he remained till the danger was past.

A New York banker, whose influence and friendship were much needed by the Baltimore and Ohio, ran down to Baltimore. He was a man to whom time is money—in capital letters—and he had a positive date with Daniel Willard. But when he reached the railroad offices the president was gone.

"He's at the front," said one of his secretaries and explained how the chief had gone out to Camden station on the preceding night. A message canceling the engagement had been sent to New York—Willard is most punctilious in such matters—but it had failed to arrive.

The banker frowned. He was not in the habit of hurrying to see railroaders who were seeking loans and then having them fail to keep appointments with him. But when he was back in his own office the next day and the newspaper extras were telling of the catastrophe that had swept over Ohio he sent a personal message to the president of the Baltimore and Ohio. It told him that he might draw for as much money as he needed to put his railroad on its feet again.

"He's at the front."

That was the thing that had hit the Wall street man clean between the eyes.—Everybody's.

Our Murder Record.

For every million inhabitants Canada has each year three murders; Germany, under five; Great Britain, ten; France, fourteen; Belgium, sixteen. In the United States there are every year 129 murders per million inhabitants. In one single year over 11,000 men, women and children are murdered. One murderer in seventy-five pays the death penalty, and for the rest an average imprisonment of seven years settles the score

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

BUILDING AN ARMY

Infantry the Base Upon Which the Service Is Reared.

THE MAIN FIGHTING FORCE.

Upon the Numerical Strength of the Foot Soldiers Depends the Size of the Other Branches—Vital Importance of Industrial Resources.

In every army of the world the foot soldiers, or infantry, form the main fighting force. All other branches of the service are organized in ratio to the strength of the infantry. Thus the number of cavalrymen enlisted depends upon the numerical strength of the infantry organization. For this reason let us consider the numerical units by which infantry strength is estimated.

First there is the squad made up of eight men under the command of a corporal. A platoon made up of five squads and comprising from forty to fifty men is under the command of a sergeant or lieutenant. A company comprising two, three or four platoons is under the control of a captain. A company's roll contains from 80 to 200 men. Four companies make up a battalion under the command of a major, while three battalions form a regiment led by a colonel. Three regiments form a brigade under the command of a brigadier general, and three brigades make a division. Three divisions, if they represent various branches of the service, are grouped into a corps or field army. The division is commanded by a major general, as is also the field army.

"The army" in its entirety consists of as many field armies as a country is able to muster, plus the entire military organization and its accessories.

There are a few slight differences between the cavalry and infantry organizations, for the infantry company in cavalry terms becomes a troop and the battalion becomes a squadron.

In the artillery branch of the service there are several subdivisions. At the present time we hear much about the coast artillery, which is made up of fixed or stationary cannon set in batteries made up of two or more guns within proper fortifications at various strategic points where they may effectively oppose naval attacks. Artillery for fortifications is of a character similar to coast artillery. Siege guns are of as heavy caliber or power as the guns used in fortifications, but are mounted so that they may be moved by motor power or train from one point to another. Field, horse and mountain artillery are exactly what their names imply—the mobile adaptable guns of an army.

Such are the three main "arms" of the army. The smallest unit in which any two of these arms are joined is the cavalry brigade, which sometimes contains light artillery. Thus we may call the brigade the largest "unmixed" unit, while the division is the smallest "mixed" unit—that is, the smallest unit made up of infantry, cavalry and artillery.

The average strength of a field army or corps throughout the world is between 30,000 and 40,000 men. The field army is supposed to contain representation from every branch of the army organization and to be able to act as a complete and independent unit.

Virtually every activity of civil life is represented in the army organization, either on its technical or administrative side. The more one delves into army organization the keener becomes the appreciation of the necessity of properly classifying every civilian of military age, that in emergency he may be called forth to serve his country in that capacity in which he is best fitted to give the highest results. Every tradesman, mechanic, laborer, professional man, artist or poet can be fitted into the vast organization wheel in such a way that his vocation or avocation will be turned to his country's advantage.

Wars are no longer entirely decided on the firing line. They are, rather, struggles between the resources of nations, and that country possessing the greatest industrial stamina is almost certain to win, provided it has a reasonable representation of arms in the field.

The private soldier, standing at the bottom of the army stairs, has nine steps to climb before he arrives at the top—a general. His first promotion is to corporal and the next to sergeant. He is elevated to these grades by his regimental commander. The next step is a commission bearing the president's name was formerly the most difficult to negotiate, but it is now fairly easy to take for men who honestly possess the qualities necessary to make the right kind of officers. After he becomes a second lieutenant time and opportunity will give the soldier his first lieutenancy and later a captaincy. Next he becomes a major. Directly above the major stands the lieutenant colonel, who is one grade below a colonel. At the top, for final reward is a general's star.

Easy as the ascent seems to the layman, a superficial examination of the facts will prove it a difficult climb, but by no means a forlorn hope.—Richard Smith in Leslie's Weekly.

SUCCESS AT THE BAT.

It Is Not Acquired by Striving to Outguess the Pitcher.

The batter who tries to outguess a pitcher is making a big mistake. He should try to figure out what the hurler probably will do, but at the same time should be set and ready for anything and prepared to shift at short notice. Making up your mind in advance that you are going to hit a certain ball and then swinging at it regardless of where it may come will never get you into the .300 class.

Let me caution every young player against acquiring the bad habit of trying to "kill" the ball. Thousands of fellows who might otherwise have become good batters have been ruined because they wanted to knock a home run every time up. If you meet the ball squarely and get the right amount of snap in your swing you do not need to take a windup and lunge at it with all your might.

There is a lot of life in a baseball, and when you hit it "on the nose" you don't need all your weight behind the bat. If you take care to apply your power at the right moment, so that you will get the ball well out in front of you at the point where your swing is fastest and most powerful, the distance and speed will take care of themselves.

There never was a great hitter yet that swung with all his might all the time. You may argue that the harder you poke the ball the longer distance you will get, but the trouble is that it is practically impossible to time your blow properly and hit the ball squarely when you take a "washerwoman's swing." Once in a hundred times you might happen to do so, but the other ninety-nine times you would just be making yourself ridiculous.

And no player is of much value to his team if he gets a home run once a year and either fans or sends up easy flies or rolls feeble grounders the rest of the time.

Every man must in a way be his own trainer in baseball.

Timid Sheep.

Sheep, when they become frightened, always run to an elevation, because their ancestors originally came from the mountains. They always follow a leader, because in the dangerous mountain passes their ancestors had to go in single file.

The Great Mystery.

Are we made to tick and keep the hours of this mortal sphere only? When we are done here shall we be run down forever, never to move again? Or do we belong to the horology of the universe?

To Be Sure.

"Only two! They must be doing pretty well with municipal reform."

Man is his own star, and that soul that can be honest is the only perfect man.

One in Thirty War Dead.

Fourteen men out of every fifteen so far have been safe.

Under present conditions, where man power is being saved, no more than one in thirty is killed.

Only one in 500 loses a limb—a chance no greater than in hazardous conditions at home.

Mr. Babson's conclusions are based on the mortality figures of the French army for the full three years of war. Attention is called to the fact that present fighting is not claiming anywhere near the number of dead recorded for the first two years.

He says: Most of the wounds sustained in the trenches are clean cut and of a nature that a few weeks in the hospital makes the subject as fit as ever. But 300,000 French soldiers have been discharged on account of wounds during the three years of the war.

Most of the wounds received in the trenches are on top of the head, simply scalp wounds. Practically speaking, a wound is either fatal or slight, with but few in between these two extremes."

Japanese Mosquitoes.

The delicate vocal organs of song birds respond magically to special care bestowed upon the diet. For this reason, says The Popular Science Monthly, birds that are cultivated in captivity are fed specially prepared foods designed to furnish maximum nourishment with minimum labor of the digestive organs.

A food which has been found especially valuable to bird-breeders has for its principal ingredients Japanese mosquitoes and ants' eggs. It is prepared by George Jenkins of New York city, an expert on the care and feeding of birds. The nationality of the mosquitoes is not supposed to make a difference in the taste or digestibility of the food. The reason the insects are imported from Japan is that the Japanese have a method of catching them in large quantities which as yet Americans have not discovered.

VAMPIRE OF THE OCEAN.

"Ironing" the Devilfish Is a Mode of Flirting With Death.

"Ironing" the devilfish, the largest of all the rays and one of the largest creatures of the sea, means flirting with death. The devilfish is also known as the ocean vampire. Its scientific name is Manta vampyrus, and all these names tell something of its habits. It gets its name devilfish from the fact that projecting from either side of the head is a hornlike appendage which in reality is a detached part of the pectoral fin or wing. The horns, sometimes three feet long and freely movable, are used to bring food to its mouth.

These fins have been known to circle above the bow of a boat, lifting the vessel out of the water and deluging the occupants of the boat with gallons of water. When they flop back to the surface they make a noise that can be heard far off. Exciting? Dangerous? The sport is both. The only thing that saves devilfish hunters at a time like this is preparedness. Every man must be at his station, all must obey the will of the harpooner, and if a bit of luck is thrown in the manta is killed.

The devilfish gets its name of manta, meaning blanket, from the pearl divers of the Caribbean sea, who are of the belief that it devours people after enveloping them in its enormous wings.

The fish has prodigious strength and has been known to tow a hundred ton vessel far out to sea. An authenticated story is told of a manta that towed eight boats, lashed together, for hours until finally the crews were compelled to cut the rope and let the devilfish escape.

Its vitality is wonderful. There are records of specimens escaping after having been harpooned, lanced and shot many times with rifles of heavy caliber. It fights even after the brain and heart have been pierced. Death comes only when the spinal cord back of the brain, is severed.

DIAMOND RING AS TEE

Seattle Society Woman Plays Unique Golf at Banff Springs

MRS. MAE Stehle, of Seattle, Wash., was recently the heroine of a unique bet at Banff Springs which caused much comment. Wagering with a fellow member of the fashionable colony at Banff Springs that she could make nine perfect drives on the mountain golf course, Mrs. Mae Stehle, of Seattle, Wash., teed her ball from the top of a fifteen hundred dollar diamond ring on each hole. A slip, a low swing or anything that would not come under the title of a perfect drive would have sent the ring spinning after the ball and ruined or lost it.

FOR REAL HEROES

Uncle Sam's Great Military Prize, the Medal of Honor.

NOT WON BY MERE BRAVERY.

It Takes a Deed of Almost Superhuman Fearlessness to Gain This Coveted Badge, the Hardest to Win of All National War Decorations.

"Hardest to gain, fewest in numbers, the least known of the military decoration of honors of the world," sums up the medal of honor of the United States, the bit of ribbon and the piece of metal that are so eagerly coveted and highly prized by the soldiers and sailors of Uncle Sam.

When you see a man with the inconspicuous bronze star pinned to his coat by a blue ribbon on which are thirteen white stars you may know that he has done a deed that has placed his life in such jeopardy that escape from it was nearly a miracle.

The medal of honor was first authorized by congress in 1862 and was for noncommissioned officers and privates only. But in the following year the law was changed to extend the award to commissioned officers also. In all about 1,500 of the medals were presented for services in the war between the states, and it is a remarkable fact that 96 per cent of them went to private soldiers.

In its present form the medal of honor is a five pointed star with a medallion in the center bearing the head of Minerva and around it "United States of America" in relief. On each ray of the star is an oak leaf, and the points themselves are trefoil shaped. A laurel wreath in green enamel encircles the whole, and this wreath is surmounted by "Valor," which in turn is surmounted by an eagle that attaches the decoration to its ribbon.

Accompanying this medal there is a badge, or lapel button, hexagonal and made of blue silk with the thirteen original stars in white. The army medal is represented by a small blue button studded with stars, while the navy medal is represented by a small red, white and blue bowknot.

It was not until 1897 that regulations definitely enunciating the conditions under which the medal should be awarded were promulgated. They emphasized the difficulty of winning the decoration and the great honor attaching to its possession.

"Medals of honor authorized by the act of congress approved March 3, 1863," say the regulations, "are awarded to officers and enlisted men in the name of congress for particular deeds of most distinguished gallantry in action. In order that the congressional medal of honor may be deserved, service must have been performed in action of such conspicuous character as to distinguish clearly the man for gallantry and intrepidity above his comrades, service that involved extreme jeopardy of life or the performance of extraordinarily hazardous duty. Recommendations for the decoration will be judged by this standard of extraordinary merit, and incontestible proof of performance of the service will be exacted.

"Soldiers of the Union have ever displayed bravery in battle, else victories could not have been gained. But as courage and self sacrifice are the characteristics of every true soldier, such a badge of distinction as the congressional medal is not to be expected as the reward of conduct that does not clearly distinguish the soldier above other men whose bravery and gallantry have been proved in battle."

In other words, the medal of honor is a medal for superheroes, for men who not only risk their lives in some extraordinary way, but who display such intelligence in the action that it stands out as something apart from conduct in the line of duty. Executive orders prescribe as follows the way in which the medal may be gained:

The recommendations must be presented by some one other than the proposed recipient, one who is personally familiar with all the facts and circumstances claimed as justifying the award, but the application may be made by the one claiming to have earned it, in which case it will be in the form of a deposition reciting a narrative description of the distinguished service performed. Recommendations will be made by the commanding officer at the time of the action or by a soldier or an officer having personal cognizance of the act for which the badge of honor is claimed.

The regulations also provide for exhaustive examination of the circumstances in each case and for an investigation that removes every possibility of fraud. Affidavits from witnesses are required, and the system safeguarding the distinction is hedged about with innumerable restrictions. It may be taken for granted that a man who secures one of the coveted medals has earned it with interest.

Akron and Rubber.

There are thirty or more rubber factories in and around Akron. Three of them are so vast that the visitor feels a bewilderment that merges into awe as he follows his guide hour after hour through titanic shops. These three colossal plants are said to represent 70 per cent of Akron's life, while Akron itself stands for 60 per cent of the total rubber production of the United States.—Edward Mott Woolley in McClure's.

PAYING THE DOCTOR.

Should It Be For Curing You or For Keeping You Well?

We haven't yet learned to take advantage of the resources of civilization to anything like the extent we might. For instance, we wait until we get sick, and then we pay the doctor to help us get well. It would be much more sensible to pay him to help us keep from getting sick.

Fantastic idea, you say. Not at all. It already is working in a large number of college communities, right here in the state universities of Missouri and Kansas, for instance. In both institutions the pupil is charged a fee which is applied to safeguarding his health. In the University of Missouri the plan is still further developed so that the fee covers medical and surgical attendance. The health work in both schools is so interesting, not only for what it is doing for the pupils, but for the example it is setting other communities, that it is only right and proper to call attention to it.

The important point is that these universities and other schools are proving that health can be made much more of a community matter than had been supposed and that the wise thing to do is for groups to pay medical men to keep them well.

A WATER SOAKED TOWN.

Where Nearly a Foot of Rain Falls Every Week in the Year.

"It is a remarkable fact that in India, one of the most arid countries in the world, there is one spot that has the record rainfall of the whole earth," said Dr. William Roberts, British agricultural expert in India, to a correspondent of the Washington Post. "This place is Cherapunji, in Assam. It is in the path of the monsoon and in a valley, and there is almost constant rainfall.

"The average rainfall is 600 inches a year, or fifty feet, which is nearly a foot a week. This seems almost beyond comprehension when it is considered that the rainfall of the United States, for instance, ranges from sixteen to thirty-five inches. In some places there have been as high as sixty-five inches of water in a year, but this is the exception.

"During the rainy season in Cherapunji the waterfall is heaviest, but there is rain throughout the year. Notwithstanding this terrific moisture, the inhabitants of the district raise vegetables and grain. They do this by building terraces which carry the water off."

Which Shall It Be?

Depend upon it, my boy, the only possession of real value you have is time. In time, improved, you can accomplish anything. You can leave the dull grind of mere existence and enter into the growing activities of life. You can make your work a joy by growing in it and above it. You can free yourself forever from the Nemesis of poverty and crown your early manhood with garlands of success.

Time is neither an angel that serves nor a demon that destroys. It is never neutral, always active. Him who values it justly it will exalt above the stars. Him who holds it lightly it will crush.

Time—what are you doing with it? What of those precious hours which, unsold to an employer, must inevitably be the medium of your elevation or fail? Before you are the mountain of success and the abyss of failure. You can—nay, you must—soar to the one or sink into the other.

Choose while there is yet time.—Ambition.

POLICE OF OTHER LANDS

Declared Index of Character of the People.

It used to be said that each country could be known by the Jews who lived within its borders. In the same way every city can be judged by the character of its policemen. In Christiania the policeman is a mild and amiable citizen in a rather shiny coat, and none too neat, who stands in the middle of the roadway and tries to maintain some semblance of order in the democratic muddle of the city's traffic.

In Stockholm the policeman is a walking arsenal, with sword and pistol and a brass helmet, and the arrest of a disorderly person becomes an act of state. There the policeman represents the high authority of a proud country. He fulfills his duty with a stern severity. He is the symbol of law and established order. Let no one touch these fundaments of a well regulated commonwealth.

In Copenhagen the policeman is neither the happy-go-lucky citizen who patrols the streets of Norway nor is he a creature of resplendent glory like his colleague in Sweden. He strikes a happy medium. In this he is an excellent representative of a land where the art of sensible and peaceful living seems to have been brought to its highest perfection.

If only the chauffeurs of the Danish capital would learn how to drive their cars we should not have a single complaint to make against a country where everybody seems well fed, where beggars are as scarce as very rich people, and where the women live up to the best traditions of the charming china which is made in the royal residence of Denmark.—Hendrik Willem Van Loon, in The Century.

A Brute Explains Himself.

In October, 1915, the German military authorities in Belgium accused a British nurse, Edith Cavell, of helping British and Belgian soldiers to escape from the country. Miss Cavell was tried by court-martial and shot, in spite of the remonstrance of the American Minister. This brutal execution of a woman aroused the keenest resentment throughout the civilized world.

A member of the Belgian commission, Vernon Kellogg, tells in The World's Work of a visit Herbert Hoover and he made to Berlin connected with the Belgian relief work. They happened to meet the general who, as military governor of Brussels, was responsible for Miss Cavell's murder. The general had had a few drinks and he insisted on telling them about what he called "Die Cavell"—"The Cavell." Here is the account:

"He said the Belgians called him a murderer, another Duke of Alva, but he wasn't. He was just a soldier doing his duty. Die Cavell was a thing that interfered with the spread of German civilization. It had to be got rid of. 'So I had her shot. Yes, I did it.' Did we think the world called him a murderer, too?"

It is because German autocracy agrees with this soldier that what interferes with the spread of German civilization should be got rid of that all the world is in the war to suppress by force of arms so ruthless a doctrine.

DOLLARS THAT ARE SAVED.

When Properly Invested They Help to Develop Our Country.

What work does the saved dollar do to help make this country a better place for the saver? At a meeting of the American Bankers' association an intelligent answer was made by a man who is well qualified to speak. He said:

"While a dollar saved by a workman helps to give to some workman a job, so does every other dollar of savings, whether it comes from wages, interest or profits.

"The economic effect of a dollar saved and invested is just the same, whether the owner is a wage earner, an employer or an heir of inherited wealth. Income, however it originates, that is saved and put to reproductive uses performs an inevitable service for society.

"Every form of savings finally seeks investment, and if you will follow the investment through to its ultimate reaction you will see it putting men to work; you will see it enlarging the agricultural, the industrial or the transportation equipment of the community; you will see it creating new demands for labor, raising the rate of wages and increasing the production of things which men desire.

"If savings are devoted to reproductive purposes, it makes no difference whether they are the savings of the workman or of the millionaire, they ultimately accomplish the same result—they increase the supply of things that the whole community wants."

F. A. Vanderlip said that. It is true. Your $50 in the savings bank works at the same jobs to which the $50,000 of the rich man is sent.

If the men who manage the work are honest and capable they use our saved dollars to make this country worth living in, worth working in, worth being proud of, worth fighting to preserve.—John M. Oskison

Fortress, Silence, Gloom!

The fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul is the gloomiest of bastiles. It stands on the bank of the Neva in Petrograd, opposite what was the Winter palace of Russia's masters. It is a veritable temple of silence, such as Carlyle sighed for in vain. Prince Krapotkin, who spent many weary months within its walls, tells how the officers moved about with silent tread. The floor of his cell was covered with felt, and he found that though the walls had the appearance of being paper the paper was only pasted on canvas, behind which was a wire grating packed with layers of felt. Krapotkin measured his cell and found that ten steps from one corner to the other repeated 150 times was two-thirds of a mile. He desired to walk five miles a day and accomplished his task walking rapidly to the corners, but turning slowly to avoid dizziness.

IF FOOD DISAGREES DRINK HOT WATER

When food lies like lead in the stomach and you have that uncomfortable, distended feeling, it is because of insufficient blood supply to the stomach combined with acid and food fermentation. In such cases try the plan now followed in many hospitals and advised by many eminent physicians of taking a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of water, as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water draws the blood to the stomach and the bisurated magnesia, as any physician can tell you, instantly neutralizes the acid and stops the food fermentation. Try this simple plan and you will be astonished at the immediate feeling of relief and comfort that always follows the restoration of the normal process of digestion. People who find it inconvenient at times to secure hot water and travelers who are frequently obliged to take hasty meals poorly prepared, should always take two or three five-grain tablets of Bisurated Magnesia after meals to prevent fermentation and neutralize the acid in their stomach.

Plant Strength.

Plant strength is wonderful. If the roots of the delicate maidenhair fern have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms has been known to lift a large stone. Indeed, plants are on record as having broken the hardest rocks. The island of Aldabra, to the northwest of Madagascar, is becoming smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably reduce the island to pieces.

NEW DRIVE IS STARTED BY THE FRENCH FORCES

Attack Enemy This Morning on Aisne Front North-east of Soissons and War Office Reports Considerable Progress on Whole Battle Front and Numerous Prisoners Taken---Russians Defied German Attempt to Land on Mainland---British Score in Aerial Fighting.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Oct. 23.—An attack was made by the French early this morning on the Aisne front, north-east of Soissons. The War Office reports that considerable progress was made along the whole battlefront, and that numerous prisoners were taken.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).
(By Henry Wood).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Oct. 23.—The Lafayette escadrille of American flyers is participating to-day in an attack on the Aisne, delivered in great force by the French.

This is the first intimation received here of what appears to be a general attack by the French along the Aisne front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Fifteen German aeroplanes were brought down by British aviators in recent fighting over the battle area on Northern France and Belgium, says the War Office official statement to-day on aviation. German aerdromes and stations were bombed heavily with excellent results. Heavy fighting took place in the air, and eight British machines are reported missing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Germans last night attacked one of the newly captured British positions in Flanders, and forced back the troops holding it, the War Office announced. Elsewhere, the British gains of yesterday have been maintained.

RUSSIANS PUT MANY GERMAN WARSHIPS OUT OF ACTION LAST WEEK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23. — Two German dreadnoughts, one cruiser, twelve torpedo boats and one transport were put out of action by the Russians in the fighting around the islands in the Gulf of Riga last week, but their ultimate fate is unknown, says the official statement issued by the Russan Admiralty. It has been established that at least six German torpedo boats were sunk in the fighting. The Russians lost the battleship Slava and a large torpedo boat.

Germans Driven Off By Russians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23.—The Germans have made a second attempt to land on the Esthonian coast of the Russian mainland, but were driven off by the Russians, who have been reinforced and are in good fighting order.

The attempt was made near Moisekall Manor, eight miles north of Werder, on the Esthonian coast. The landing of German troops, reported yesterday by the Russian War Office, was effected on the Werder Peninsula. No naval engagement occurred in connection with this manoeuvre. German warships were observed off Kuivast, Moon Island. The Germans have evacuated more trenches on the northern end of the battle front. They were occupied by Russians. Trenches in the sector north of Hindenberg Manor were taken by the Russians after an engagement.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 23.—To-day's Petrograd statement, reporting that fifteen German warships of various classes were at least temporarily disabled and put out of action by the Russians in the fighting around Dago, Oesel and Moon Islands, is occasioning much satisfaction here, as indicating that the Russian Navy still has great powers of resistance, and that its personnel is loyal and courageous to a high degree.

It is notable that most of the German ships were sunk by Russian gunfire, indicating also that the Russian marksmanship is very good.

News from Scandinavian sources is that immense fleets of German ships are now lining the mouth of the Baltic, indicating the German preparedness for any attempts of the British Allies to enter the Baltic to help the Russians.

ROOSEVELT IS HALF BLIND.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 22.—Theodore Roosevelt, who is finishing a fortnight's training at a rest camp here, yesterday received a delegation of newspapermen. In telling of his boxing exploits of former times he made the disclosure that he has not the sight of his left eye. "I don't think many persons know this," he said, 'but the fact is I was having a lively bout one day in the White House gymnasium with a husky young captain of artillery, when he crossed me with a hard right swing and landed on my left eye. The punch broke some of the blood vessels of the eye, and I haven't seen from it since."

ZEPPELIN AND ITS WHOLE CREW TAKEN BY ONE AVIATOR

Young French Birdman Drove the L 49 Down Single Handed and Captured More Than Twenty Men at Point of His Revolver

THE AIRSHIP INTACT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By J. W. Pegler.)

BOURBONNE LES BAINS, France, Oct. 23.—A twenty-one year old French airman, single handed, forced the German Zeppelin L49 to descend on French soil, and at the point of his revolver captured the dirigible's crew of more than a score of men, before they could destroy their ship.

The American officer who was "in" at the capture of the Zeppelin, told me the story as it was told to him by the French airman.

The birdman took to the air an hour and three-quarters previously, under instructions to watch for Zeppelins. It was only a short time later that he saw his prey. He forced his speedy battle plane to its limit and overtook the great lumbering dreadnought of the skies. Around and around its huge bulk he flew, like a sparrow attacking a hawk. Finally the Zeppelin swerved. Its planes were depressed. It glided down to earth in a small valley. The forward gondola (or compartment) rested in a small stream and the two amidship gondolas were twenty feet aloft, the stern impaling itself upon the hillside pines:

CAPTURED THE CREW.

The youthful French airman stopped suddenly and got out with such alacrity that he gashed his own forehead by striking a wooden strut. With the blood streaming down his face, the aviator yanked at his automatic as he ran forward. He reached the Zeppelin just as her commander had finished firing six revolver shots into his engine, attempting to cripple it. The Frenchman covered him with his own full revolver and demanded that

PENSIONS INCREASED

Twenty-five Per Cent. Jump in All Cases and This Will Be Augmented By a Change in Classification

IMPORTANT CHANGES

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Sir Thos. White, Minister of Finance, to-day gave out the following statement:

"Upon the recommendation of the Minister of Finance the pension regulations applying to members of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces have been amended by an order in Council approved by his Excellency the Governor-General. The amendments made are far-reaching in their effect. They provide for an increase in pensions and allowances to, and in respect of, soldiers and sailors holding the lower ranks, up to and including the rank of sub-Lieutenant in the Canadian Navy and Lieutenant in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

Back-dated to April 1.

"The most important changes provide for increases in pensions and allowances. These changes will be considered as having come into force on the first day of April, 1917, and in this way all pensioners will be entitled to an extra cheque covering the difference beween the pension paid since April 1 and the date on which the adjustment is made.

About Forty Per Cent. Increase.

"The changes will affect the pensions of soldiers and sailors, and their children, their orphan children, their widows and children, their dependent parents, and their younger brothers and sisters. The total increase in the amount payable by Canada for pensions and allowances will be approximately forty per cent. At the present time the annual expenditure involved is about five million dollars a year. With the increases now authorized Canada's outlay for pensions will be over seven million dollars during he fiscal year.

Twenty Cases of Disabilities.

"A second change made is only slightly less important. It provides that disabilities shall be divided into twenty classes instead of six classes. In the future disabled men will be certain to receive a pension based directly on the percentage of the disability between classes instead of six Allowances to Married Men.

"A third important change is the authorization of an annual allowance for a married, disabled pensioner. Up to the present time, the unmarried man received the same pension for disability as the married man.

Increase at Least 25 Per Cent.

"Those holding the rank of sublieutenant in the Canadian navy and lieutenant in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, or a lower rank, will be entitled in all cases to twenty-five per cent. increase in pension. This twenty-five per cent. increase in pension in a large number of cases will be again increased by the fact that disabilities in the future will be divided into twenty classes, with a difference of only five per cent. in disabaliy between classes, instead of six classes with a difference of 20 per cent in disability beween classes. For instance, a private disabled seventy-five per cent., has been receiving a pension of $288 per annum, that is to say, a Class Three pension, which class includes all those disabled between sixty and seventy-nine per cent. He will now receive $450 per annum, that is to say, a Class Six pension, which class includes all those between seventy-five and seventy-nine per cent. He is thus entitled to a much larger increase than the flat increase of twenty-five per cent. Only in a few cases will soldiers and sailors be entiled to ddainttaio

Let us be just as human as we know how on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week—the three days of the British Red Cross campaign—let us give just a little more than we ever gave before, remembering how much our brave boys need the money—but for khaki shirts, collars, sweaters, mufflers, socks, underwear and handkerchiefs for their Christmas boxes, "Come to me."

WAR VETERANS TO POSTPONE BIG CAMPAIGN FOR PRESENT

SIR JOSEPH FLAVELLE AND HIS COMPANY MANAGER.

Sir Joseph Flavelle, President of the Wm. Davies Co., and Mr. E. C. Fox, the Manager, were snapped by a photographer as they left the Toronto City Hall, following Sir Joseph's examination at the bacon probe. Sir Joseph is evidently telling "my friend Fox" something very pleasant, probably about the session of the meat prices probe which has just concluded.

Citizens Will However Co-operate With Them in Securing Comfortable and Adequate Temporary Quarters For the Carrying On of Their Work.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING

The net results of the conference between the Peterborough Branch of th Great War Veterans' Association and representative citizens in the recreation room of the Armouries, last night, were that the Veterans' have deferred, for the present, their intended campaign for a permanent club building, and that a joint committee from the citizens and the G. W. V. A. was appointed to go into the question of temporary quarters It was the unanimous opinion of the citizens present that the present time is not opportune for a big campaign with the Red Cross and Patriotic Fund appeals close at hand, but that every effort should be made to provide the veterans with comfortable, commodious quarters, large enough for the present needs of the organization.

President H. J. Staunton was in the chair and there was a representative attendance, including a large number of members of the Great War Veterans.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., opened the meeting on behalf of the Veterans. They had, he said, in view of the other appeals which had to be met, decided to consult with representative citizens as to what course they should pursue. The Veterans were prepared to postpone their campaign for a club building even until the end of the war, but they would like a guarantee from the citizens that their effort should receive support when it was made.

Capt. Burnham pointed out the necessity of quarters for the Veterans. There was one aspect of the quesion that should be considered.

"The Government must be expected to find a solution for the whole problem of the returned soldier," remarked Capt. Burnham, "and that includes a home where Veterans can spend their declining years. The Government cannot be allowed to shirk its duty and I don't think the Government has any idea of so doing."

Capt. Burnham explained, however, that financing was a very serious problem with the government just now. It was not possible to get assistance from the usual source. England and the United States had to be looked to for help. Thanks to the grand work of Canada's soldiers overseas, this country never stood so high in the eyes of the people of the United States as at present. Sir Thomas White was financing very gingerly in view of the situation and the question of returned soldiers' homes was one that might not be handled for some time, although it would have to come and the matter would have to be dealt with in a broad, national way. However, the question now to be considered was that of providing temporary quarters for the local veterans, and he was sure that something would be done along that line.

Mrs. W. R. Morris.

Mrs. W. R. Morris said that the Veterans would be quite safe in trusting to the government to provide a home after the war. She reminded her hearers that the women would soon have the vote—some of them had it now as a war measure—and if the government was inclined to shirk its duty, the returned soldiers and the women combined would be powerful enough to force any government to do justice to the cause of the veterans.

Mayor Duffus said that he had already expressed his views at previous meetings. He had satisfied himself that the present quarters of the G. W.V.A. were inadequate an" that anything that could be done for the Veterans in any reasonable way should be done. "I am ready to do anything I can," said His Worship. "It's a large question, but you will freely admit that no matter what is done it will never begin to repay the men for what they have gone through overseas." Mayor Duffus said that he would regret to have the matter of a permanent building taken up at an inopportune time and have the effort prove a failure. However, comfortable quarters should be provided.

Col. Johnston's Views.

Lieut.-Col. Johnston said that his experience while with the 93rd Battalion, and the manner in which he had been treated, had convinced him that the hearts of the people were right, and he had faith that Peterborough

HUNS TRYING FOR A SEPARATE RUSSIAN PEACE

That is the Interpretation of German Activity on Eastern Front But Russian Diplomats Say Enemy's Hopes Are Vain

BULGARIA'S GAME

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — Germany's new Russian smashes mean chiefly that she is trying to gain a separate Russian peace, while at the same time trying to cheer the flagging spirits of her own people. That was the view to-day of Secretary of War Baker and other high officials.

But Russian diplomats here assured there would be no separate peace, while Secretary Baker declared that as it lengthens the Teuton lines of communications, the Germans' easteri drive advances ultimate allied victory.

The Allies' Flanders successes more than offset the eastern progress of the Teuton, and Gen. Haig's typhoon fire and attacks will continue till winter in an effort to shatter the German line and shake the German stamina. This weakening morale is increasing, ern drive advances ultimate allied vicdeserters who reach the allied lines.

FEARS WESTERN SITUATION.

That Germany fears western developments is proved by the fact that she is now seeking some sort of armistice in the Balkans in order to free more troops for the west and Italian fronts.

Meantime, Bulgaria is playing a double game with her ally, threatening a separate peace in order to get what Bulgaria wants of military support and coveted territory. Diplomats here say the Bulgars are repeating their pre-war dickering with both sides "to raise the ante." Actually, there is little prospect of a separate Turk-Bulgar peace at the moment, officials say. They agreed with Premier Lloyd George's statement that only a lasting peace should be accomplished. While optimistic and more than pleased with the Flanders successes, authorities here joined Lloyd George in a warning that the country must realize there is still bitter work ahead before the German is beaten into submission.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, OCT. 23, 1917

HEARTILY ENDORSED.

The Pioneer, an organ of temperance reform, this week prints the opinions of about sixty newspapers of Ontario as to the effects of prohibition during its first year. The consensus of these opinions is to the effect that the Temperance Act has been beneficially revolutionary in its working upon the individual, upon the home, upon society and upon the state as a whole. At the same time there is general opinion that as effective for good as the act has been it would have been greatly more so if interprovincial trade in strong drink had not been permitted to destroy the very spirit as well as the practical working of the act as a prohibitory measure.

The spirit of the act is to banish strong drink as a beverage. This has been done to the limit of provincial jurisdiction. The Dominion government, which has the power to prohibit importation of liquor, has permitted the proverbial coach and four to canter through the prohibition act; has refrained from enacting one of the most beneficial of war measures, and has instead, thrown this politically unpleasant, but morally righteous, dutly, upon the province, which was told that it had the power to enact a penalty upon any person using liquor. This would have been an extreme of sumptuary legislation that would have imperilled the endorsation of the act in 1919.

Now that we have a union government supposed to be above party considerations, to hew to the line no matter into which camp the political chips may fall, we expect that it will take action to make, as it alone can do, the Ontario Temperance Act what it was designed to be, a total measure of prohibition of strong drink as a beverage. At the same time the Union ogvernment should stop the waste of food grains and food materials in the manufacture of strong drink, or withdraw its appeal to the people to starve themselves in order to save grain for export. Let it put up the shutters on the distilleries and breweries or forever after hold its peace in the matter of urging the people to save at the spiggot, while the government permits waste at the bung.

The Quebec bridge was so much of a big thing that the inquisitive Japs sent over engineers to see how it was done.

LEGAL MORALITY AND MORAL MORALITY.

A despatch published yesterday, shows how thoroughly Great Britain has the control of the food situation in hand; and the results are reflected in the statement that in Great Britain to-day, in spite of the submarine sinkings, there the people as a whole are living comfortably and plenteously and, which appeals to us Canadians, suffering from aeroplane price—more cheaply. The profiteer, even though he claims that his profits are legal and moral, is not permitted to wring extortionate profits out of the consumer. Britain has now full and adequate control over bread, flour, meat, potatoes, sugar, tea, butter, cheese, peas, beans and corn and oats products.

It is unfortunate that Canada cannot, or does not take, similar drastic but desirable action. We are told that prices can't be fixed, and our food controller seems to be more fortunate in finding excuses for not doing things than he is in accomplishing what he was appointed to do.

Not only do high prices keep their popularly inaccessible level, but we haven't yet disciplined the food profiteer. We seem to have a different standard of morality, too. Sir Joseph lavelle, the arch type of profiteer, justifies the profits of his concern as "legitimate." There's a mighty difference between legal right and moral right. St. Paul once said to his Corinthian parishoners: "All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient." Expediency is defined as "propriety under the particular circumstances of a case." It does not seem that high profits are "expedient," though they may be lawful, in the circumstances of our case. The case of our people is the case of Issachar—"crouching between two burdens—the burden of service for the sake of the war, and the burden of sacrifice through the piracy of the profiteer.

There is need of the people saving every dollar possible to lend to the government to spend upon exigently necessary war service. But how can people save money for patriotic service if the high cost of living demands every cent to keep breath in their bodies? We have had a period of high profits, which have netted millions collectively and individually to the profiteers. These profits may have been legal according to the law of the land, but they cannot be justified by the moral law, and to that we are bound as the proper standard of business and association life. At a time when everybody is called to serve and to sacrifice the burden should be as equally distributed as possible. For one man or one set of men to pile up colossal fortunes, at the expense of the suffering of the many, is monstrous iniquity however it may be glossed over with the excuses of legitimate profits.

Trafalgar Day bring an echo of the Trafalgar Days brings an echo of the dred years ago, to do our duty to the limit.

WITH A GRAIN OF SALT.

Many journals, especially support rs of a union, non-partizan govern ment, are taking every occasion to emphasize the patriotic spirit by announciations of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, attributing to him all sorts of sentiments and proposals founded upon the statements or expressed opinions of irresponsible journals. La Canada, of Montreal, is widely quoted as saying that "Conscription is banished from the Liberal programme." There is not the slightest official authority for this. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when conscription became law by act of parliament, declared that having become the law of the land, its enforcement was to be supported by all law-abiding citizens. He has never gone back on this declaration, and as much as he is berated by political opponents, nobody for a moment thinks of him as capable of breaking faith with himself. Sir Wilfrid has had a long and honourable and useful career; and, though he may differ from many as to the best measures to adopt in the present crisis, he is at heart the same loyal Canadian, the same high-minded imperialist, he has shown himself to be by tangible contributions to imperial solidarity, and not by loud professions.

We are striving to subdue the partizan spirit and have got to the point where we have formed a union government. But we cannot entirely eliminate the party spirit; we find it cropping out here and there, and we find aslo a party spirit to take note of these irresponsible statements and to strive to turn them to political account against the greatest figure in our public life. The statements referred to must be taken with a grain of salt.

German military efficiency —after forty years of intensive cultivation—has not in three years' war, won a single victory where the combatants were on equal terms.

PAYING IN FULL.

We think that we Canadians, with all the lives we have given, the wounds we have received, the givings we have made, and will have to continue making; with all the disturbance of the serene current of our lives; with the high cost of living, and with the whole national sacrifice we have made, have suffered much on account of the war. But our sufferings and sacrifices are as the dust in the balance weighed against the unspeakable sacrifices and woes of Belgium, Serbia, Poland, and Armenia. Belgium has borne the forebrunt of German outrage, and the Belgian government has itemized the account Germany will have to settle when the time of accounting comes. No to speak of the infinite suffering of the people, the ruin of homes, the loss of life and the nameless outrages they have inflicted. Germany, to even partially indemnify Belgium for material loss, will have to pay at least 1,500 million dollars. Canada is directly and indirectly concerned in this and in duty bound to hasten the day of reckoning; for Canada has been attacked in the outrage and attack upon Belgium that has been the first object of the scheme of a ruthless militarism that did not confine its satanic scope to Belgium, but included the whole world of liberty and civilization, with Canada among the first. Germany aimed to strike us through Belgium, and we are in duty bound, as we have recognized, to do our full share in forcing from the chief assailant of human liberty and human right, the reparation that must be made.

DON'T MISS THE POINT

There is a man in this part of the world who represents, to our way of thinking, a pretty good average of human nature. Whenever the preacher in his church delivers a very hot sermon against some special kind of sin, this man gets enthusiastic and goes around to the vestry to tell the preacher what a fine sermon it was. Then he goes home and repeats it to his brother, and they talk over the points and the people the sermon hit the hardest. But this particular man never sees when the sermon hits him.

Early next month the biggest public campaign ever put on in Canada will be opened to get subscriptions for the fourth Canadian war loan, the Victory Loan. The thing people in this district must bear in mind is: that the appeals are directed to each and every one of them. It is not merely the well-off men and women who are being asked to invest. It is everybody. The little sermons which will be "preached" in the advertising should not be taken as hints to the well-to-do people only. Every man and woman should watch for these advertisements, and start now to gather up the necessary money to buy either a fifty or a hundred or a five hundred or a thousand dollar bond. In the United States there were about four subscribers to the first American loan out of every 100 persons. They only received 3 1-2 per cent. In Canada for the last war loan there were only about 41,000 subscribers, or say four in every seven hundred. Yet in Canada the interest was much higher—on the Victory Bonds that will probably be issued to yield about 5 1-2 per cent.

The first thing anyone should do, in our opinion, is to get rid of the idea that there is any sacrifice involved in investing in this loan. It is true that the patriotic spirit is appealed to and it is equally true that a great and generous response is expected on that ground. But the new war loan is a straightway business proposition: safe, profitable and convenient. Every man and every woman with as much as fifty dollars to spare should own one of these bonds, and not only that, but should help to show others the worth of these bonds by recommending them everywhere. The readers of his paper are among the most thrifty, prosperous and public spirited in the Dominion. When the subscriptions to the Victory Loan are added up from the various districts and sub-districts we expect them to show that this part of the great Dominion has been true to its traditions and just to its opportunities.

"SAM BROWN" BELTS ARE BARRED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The War Department has put a ban on the wearing of "Sam Brown" belts by American officers serving within the limits of the United States. These belts have been worn by a number of British army officers and consist of a broad waist belt of leather, connected with a narrow leather strap that goes over the shoulder. The "Sam Brown" belts serve no useful purpose but set off the uniform of an officer.

BRITISH ADMIRAL SAYS

ROYAL NAVAL CLUB,

To the Zam-Buk Co. Portsmouth, England.

Dear Sirs,—I have found Zam-Buk most reliable for healing cuts and abrasions; while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable.

(Signed) RODNEY M. LLOYD, Admiral.

ENTIRE CREW PRAISES ZAM-BUK

From Admiral to stoker, all grades of service praise Zam-Buk. Stoker Kingsnorth, of H.M.S. "Cochrane," says:—"I slipped and fell on an exhaust steam pipe, which fairly frizzled the skin on my arm. At once the ship's surgeon dressed the burn, but the injury would not heal owing to a lot of dirt from the pipe causing blood-poison. I was in fearful pain and didn't know how to get ease.

"For weeks I remained under treatment, but the ordinary ointments proved no good. Indeed, I got worse. I therefore obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and almost as soon as this was applied I got ease. From the very first application healing commenced; and a few boxes of Zam-Buk healed my wound completely."

Zam-Buk cures eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ring-worm, bad leg, varicose ulcers, piles, cold sores, chapped hands, babies' sores, etc. All stores at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

FREE TRIAL BOX will be sent on receipt of this advertisement and 1c. stamp for postage.

The Irish Convention In Danger

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ANOTHER BIG LOAN IS MADE TO THE FRENCH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — The United States to-day advanced another twenty million dollars to France, bringing advances to the Allies to date up to two and three-quarter billion dollars.

Concert Was Great Success

The concert last evening at the S. A. Temple was very well patronized indeed and if applause means anything, was thoroughly enjoyed.

The Songster Brigade excelled itself and the orchestra did well and was encored.

The proceeds of the evening was a large donation of the articles asked for, such as trench candles, gum, chocolate bars, etc., also a good offering of cash, for which the Home League are very grateful and desire to thank all concerned.

99 "LOST" SOLDIERS FOUND.

Americans Stranded in an English Camp Rejoin Their Units.

LONDON, Oct. 22.— The American Young Men's Christian Association reports that a detachment of ninety-nine American soldiers which had been "lost" in England for more than five weeks has now rejoined the American forces. By some mistake these men were set down in a British camp without a single officer or a penny. The day after they arrived at this camp twenty-eight of them fell victims of the German measles and were sent to an isolation hospital.

For five weeks the Americans were unable to obtain stamps for letters home, or even tobacco. Then they were disovered by an American college student who is in a British Young Men's Christian Association hut. He arranged to have each man supplied with a package of cigarettes and six postage stamps daily and a weekly credit of ten shillings at the Young Men's Christian Association canteen. Later the plight of these men was communicated to the American authorities who sent $10 each to tide them over until arrangements could be made to restore them to their proper units.

EXPLOSION SANK U-BOAT.

Ammunition-Laden Vessel Blew Up —All on Submarine Lost.

CHRISTIANIA.—News has reached here of the blowing up of a German submarine by an explosion on board the British ship Olive Branch while the submarine was alongside.

Forty-five men from the Olive Branch have arrived at Honningsvaag. They state that the ship was loaded with ammunition. The U-boat, which attacked, approached the sinking ship after the crew had been removed, when suddenly there came an explosion, which wrecked the submarine with the loss of its whole crew.

Captain Odin Berg, a fisherman, has found a sunken U-boat off Kjotvik, four miles north of Hammerfest and 200 meters from land. A private company now proposes to send divers to Kjotvik and salve it.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22—Newfoundland's potato crop will exceed 2,500,000 bushels, according to a report received by the Department of Trade and Commerce from W. B. LIMITING INSURANCE TO YOUNG MARRIED MEN.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 23.—Believing it is probable that the scope of the Military Service Act will from time to time be extended certain life insurance companies operating in London are refusing policies for amounts greater than $1,000 to all men between the ages of 18 and 36 years, whether married or single.

E. G. PORTER IN FIELD IN WEST HASTINGS.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 23.—Mr. E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P., who has represented West Hastings in the Dominion Parliament for 17 years, states that, if his friends desire, he will be their win-the-war candidate in the next election, and by so doing would not be sacrificing any of his political principles, but, under the present conditions, would be doing his country a greater service. BREAKFAST FOODS IN 20-LB. PACKAGES

Order-in-Council Prohibits Sale in Smaller Quantities.

TO ELIMINATE WASTE

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—In order to eliminate the waste in packages and the increase in cost to the consumer involved in the trade in small packages of breakfast foods, cereals, and cereal products, an order-in-Council has been passed, upon the recommendation of the Food Controller, prohibiting the sale, after a specified date, unless licensed, of such foods in original packages of less weight than twenty pounds. In special cases the Food Controller may license the sale in smaller packages if necessary in the interest of the public.

Manufacturers and wholesale dealers are given until November 1st to dispose of their stocks, but on and after that date, they must not offer for sale in Canada "any foods known as breakfast foods, or cereals, or flour or other foods which are the product of wheat, oats, barley, rye, rice, peas, beans, buckwheat, Indian corn (maize), or lentils in original packages of less weight than twenty pounds." In the case of retail dealers, the prohibition of sale is effective on and after Dec. 1st.

The Order-in-Council requires that all the food enumerated, "shall be sold by the pound or ton and shall be net weight to the purchaser."

IT is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars cost three cents.

Had Narrow Escape From Asphyxiation

Miss Fanning and Her Brother Overcome by Coal Gas in Their Home

Miss E. Fanning and Mr. Samuel Fanning, 147 London street, were taken to Nicholls Hospital this morning after an extremely narrow escape from death by asphyxiation.

Mr. Fanning had lit his heater in the dining room, yesterday, for the first time this year and the family retired last night as usual. This morning a plumber who called to attend to some defective pipes at about 10 o'clock, had great difficulty in getting a reply when he called at the house, but finally succeeded in arousing Mr. Fanning, who, with great difficulty, so overcome with the poisonous fumes was he, crawled to the door.

The neighbours were notified, Dr. Morgan called, and at 11 o'clock Mr. and Miss Fanning were taken by Belleghem's ambulance to Nicholls Hospital, where they are at present, gradually recovering from their narrow escape from death.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Mr. Maclean's entry into the cabinet has been forshadowed for some days. He was the recognized financial critic of the Liberals, and it is understood he will shortly be appointed chairman of the cabinet sub-committee to deal with after-war problems.

Senator Robertson is a native of Welland, Ont., and vice-president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. In the Senate he ranks as Independent Labourite. He was appointed to the Senate last January.

First Draft To Be Called On Dec. 10th

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — It is stated positively and officially to-day that there is no foundation whatever for the stories in various cities, particularly in Montreal, to the effect that the Government will abandon conscription, because of the large number of exemption applications. On the other hand the Military Service Board here is carrying out its plan to have the first drafts called out for service on December 10th. It is believed the exemption boards will have completed their work by that time. This applies to all parts of Canada except the Yukon. The date of the calling out of troops there will be January 7th.

Huns Keep Watch

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—A newspaper found on a German prisoner who was taken by the Canadians on the Western front recently shows how close a watch the Huns keep on Canadian affairs. The paper contained a news despatch, purporting to come from Ottawa, which told of the passing of the Military Service Act just two days after the Act was passed by Parliament here.

This little discovery is regarded here as a proof of the importance Germany places upon the military benefit to the Allies which will flow from the adoption by Canada of the Military Service Act. Experience has proved that Germany is a close observer of enemy countries and that every sign of strengthening or weakening is noted with the keenest interest by the Huns.

No Apparent Shortage Of Sugar In Peterborough Where Buying Is Rarely Restricted

The menace of a sugar famine hasn't caused any serious alarm in Peterborough. New York may be on short rations, Montreal may be growing nervous, but you can still buy hundred-pound lots from the local grocers. It has been pointed out that there is no need for a panic in Canada over the situation, but the advice wasn't needed in this city, for a panic was the state farthest from the minds of many retail grocers, and the public was taking three spoonfuls as usual. When everything else, from boots to bread, has soared beyond the worst dreams of the humblest ratepayer and he still finds his three meals following day after day in unbroken succession, with all the old favourite foods present and more extras than he ever enjoyed before, and also with a feeling that many of the innumerable warnings of shortage were empty and pointless, why should he worry about sugar when his grocer urges him to buy a hundredweight before half the previous bag is consumed.

This does not apply to all grocers, for some of them state that they are endeavouring to carry out the wishes of the Food Controller and the more powerful wholesalers, who state that during the present stringency, which will last until the new Cuban crop is available, and even when Canada may not be allowed to bid for supplies, they will apportion what they think are sufficient quantities to meet the demands of their customers. Some grocers who have considerable stocks on hand follow the even tenor of their cash business and dispose them at the present favourable price, thereby taking adavntage of the higher market and putting into effect the maxim of the stock speculator, "Take your profits." Again there are members of the ancient guild of grocers who have just as large a reserve supply, but, to maintain business equilibrium, to ensure a steady supply and also in a spirit of willingness to conform to the advices of the Food Controller and the wholesalers, they have been doling out sugar as wisely as coal was handed out here last winter, when unrestricted selling and delivery would have left some of the citizens in serious want.

The United States press and periodicals is waging a far flung campaign of food conservation, which from various sources is reported to have already begun to show the desired results. In this country there has been no serious effort to curtail consumption, probably for the reason that the necessity was neither real nor apparent.

T. Kinnear & Co. of Toronto say there will be no cause for worry, providing the people do not buy more sugar than the need. Mr. Eckhart, another wholesaler, says: "If the people do as they did during the first six months of the war, that is, store up a six months' or a year's supply, then there will be a shortage and the price will go up."

RETURNED HERO IS WELCOMED

Bombardier Chas. Breckenridge Tendered a Reception and Presented With Gold Watch

On Friday evening the Town Hall at Westwood was filled with the residents of the Township of Asphodel and surrounding country for the purpose of welcoming home Bombardier Charles Breckenridge, son of Mr. Matthew Breckenridge, and grandson of Squire Breckenridge of Westwood.

A splendid programme of music was rendered and an address was read to Bombardier Breckenridge, and he was also presented with a gold watch suitably engraved. Addresses were delivered by the Chairman, Col. Birdsall, and by the Rev. Mr. Cooke, Rev. Mr. Thompson and by Col. J. W. Miller and F. D. Kerr of Peterborough.

As usual the patriotic ladies of Westwood were to the forefront with splendid refreshments for the speakers and those taking part in the programme in connection with the reception.

It will be remembered that Bombardier Breckenridge had both legs broken in action, and after being in hospital for over a year is now home slowly recovering from his very severe injuries.

The returned soldier is a brother of Signaller Max Breckenridge, who was killed last spring while on active service.

Unfavourable Day For Annual County Plowing Match

The plowing championships for the county were commenced this morning on the adjoining farms of Mr. Jas. A. Young and Mr. J. K. Moore, on the Fourth Concession of Smith township. Unfavourable weather undoubtedly reduced the number of entrants and the general attendance, and interfered with the complete success of the match, but the morning spectators are usually but a fraction of those who gather in the afternoon.

The sod contest had eleven competitors in Mr. Young's field, and there were five in the stubble on Mr. Moore's farm. The allottments of ground to be covered had all been staked out, and both contests got away to a good start. It was expected that the work would be completed about four o'clock, when the judges' decisions would be announced and the prizes distributed.

HARWOOD POTATOES

Good judges claim that potatoes grown round the Rice Lake section have always been regarded as among the choicest in the market. The soil in which they are grown seems to be particularly well suited for producing dry, sound, well flavoured potatoes. For this reason, dealers are anxious to procure all they can of Rice Lake potatoes, because consumers who have once used them want they again.

Messrs. Douros and Gettas, the local fruit and vegetable dealers, have been fortunate in securing a large consignment of these potatoes from Harwood and other points round Rice Lake, which they have put into stock for the benefit of their customers.

WAR VETERANS TO POSTPONE CAMPAIGN FOR PRESENT

would do the right thing. If it were not considered the proper time for the larger project, an effort should be made to provide commodious and comfortable temporary quarters.

Mr. G. N. Gordon remarked that while he agreed with Capt. Burnham that the government should provide a home for soldiers, and was of the opinion that no matter what government was in power this would be done eventually, it would be some time before the government would be in a position to carry out this work. In the meantime what about the present requirements? He felt that the present was an opportune time to consider the furnishing of a club of ample proportions where the Veterans could be comfortable and meet together to carry on their work. He would suggest that such a movement should not long be deferred.

Heavy Expenditure.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin reminded the meeting of the heavy demands that would shortly be made upon the citizens. He said that a number of the men who had done practically all the work in connection with patriotic endeavours in Peterborough had held a meeting recently and had decided that the city and district would have to raise at least $135,000 for patriotic purposes in the next few months. For the Red Cross and Patriotic fund at least $85,000 would have to be raised in Peterborough. The last thing that was in the minds of these men who had to consider the raising of this money was that another large project would be launched. Mr. Dobbin thought that an effort should be made to provide comfortable quarters for the Veterans but deprecated the idea of a campaign for a permanent building at this time. He was of the opinion that suitable quarters could be found in the armouries. There was the danger that too attractive quarters might keep married men away from their homes.

Col. J. W. Miller referred to the promises that had been made from recruiting platforms all over the country to the men when they were leaving that they would be looked after. "We owe them a debt," said Col. Miller, "that will take us all our time to pay." The speaker paid a glowing eulogy to the services the Canadians had rendered overseas and said that it was the duty of the citizens to provide had rendered overseas and said that it that they have come back.

The suggestion was advanced that a joint committee be appointed to deal with the question, and Mrs. Morris asked for an expression of opinion from the Veterans as to what their plans were.

The Veterans Views.

President Staunton explained that in deference to the opinions of many citizens the club had decided to drop the idea of having a permanent building as a memorial to Peterborough's dead soldiers. They were prepared to postpone their campaign in view of the Patriotic and Red Cross efforts, but would like a guarantee from the citizens that later on support would be forth coming for an effort for permanent quarters.

Mr. J. W. Worth pointed out that in view of the high cost of labour, material and real estate, the erection of a permanent building would be a costly proposition just now. A building that would cost $40,000 now might be erected for $25,000 after the war. He did not favour the bigger project now, but thought that comfortable quarters should be provided.

Mr. J. Guise Bagley referred at some length to the Chelsea Hospital for Soldiers and the Duke of York's School for Children in England. The work of looking after the orphans of soldiers who had died overseas was an important one and he would prefer to support such a movement rather than the project under discussion, althougr he was willing to contribue to the latter.

Mr. E. A. Peck expressed himself as wholly in sympathy with the movement to provide comfortable quarters for the Veterans, although like other speakers he did not favour a campaign for permanent buildings at the present time. He was prepared to assist in securing for the Veterans ample accommodation for the present needs, and through such a plan would receive support.

Mr. Dobbin suggested that possibly the furniture of the officers' quarters in the armouries could be purchased.

Col. Mills.

Lieut.-Col. Mills replied that this suggestion was absurd. "There isn't enough money in Peterborough to buy them," remarked the commanding officer of the 57th. He thought the Veterans had made a mistake by deciding in the first place to hold a campaign for $40 000. Such a building would be too expensive a proposition to maintain even if the citizens provided the money for its erection. It would be possible to use the recreation rooms in the armouries if no troops were quartered there. However, Col. Mills did not advise leaving the whole campaign until the end of the war.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman said that the question was a large one. A home for disabled soldiers would certainly have to be provided in the future. He thought the rooms in the armouries might be made very comfortable for the present use of the Veterans and that the bigger project should be deferred.

Mr. J. J. Turner suggested the appointment of a committee, and the following were selected to represent the citizens: Mayor Duffus, Mrs. W. R. Morris, J. J. Turner, E. A. Peck, G. N. Gordon and Ald. F. H. Dobbin. The G.W.V.A. will appoint representatives on this committee.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reply to "Cook's" request in last Saturday's Examiner I enclose a tested receipe for jellied or canned chicken, excellent for sending to the boys overseas.

Yours sincerely,
Mrs. S. A. McBride.
214 Dalhousie. street.

Canning The Chicken.

Free the meat from the bones and cut it into pieces of such size that they will go into the jars easily. Pack the raw meat solidly into tested clean glass jars (previously sterilized) filling the jars to within three quarters of an inch from the top. Sprinkle over the top of the meat half a teaspoonful of salt for each pint of meat. Add no water. Celery leaves, onion, pepper or other seasoning may be added if desired.

Adjust on the jar a new rubber of good quality. Place the cover on the top of the jar, and adjust, but do not fasten the upper wire clamp; or, if a screw top jar is used, partly screw on the cover.

Place the jars on a rack in a tightly covered container, such as a wash boiler, in which there is warm water that reaches to about an inch from the tops of the jars.

Sterilize the meat by cooking it four or five hours, beginning to count the time when the water around the jars reaches the boiling point.

After removing the jars from the sterilizer complete the sealing of each jar by adjusting the lower wire of the clamp, or, in the case of a screw jar top, by screwing the top tight. Keep the jars in a cool place.

A three-pound fowl should fill a one and one-half pint or, perhaps, a quart jar.

A fowl weighing two pounds, when dressed, should make a pint can of solid meat and a pint of stock thick enough to jelly.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: In conversation with a prominent citizen yesterday I find there are many eligible soldiers, who would make capital candidates for the win the war party to be selected along the lines suggested by Mr. Green's letter which appeared in the press recently. Such a choice should be acceptable to both political parties and thus avoid acrimony and the expenses of an election, and which would act as a stimulus to the Union Government. There is no reason why both of our ridings should not adopt the same course. They are doing it in other constituencies.

Lt.-Col. J. J. Carrick, who has been returned by acclamation at the last election for Thunder Bay was nominated when overseas as his party's candidate for the next election. A few days ago he sent in a strong expression of his approval of the Union Government and an offer to resign the nomination in favor of Col. D. Hogarth, D.S.O., so as to avoid a war time election.

While the west riding may have more soldiers to select a candidate from, the east riding would have in Capt. Birdsall, for instance, an ideal candidate, and no doubt many others, too.

Yours truly,
PATRIOTISM.

Oct. 23, 1917.

A Peterboro lady writes: The enclosed clipping is from the Boston Post of October 18th. In these days of Red Cross collections and when another "Victory Loan" is about to be raised in Canada, I thought that perhaps these sentiments of a Catholic clergyman in Massachusetts might be of interest to some of the readers of the Examiner:

Dr. Van Allen could hardly make a more direct appeal than the one which came from Monsignor Cassidy at the mass meeting in Fall River, in which he concluded:: "Let us do it, every one with heart and hand, and with open purse. Let those who have thousands give thousands, and let those who have hundreds give hundreds. St. Patrick's parish has a debt of well nigh $100,000. Yesterday I collected $1000 in part payment of the debt. Let the debt stand. My country needs the money; I gladly loan it.

"This war is on. We're going to win. To win we want men and money. The men are willing, but the money's wanting. We have the men; we'll get the money. We are not going to offer our sons and board our dollars. We want leaden and silver and golden bullets. We'll get them. Just as long as the Stars and Stripes float over a single soldier or sailor fighting our battles, and bleeding for our cause, we clothe him though we have to go naked to do it; we'll feed him though we go hungry to do it. We'll give him metal for guns and ammunition though we send our church bells to the foundry to do it, and we will find the means to fight though to do it we melt the 'golden chalices of our altars."

One purpose of the subscriptions to the second Liberty Loan is that those who are unable to go to the front may have an opportunity to back up the boys who have gone to the trenches and cantonments. It is most inspiring to hear how the 'boys' themselves are likewise answering the call of the country for funds.

Long Years of Love

There is perhaps no beauty quite to compare with that of a love which has lasted through long years, grave and gay. This is the theme of the song, "When You and I Were Young Maggie," which Evan Williams sings with such sympathy and might on Victrola Record 74490. This can be heard any time at the Victrola Parlours of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Ltd., B. H. Britton, Manager, Royal Bank Building, corner George and Hunter streets.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

"LIBERAL" SUGGESTS A LIBERAL CONVENTION IN WEST PETERBOROUGH

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Is it not time that the Liberals of West Peterborough called a convention to put a candidate in the field? No Liberal has yet been given the opportunity to either accept or reject a nomination for this riding. It is only fair that the Liberals here should have the opportunity of placing a candidate in the field, and until a regular convention is called no one has any right to speak for the party as its representative.

There never was a time in the history of the Dominion when the application of Liberal principles to the conduct of public affairs is so badly needed.

We are engaged in a great war to determine whether the people shall rule themselves or whether they shall be ruled by the autocrats of Germany. While we are thus fighting our common enemy, it is important to see that the autocrats and "big interests" within our own gates, do not rob the common people of their common rights, to tax themselves to enjoy even handed justice, to enjoy equal opportunities to acquire wealth and comfort, and to see that no condition is created whereby the rich shall become richer and the poor poorer.

During this last six years these Liberal principles have been wantonly violated. We have seen that the magnates of the Canadian Northern Railway have passed through our Parliament a commission to assess the value of $60,000,000.00 of their common stock, which the Borden Government's own valuators said was not worth a cent, that it never represented a dollar's investment, and was what is known as "watered stock."

This country is increasing its national debt at the rate of one million dollars a day in the conduct of this war. Can it afford to waste its credit and its money by giving it to Canadian millionaires who already enjoy more than they are entitled to? We have certain men who have been allowed to monopolize the control and distribution of food and accumulate millions of dollars at the expense of the common people under the nose and with the approval of the Borden government. Can the electors who believe that all should have an equal chance condone such an autocratic creation?

In these distressful times we have the private fighting in the trenches, enduring every hardship and facing every danger at $1.10 a day, while one of our Borden food barons is living in luxury and ease in his gorgeous mansion in receipt of dividends amounting to a million dollars a year. I have not the space to discuss the horde of profiteers, plunderers and parasites who are enjoying the blessings of friendly relations with the Borden government. They are too many, but I have no doubt they are fervently praying that his "Onion" government may be sustained, even though its rank offences can be smelt in the trenches of France and Flanders.

If democracy is worth fighting for, it is worth retaining by voting for its principles. We must see that the freedom and liberty we now enjoy is not endangered. We want criticism even in war time and a Liberal who believes in his principles never had a better opportunity and more grounds to criticize any government than the present one whose life has been unduly prolonged. By all means let us have a Liberal convention.

Yours, etc.,
LIBERAL.

GERMAN LABOUR PROTESTS.

Army Restricts Unions, Leaders Complain to Hindenburg.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23. — Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General von Ludendorff have received leaders of the German trades unions, who laid before them complaints against the regulations issued by department heads of the army limiting, or in some cases paralyzing, the freedom of action of the unions.

The outcome of the conference has not been announced, but the Vorwarts of Berlin believes that the grievances of the unions will be investigated.

Many citizens and people from the surrounding country took advantage of the occasion to visit the place and have a close-up view of the machine.

FELLOWSHIP FOR MR. HONE

Former Teacher of Local Collegiate Institute is Honoured

The following is from the Toronto Globe:

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—The Honourary Council for Scientific and Industrial Research in Canada has for the purpose of aiding Canadian industry, recommended the Government to establish twenty studentships, and, for more advanced students, five fellowships, to be awarded to young men who have already completed their preliminary scientific training in our universities or technical colleges and who show a special ability in research. The holders of these scholarships will then follow courses of study which will give them special training in the methods of modern scientific research as applied to the development of the various Canadian industries. These scholarships have now been established by the Government, but such a large number of the most promising young men of the Dominion who would have been qualified for the appointment have gone to the front, or are engaged at home in work connected with the manufacture of munitions, that the full number of students and scholarships will not be awarded this fall.

Nine Awards Already Made.

The following, however, have been awarded studentships or fellowships, and will at once enter upon their course of study at one or other of the large universities of the Dominion, unless they should be called for overseas service:

Studentships—W. H. Hatcher, B.A., McGill University; R. J. Clerk, B.A., McGill; H. H. C. Ireton, M.A., University of Toronto; J. F. T. Young, M.A., Toronto O. J. Bridgeman, B.A., University of Saskatchewan; R. Hamer, M.A., Toronto.

Fellowships—A. D. Hone, M.A., University of Toronto, formerly of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute staff; A. J. Walker, B.A., University of Saskatchewan; Geo. H. Henderson, M.A., B.Sc., Dalhousie University.

Highly Trained Men Needed.

Owing to the fact that men who are qualified to undertake advanced scientific and industrial research, either in connection with the war work, or for development of our important industries in Canada, are needed in a very especial manner at the present time, the Advisory Council has memorialized the Government that in its opinion it is not in the best interests of the country at the present time that men who have received a high scientific training fitting them to undertake such special work should be allowed to enlist in the ordinary combatant services.

COMIC INCIDENT OF WAR.

Escaping Prisoner Provided Tug-of-War at the Frontier.

OLDENZAAN, Netherlands, Oct. 23.—A comic incident reported from the frontier involved a Russian prisoner of war who was on the point of stepping from German on to Netherlands soil, when he was grasped by a German sentry. A wrestle ensued. The fugitive threw himself on the ground, and lay with the upper part of his body in Holland, and the other in German territory.

A Dutch sentry rushed to the Russian's help, seized him by the arms and pulled. The German soldier pulled at the Russian's legs in the opposite direction. The Russian began to kick, with the result that the Dutch frontier guardian was able to haul his out of the "danger zone."

The first man to arrive was the American officer. Then almost immediately there arrived a group of Poilus who took charge of the prisoners and the prize. The Zeppelin commander was found to be suffering from an injured arm. He expressed the utmost chagrin over his failure to burn the airship with any one of the six incendiary bombs which he had in his cabin, designed just for that purpose.

Successful Air Raids By Naval Flyers

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 23. — British seaplanes kept up their aerial offensive during the last few days, the Admiralty announced to-day. On Sunday they bombed the Melle railway sidings, near Ghent, and at night dropped bombs on objectives around the St. Denis Westrem aerodrome.

On Monday afternoon a raid was attempted on Zeebrugge Mole, but owing to the thick clouds the Mole was missed and the planes thereupon turned their attention to two small vessels alongside it, which were hit by bombs. Other bombs burst close to the German seaplane base and the Mole. All the British planes returned safely.

Important Gains Made By British

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Wm. Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 23.—The British retirement, south of Houthulst Forest at eight o'clock last night before the German counter attack in nowise lessened the value of yesterday's advance.

Examination of prisoners to-day revealed the fact that Crown Prince Rupprecht had ordered his picked men to hold the block-houses, redoubts, fortified posts and pill boxes throughout this territory "at any cost." Furthermore the orders had gone out that if positions were lost, specially trained units should retake them immediately, regardless of sacrifice in men.

The British and French fought forward stubbornly and held all their gains save in the one instance.

An unusually large number of German dead littered the muddy battlefield to-day or formed grim and ghastly mounds in the interior of the pill boxes.

Considering the limited size of the operations, the number of prisoners and guns taken is considered most important.

SELECTING CANDIDATES A BIG TASK

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — The task of selecting candidates is probably the toughest proposition the Unionist government now has to solve. It is desired that there shall be as many acclamations as possible, but all sorts of Unionist aspirants are cropping up. The Government does not want to "endorse" two candidates in any one constituency. On the other hand it is difficult in many cases to induce either candidate to retire in favour of the other. This is especially true in Ontario where the desparity between the Conservatives and Liberals sitting members is marked. This somewhat delicate problem is after all for the local party managers to employ their ingenuity and diplomacy toward the solving. Independent Conservatives or Liberal candidates running on the Unionist platform, but not endorsed, will be heavily handicapped through the fact that they can secure only that part of the soldiers' vote cast personally on their behalf. On the other hand straight Laurier candidates are credited with all votes cast for the Opposition.

SIR WILFRID IS BETTER

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has been indisposed for the past week or so, feels much better this morning and expects to go to Montreal to-morrow. The date of his London meeting has not yet been fixed. Later on the Opposition leader contemplates visiting the west.

Sir Wilfrid has for the past few days been preparing his manifesto which may be made public before the end of the week.

LINDSAY, Oct. 23. — Mr. Albert Pitchford, of Peterborough, an employee of the Boving plant, met with a severe accident a few days ago. He was operating a machine when his hand was caught. There was a compound fracture of one finger, the end cut off another and a third lacerated.

MARIPOSA TOWNSHIP WANTS THE HYDRO

Ring of Door Bell Frightened Her

Mrs. Pitman Was So Nervous She Walked Floor Nights For Hours

"I was actually on the verge of a nervous breakdown when I started on Tanlac, and it has not only restored my health, but has added ten pounds to my weight," declared Mrs. John Pitman, wife of an employee of the Hobbs Manufacturing Co., Ltd., and living at 143 Bruce street, London, the other day.

"My health began to fail seven years ago," she continued, "and I suffered terribly from nervous indigestion. For over ayear I could hardly retain anything I ate and most of the time lived on a diet of malted milk and eggs; anything else nauseated me so I couldn't keep it down and I was slowly starving to death. My nerves were in such a wretched state that whenever the door bell rang it frightened me so I had it removed, and many a night I was so unstrung that I would walk the floor till my feet ached. I got worse in spite of everything and became too weak to do a thing about the house and I got to the point where I didn't know which way to turn.

"By the time I had used up half my first bottle of Tanlac, I felt so much better that I threw away all the other medicines I had in the house. I have stuck to Tanlac ever since and my appetite has improved so I can eat most anything I want —meats and pastry and all sorts of things I had to shun, and I am taking on flesh right along. My nerves are quiet again, I sleep like a baby and get up in the mornings fresh and strong and able to do all my housework. I am feeling better than I have in years and am so grateful for what Tanlac has done for me that I feel it my duty to tell everybody about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

Mr. F. W. Doan, district superintendent of the Bell Telephone Co., left this afternoon for Brantford, where he will attend the unveiling and other dedicatory ceremonies in connection with the memorial of the invention of the telephone by Alexander Graham Bell in Brantford in 1874.

THIS DETROIT WOMAN IS DOING HER BIT.

DETROIT, Oct. 23.—Detroit's Liberty Loan committee believes it has found one young woman whose patriotism embodies Webster's four definitions of the word. Miss Beulah Henderson, living at No. 50 Oak avenue, this city, is the name of this young patriot. She is employed in a large Detroit music house at a salary of $15 a week. Miss Henderson gives $4 a week for the support of a Belgian baby, pays $1 a week dues in a Windsor patriotic organization, sends $2 weekly to a brother in a French hospital recovering from wounds, and is paying $1 a week for a $50 Liberty bond. She regrets she is unable to do more.

INQUIRY TO BE HELD

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons to-day that a court martial inquiry into the recent North Sea fight would be held as soon as the survivors of the British destroyers Mary Rose and Strongbow were able to attend. He promised a fuller statement of the naval action, in which the British lost the two destroyers, next week.

Mayor of Montreal Has Novel Plan

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—Mayor Martin has a scheme to overcome the $2,000,000 deficit that is unique, if nothing else. It is, in brief, to abolish the fire department, which, with the water department, costs about $1,700,000 a year, and make the savings therein pay insurance on the fire losses suffered by the city, about $1,000,000 a year. He figures the citizens pay 80 insurance companies $3,500,000 in premiums a year. By his proposed system of mutual fire insurance the citizens would pay as follows in premiums: $1,200,000 cost of administrating the fire department, $500,000 cost of administering the water department, $1,000,000 fire losses, $100,000 cost of administering the scheme, $250,000 reserve fund to meet fire losses. Total, $3,050,000.

His worship calculates that the citizens would thus save $450,000 a year. What the city council will do with his proposal next Monday is another question.

noon the men who could not be examined at that session were given cards entitling them to a chance before the doctors at the evening sitting. A similar system was followed in the evening, when twenty men were handed cards of admittance to the Board this morning.

Some of the men come from a long distance and several have made a number of trips to the city to be examined. The card system is a protection to them, as it insures them an examination at the next sitting. There are scores of local young men who have not been examined yet, and by present indications all the Class One men in the district will not have a chance to go before the doctors and will have to report or claim exemption without an examination.

The Board handled fifty-six candidates yesterday, of which thirty-four were placed in "A" Category. The total rejections for the day number 17, which is a little higher than usual.

The afternoon results were as follows:

Category A	10
Category C	1
Category E	9

In the evening fourteen were examined with the following results:

Category A	9
Category B	1
Category C	1
Category E	3

Registrations Few.

There is little increase in the number of registrations reported at the post office, although two more A men have reported for service, making a total of nine men who have so far signified their willingness to serve. Total registrations up to this morning were 138, and 129 of these claimed exemption.

TRIPLETS WERE BORN IN DIFFERENT STATES.

Two of the children were born in Kansas and the third at Peconic Siding, just across the Colorado line. Mrs. Atkinson had been visiting in the East. Mother and children are well and now are at Colorado Springs.

which is granted to those totally disabled who are, in addition, helpless in so far as attendance to their physical wants are concerned, has also been increased. In future this allowance will be $300 instead of $250.

Change Respecting Children.

"With regard to the children of a disabled pensioner a very definite change has been adopted. Under the pension regulations, as approved last year, only those receiving a pension for a disability of sixty per cent. or more were entitled to allowances on account of their children. Again, no distinction was drawn as between the allowance for the children of those sixty per cent. disabled and those totally disabled. For instance, a man fifty-five per cent. disabled, with four children, received $16 per month pension for himself, but nothing for his children; the man sixty per cent. disabled, with four children, received $24 per month for his children; and the man totally disabled, with four children, received $40 per month for himself and $24 per month for his children. The allowances for the children of disabled men have, therefore, been graded down in accordance with the disability. The totally disabled man will be entitled to $8 per month for each of his children; the man disabled eighty per cent. will be entitled to $7; the man disabled eighty per cent. will be entitled to $7; the man disabled sixty per cent. will be entitled to $6; and the man disabled fifty-five per cent. will be entitled to $5.50; and so on in descending amounts, so that the man disabled five per cent. will be entitled to fifty cents per month for each of his children. The totally disabled private will thus receive an additional increase of thirty-three and one third per cent. in the allowances payable for his children. The percentage of increase on account of the children will be less as the disability decreases to sixty per cent. Below sixty per cent. the disabled man will now be entitled to allowances for children, although under the previous regulations he was not entitled to any such allowance.

Better Treatment for Married Men.

Up to the present time no additional allowance for a married disabled pensioner had been made. It was considered that in this way the unmarried man was better treated than the married man. The amendment therefore, provides for an additional allowance for the married disabled man based on the degrees of the man's disability. The allowance amounts to $8 per month or $96 per year for a totally disabled soldier or sailor, 40 cents less per month being paid for each decrease of five per cent. in disability.

The widows of those holding the rank of sub-lieutenant in the Canadian Navy or lieutenant in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, or lower ranks, will be entitled to a flat increase of twenty-five per cent. pension. Thus, the widow of a private who previously received $384 per annum will now receive $480 per annum.

One-Third More for Children.

If the widow is drawing allowances on account of children, she will be entitled to a flat increase in their allowance of thirty-three and one-third per cent. For instance, a private's widow with four children will receive $40 a month for herself and $32 per month for her children, instead of $32 per month for herself and $14 per month for her children.

Orphans to get a Third More.

A flat increase of thirty-three and one-third per cent. has been made in the allowance for orphan children. They will receive $16 a month each, instead of $12 per month each.

Dependent Parents Same as Widow.

Up to the present time the allowance to a dependent parent has been $24 per month—that is to say $8 a month less than the pension of the widow. The amendment made authorizes the same pension for the dependent parents as that authorized for the widow. Instead of $24 per month the dependent parent will now receive $40 per month, being a flat increase of sixty-six and two-thirds per cent.

Brothers and Sisters Now Included.

Dependent brothers and sisters were not previously provided for in the pension regulations. A very large number of cases come up, however, in which the eldest boy of a family has been supporting his mother and his younger brothers and sisters, and continued to support them until he died on service. With regard to his younger brothers and sisters he might almost have been said to have taken the place of a father in their respect. The amendment provides, therefore, that for dependent brothers and sisters under the ages of sixteen or seventeen years the same allowances shall be provided that are provided for children. Thus, a younger brother who has been dependent on a private will receive $8 per month if one of his parents is alive, and $16 per month if both of his parents are dead.

Case of Deserted or Neglected.

It has been found that in a number of cases the children, owing to the drunkenness or misconduct of their pensioned father or mother, have been deserted or are not being maintained by him or her. The Pension Commissioners have, therefore, now been authorized to pay the allowances for those children, as well as part of the pension, to a guardian or administrator, so that the children will have a fair chance of becoming useful citizens.

Will Maintain Incurable and Helpless.

The Commissioners have also now been given more ample authority to provide for the maintenance of incurable and helpless soldiers and sailors, such as men suffering from insanity, total paralysis, and other similar conditions. Previously the maintenance of certain helpless men devolved upon the Provinces or upon private parties. In the future these men will be maintained by the Federal institution, or by members of their own families.

Further Amendments.

Other amendments have been made with regard to the date of commencement of pension, the remarriage of female pensioners, the interpretation of the word "negligent," the extension of delay in which application for pensions must be made and the rights of a dependent parent to receive pension. These last amendments do not in any way affect the spirit of the regulations. They have been made merely for the purpose of making the regulations more clear.

Hope To Relieve Most Hardships.

It is thought that the new regulations will relieve most of the hardships which have come to light. At the next session of Parliament legislation will be introduced by the Government dealing with the whole question of pensions. This will enable full discussion and reconsideration.

The Latchstring Is Out.

The saying "The latchstring is out" signifies hospitality. It is a standing invitation to visit the party who uses it. In early times throughout New England and other parts of the country the houses were built of logs, and the door fastenings were simply a wooden latch on the inside of the door, which fell into a notched stick in the doorpost. The simple contrivance was owing to the fact that nails and iron were hard to get. On the inside the latch was lifted by the hand easily, but to lift it from the outside a hole was bored in the door, which was made of slabs, and a string passed through which was fastened to the latch. By pulling the string the latch was lifted and the door opened. To lock the door the string was drawn inside so that a person on the outside could not use it.

He Had To.

If all men were like a colored porter in Frankfort, newspaper men would find the game an extremely easy one.

The porter, who is known to every man and boy in the city, recently was divorced from his first wife and within a few days was married again. A reporter happened in the clerk's office just as he was about taking out his license.

"When are you to be married, Frank?" asked the reporter.

The porter told him, and the questioning was continued until his wife to be grabbed hold of his arm and whispered, "Don't tell that man all about this."

"I've got to," the porter whispered back. "He's a reporter."

THE SCARLET OATH

A story which rapidly carries us from one continent to another with a thrill in every foot of the way. Though Gail Kane plays her twin sister, she is as different in character as she is similiar in looks. Almost everyone would pledge to avenge their mother and this little family is no exception. If you enjoy a stirring tale don't fail to see this play.

Peterboro' Grocer Did Not Own Car

Had Disposed of It Three Months Ago—License Had Not Been Purchased

In connection with the item in yesterday's Examiner, referring to the return of some pumpkins that were taken by some men in an automobile from a market garden in Monaghan, a week ago, it might be stated that the owner of the car was not a Peterborough grocer. He had disposed of the car more than three months ago, but the license number was still standing in his name, and caused the confusion that has arisen. He had no knowledge whatever of the movements of the car since disposal of it, three months ago.

FRENCH CAPTURE 7,500 GERMAN PRISONERS

The Germans Lose Heavily in the Fighting in Flanders

The Government Will Not Tolerate The Irish Revolt

British Merchant Cruiser Lost

Special to The Examiner:

LONODON, Oct. 24.—The British merchant cruiser Orama, twelve thousand tons, was torpedoed and sunk. No lives were lost. A British destroyer was sunk in a collision. Two officers and twenty-one men saved.

GRUMBLER, AND GRATEFUL.

With a sigh the grumbler shook his head,
As thus to himself he sadly said,
For a day of Thanksgiving well indeed,
It seems to me there is scanty need.
What with the cost of living so high,
Fuel scarce and cold winter drawing nigh.

And our politicians to the last man
Forever brewing some wretched plan
To ruin the country and force our sons
To go as food for the German guns,
Reaped down like grain in the fiery fray
And left on the field, the vulture's prey.

Or if by chance they 'scape the accursed strife,
Return they, crippled and maimed for life.
There are busy-bodies who even dare
To curtail by harsh law our daily fare.
So with hard times, trouble, and wicked war
There is little left to be thankful for.

But grateful, 'mused in a different way,
With a smile of good old Thanksgiving day,
How many blessings our hearts to cheer,
Our Father has given us all this year,
Kind Providence, with harvest store
Has filled our garners, flowing o'er.

Tho' high the cost of living flies,
Proportionate our profits rise,
With patriot zeal, and steady hand
Wise statesmen at the helm stand,
Thank heaven that still enough remains
Of manhood, in Canadian veins.

Freely to drench for Flanders sod,
For honour, country, king and God.
So we may sleep here unafraid
Of murderous Zeppelins nightly raid,
Thus spite of all the ills of war,
How much we have to be thankful for.

Chas. E. Would Of Asphodel Won Burnham Cup For Fourth Time At Annual Plowing Match

For the fourth consecutive year Charles E. Would of Asphodel carried off the principal honours at the Peterborough County plowing match, held yesterday on the farms of Mr. J. A. Young and Mr. J. K. Moore, on the fourth line of Smith. Opposed by three of Otonabee's best plowmen in the contest in sod, with high cut plows, he again won the silver trophy donated by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and the $20.00 cash prize presented by Mr. R. R. Hall. These four annual competitions have conclusively demonstrated Mr. Would's supremacy among Peterboro County plowmen, and has created a feeling of confidence among the members of the Peterborough Plowmen's Association that he can win the classic prize in the Provincial match. This opinion was strengthened by the statement of Mr. James A. McLean of Richmond Hill, the judge of yesterday's competition, who stated that there was striking improvement in Mr. Would's work, and that he was worthy of rank with the best plowmen in Ontario. The quality of all the plowing, he added, was particularly praiseworthy and was an evidence of the progress that the local matches are effecting.

"I would like to see a larger field of entrants next year," Mr. McLean said. "There should be thirty or forty plowmen at this match. The younger men should determine that they are going to make themselves as efficient as Mr. Would, and the other winners."

An Unfavourable Day.

The weather conditions yesterday were decidedly unfavourable. A chill, east-blown rain swept the adjoining fields of stubble and sod, adding a trying difficulty to the plodding contestants. It kept away many farmers who would otherwise have attended, but apparenly it proved no detriment to the skill of the plowmen. The patience that is an essential element in their character was severely tested, and was certainly not found wanting.

The Winners.

The results in the various classes were announced as follows:

Class I. in Sod.

For high cut or sod plows:

1st—Charles E. Would of Asphodel won the J. H. Burnham Cup and $20 in cash presented by Mr. R. R. Hall.

Farm and Dairy Special.

The special prize of $5 offered by Farm and Dairy for the best competing outfit, team and harness considered, was won by Hugh McFee of Otonabee.

The Field Competition.

This year the Association made a departure from their usual programme by adding a field competition for the best five acres plowed previous to the match. The judges were Mr. Joshua Smitheon and Mr. W. J. Cleghorn. Last week they examined the work submitted and their decisions were given yesterday by Mr. Cleghorn, as follows:

2nd—Hugh McFee, Otonabee, 112 points.

3rd — Patrick English, Asphodel, 108 points.

4th—James Walton Smith, 105 points.

5th—Thomas Metcalfe, Smith, 103 points.

There were fourteen entries in this competition which Mr. McLean highly commended. He encouraged the various townships to take a pride in their plowing for the benefit of their land and incidentally with a view to winning the honours of the county in this contest.

A Red Cross Help.

The ladies of Central Smith have organized a Red Cross Society and their first field tent was welcomed by the men in the field yesterday. They work under extremely disagreeable conditions, but the spirit they displayed may be accepted as a guarantee of their future efforts in behalf of the men in the devastated and dangerous fields of France. Their tent was located across the road on Mr. J. A. McGregor's farm, and the proceeds exceeded forty dollars. The ladies in charge were Mesdames J. K. Moore, Proudlove, Archer, Tully, J. A. McGregor, Simpson, Scott, Graham, Young, Stinson, Hunter, R. Darling, Sanderson, Blewett and Miss Paul.

The "Farm and Dairy" with its coal oil stove, was a bayen to the spectators. The tractor plow demonstration by Mr. Russell Darling, who uses it for plowing, threshing, and other farm work, provided an interesting contrast, but in justice to the gas-driven implement it was admitted that the soft and slippery surface was detrimental to its best performance.

Addresses Given.

Mr. Joshua Smithson, President of the Peterborough Plowmen's Association, braved the wind and rain, and Mr. Cleghorn and Mr. Chas. S. Brown, the Secretary of the Association.

Mr. Brown stated that a comparison of the results of the past two annual matches showed that Otonabee Township has scored, through its plowmen, the highest number of points. His figures were as follows:

	1916	1917
Otonabee	95	95
Smith	70	75
Asphodel	20	20
Douro		20
Ennismore	25	15

A Pound of Whole Wheat contains 1700 calories, says the chemist—but it doesn't contain any calories for you unless you can digest it. It is what you digest, not what you eat, that supplies nourishment for the day's work. It is a time to cut out expensive foods that generally contain little nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent. whole wheat—nothing wasted, nothing thrown away. It is real man-power food. Two or three of these little loaves of baked whole wheat with milk and fresh fruits make a nourishing, strengthening meal at a cost of only a few cents.

The Government Will Not Tolerate Revolt In Ireland

Commons Defeated John Redmond's Resolution by a Large Majority

THE RESOLUTION

LONDON, Oct. 24.—After a strong speech by Premier Lloyd George, indicating that the government would tolerate no revolt in Ireland the Commons defeated John Redmond's resolution by one hundred and thirty three of a majority.

The motion reads: "This House deplores the policy which has been pursued by the Irish Executive Government, and the Irish military authorities at a time when the highest interests of Ireland and the Empire demand the creation of an atmosphere favourable to a successful result of the deliberations of the Irish convention."

VINOL MAKES GOOD BLOOD

Positive—Convincing Proof

Many so-called remedies for anaemia are only so in name. Their makers are afraid to prove their claims by telling what their medicines contain. The only way to be honest with the people is to let them know what they are paying for. Here is the Vinol formula. When the doctor knows what a medicine contains, it ceases to be a "patent" medicine.

Beef Cod Liver and Beef Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, Iron and Ammonium Citrate, Lime and Soda Glycerophosphates, Cascarin.

Any doctor will tell you that the ingredients of Vinol, as named above, will enrich the blood and banish anaemia and create strength. When the blood is pure and rich and red, the body is strong and robust.

You can prove this at our expense because your money will be returned if Vinol does not improve your health.

BIGGEST SURPRISE OF HIS LIFE, HE SAYS

Williamson Finds Relief From Troubles of Five Years Standing

"I have never been so surprised over anything as I have been over the results of Tanlac in my case," said William Williamson, a well known brick mason living at 1115 St. Clarens Avenue, Toronto, recently.

"My kidneys have been bothering me for four or five years," he continued, "but during the past year other ailments set in and kept me feeling miscrable nearly all the time. I had terrible pains across my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything, then rheumatism settled in my right leg and at times I simply suffered torture from it. The pain was so sharp and cutting at times I would almost drop in my tracks. My appetite went square back on me and nothing I would eat tasted right. I was very nervous — could hardly sleep—I would just roll from one side of the bed to the other and many a night I have not closed my eyes for sleep at all. I just had that dejected, worn-out feeling, had no energy and didn't care for anything and certainly felt awful.

"I had been reading about Tanlac but I had tried so many things that did me no good that I was skeptical and had no faith in anything. In fact I was depressed and discouraged and felt that nothing could help me. But one day a friend of mine said, "Why don't you try Tanlac, I have taken it and it surely did do me good." "So with that I began taking Tanlac and improving every day. I have now taken four bottles, the rheumatism never troubles me at all and my kidneys are in fine shape. My appetite is fine and everything I eat tastes good and agrees with me. My nerves are strong and steady now, I sleep like a log and all my tired, depressed feelings are gone. I now have my former strength and energy and feel like myself again. Tanlac has certainly been a great thing for me and I can't praise it too highly."

Easy to Make This Pine Cough Remedy

Thousands of families swear by its prompt results. Inexpensive, and saves about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain granulated sugar syrup. Nothing better, but why buy it? You can easily make it yourself in five minutes.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that seems instant. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

To oppose further opposition to Ormiston's entrance would, she very well knew, but serve to magnify his rage. She drew the scarlet cloak about her throat, snatched the candle from the table, and turned to the maid, cowering in terror on the floor.

"Unbar the door, girl," she said, very white and trembling.

The mulatto fumbled with the heavy piece of oak. There was no cessation of the noise without.

"A fine mistress, by my soul!" they heard Ormiston exclaim, as with a final thrust of his rapier he swung the door upon its hinges. Striding to the table, he brought the blade down upon it with a resounding crash. "God's blood! Am I to be kept waiting on my own doorstep like a dog" He glared at the two women, while his companions straggled into the room behind him. "Why did you not open?"

Curiously enough, his words, his manner, brought to Ramona a sudden feeling of relief. She realized that had he been aware of Barton's presence, no questions concerning the delay in opening the door would have delayed the latter's quick destruction. She grasped pitifully at the slight hope.

"I slept, Firebrand," she said in an even voice. "I did not expect you at this hour of the night." Only by a mighty effort was she able to speak at all. A leaden mask of tragedy lay over her face. A hopeless grief filled her soul. She was sure that by now Barton must have awakened. Even the thick wooden door could scarcely have prevented him from hearing all that Ormiston had said. Hearing, he would understand, and understanding, judge. Nothing could happen now to save her. In some way that she could not see, lay a possibility that Barton might be spared, but she herself was lost beyond all hope, self-confessed, a light woman, before the man she loved. To his salvation she determined now to bend all her efforts. It was the only proof that she could give him of her devotion.

"What is the hour of the night to me?" she heard Ormiston asking. "May I not enter my house when it pleases me?"

"My own house!" What would these words mean to the man who lay within her bedroom? What would he think of her now? "My own house," and she had let him believe that she dwelt there alone. "Liar," "Courtesan," "Jezebel." The words screamed shrilly in her ears their message of despair. She had feared, for one fleeting moment, that hearing the voices in the outer room he migh think her in danger, and so attempt to come to her rescue. Small need to fear that now. Ormiston had addressed her as a man addresses a woman who is either his mistress or his wife. In neither event could she lay any claim to Barton's assistance; he would flee from her, as from a plague. A tragical situation in which there remained to her but the opportunity of playing the part of mistress the better, so that Barton might perhaps thus be saved. She held her quivering nerves in a firm grip and forcing a smile, strove to turn aside Ormiston's suspicions, to placate his wrath.

"You forget, Firebrand," she said gently, "that I thought you still at sea."

"Now that you know better," he growled, somewhat mollified, "see that you give me and my brave lads proper welcome." He indicated his companions with an unsteady hand. "They have come to drink a night-cap with me. Lights, damn you! Lights! And rum!"

She grew crmson at this. Never before had Ormiston so addressed her.

"As you wish, Firebrand," she said, then went over to the cupboard and with the candle in her hand began to light the tapers in the pair of massive silver candelabra that stood upon its broad lower shelf.

The increasing flames lit up a singular picture. Ormiston, his hat and rapier flung upon the table, sprawled in the great carved chair beside it, glowering about in brutal ill nature. His eyes, shot with blood from the liquor he had drunk, followed Ramona's every movement. She felt his gaze, but it no longer troubled her. A frozen calm possessed her. She had reached the point at which even suffering is no longer possible.

The other members of Ormiston's little party had thrown themselves down wherever opportunity offered. Long Rodgers stretched his huge frame upon the ratton couch, careless of its linen covering, and in a thick and very dismal voice roared out snatches of his song. Tench, dour and grim, sat near the head of the souch, smoking. He had no liking for the present expedition. Women being by nature creatures of the devil, he argued that no good could come from wasting time upon them.

Graves and De Rocheville paid little heed to the others, having begun a game of dice upon the top of the chest. They did not speak, save when one or the other announced in quick tones the fall of the ivory cubes. A pile of gold pieces lay between them; as they crouched low over the chest, the light from the candles outlined them in monstrous misshapen shadows upon the wall.

Ramona, the candles lighted, knelt before the cupboard. From its lower shelves she took a flask of rum, and several silver drinking cups, which she placed upon the table. But one thought filled her heart—to dispose of Ormiston's companions as quickly as might be. Once they were gone, Barton might still have a chance for his life.

As she placed the rum upon the table, Tench drew the stubby pipe from his mouth and spat upon the floor.

"A fight to warm the cockles of your heart, eh, Firebrand?"

Ormiston regarded him with a sullen frown. Some grievance weighed upon his mind.

"A man may fight like the devil himself, to fetch some wench a new bauble," he muttered, "and by Heaven, all the thanks he gets for it is black looks and a sour face." He glanced pointedly at Ramona.

"So I have always told you, Bull. A thankless lot, by my soul." The grim little man smoked furiously, cocking his single eye with an air of profound wisdom.

Ormiston still kept his eves on Ramona as she arranged the wine cups on the table. Her grief-stricken countenance, her somber eyes, displeased him.

"Smile, you Jade, smile!" he whipped out. "Have I not gone through Hell itself to bring you these?" He thrust his hand into one of the pockets of his coat and drew out a gold chain, and a pair of shoebuckles, encrusted with diamonds. "They're paid for, by my soul!" he cried, then hurled the things at her feet. "Fine baubles, are they not? They once belonged to a Spanish Don, commander of The Esperanza. A great galleon she was, and a hard nut to crack, too, eh, One Eye? When I took them, the rascal, whose worthless life I had spared, turned on me and would have run me through with his sword." He gave a hard laugh. "Faith—I broke his jaw with my pistol butt, and over he went to the sharks. Pick up your trinkets, girl. They cost a pretty penny. Five hundred souls to Davy Jones, when The Esperanza went to the bottom."

Ramona stooped and took the chain and the shoebuckles from the floor. Her trembling fingers were scarcely able to lift them; the contact with the dull metal sent a shudder throughout her body. Five hundred of her countrymen sent to their deaths that these men might wallow in still greater licentiousness, and she possess some useless bits of jewelry. She went to the cupboard and laid the things, upon its shelf. It seemed unbearable that she should even touch them. She wondered whether Barton had heard, wondered indeed what scene was hidden by the close-locked bedroom door. Was he just behind it, listening to the words that spelt her degradation? Was he awaiting the moment of his discovery, with sure knowledge of the death that confronted him? He could not hope to make even a semblance of resistance, being both weak from his illness, and unarmed. Perhaps he felt that in keeping him here, she had entrapped him to certain destruction. Of one thing at least she could be sure—the love he had felt for her was gone. Nothing mattered now, but that he might be saved. So much, at least, she felt she owed him, whatever the cost. How could she accomplish it? The question rose unanswered in her tortured brain.

LOW BLOOD PRESSURE.

First Aid to Those Suffering From Hemorrhage or Shock.

One hears a great deal about the danger of high blood pressure, but not much about the danger of too low a pressure. Yet the latter may be very swiftly fatal. It results often from shock, as well as from severe loss of blood. But there is a very simple means of giving temporary relief, which every one should know, since such knowledge might often be the means of saving life.

A diastolic pressure of fifty millimeters is critical, for the blood tends to accumulate in the abdomen, but death may be avoided if immediate means be taken to raise the arterial pressure. A late number of La Revue gives the following directions:

"The wounded person in whom arterial pressure is low should be placed immediately on an operating table heated by electricity, with his feet elevated for an hour or more some thirty millimeters (about one and one-quarter inches) higher than his head. If the diastolic pressure remains below eighty millimeters an injection of isotonic serum should be made and if necessary repeated. If the pressure does not remain sufficiently high after the second injection another injection is made of adrenalin into a vein, preferably a vein near the heel."

It will be noted that the first part of these directions can be carried out by any one—namely, the application of warmth and the raising of the patient's heels higher than his head. This is so important and so efficacious that the famous French physician and research scientist, Dr. Charles Richet, has made it a practice in his lectures to students to give them the striking object lesson of a dog which had been bled almost to the point of exhaustion, so that death was imminent, being instantly revived by this simple expedient of changing its position. When he was apparently dead while the head remained higher than the extremities, as soon as the head was lowered the waning life returned.

First aid to the injured, therefore, suffering from hemorrhage or shock is to place the victim on a mattress or bench and raise the feet slightly higher than the head.—Review of Reviews.

Let us get back to common-sense natural food

A CENTURY ago a wealthy faddist in old London invited his friends to a "white dinner." Nothing but the old-time whole-grain bread had ever been used before, but a Hungarian miller solved the problem by removing from the dark-colored flour everything but the white starchy parts so that the bread too, at the dinner, might be white. The idea of white foods became a fad and the craze spread all over the world.

is a return to the old-time, common-sense, natural diet. The almost universal use of white foods is founded upon a FAD. The daily growing popularity of Roman Meal is founded upon NATURE.

Roman Meal is a well balanced combination of whole berries of wheat (30%), whole berries of rye (35%), wheat bran (10%), and flaxseed (25%). The flax has been rendered absolutely tasteless and odorless by electricity; it is the most nourishing seed known. Roman Meal prevents indigestion. It relieves constipation, or we will return your money.

There are many Roman Meal recipes printed on the package—but you can use all or any of your own favorite recipes by mixing 1-3 white flour with 2-3 Roman Meal. Roman Meal restores the lost balance to the white flour. It makes pancakes so digestible that the most delicate person will relish them, also waffles, muffins, fruit rocks, gingerbread, brown bread, steam pudding.

You just ought to see how the kiddies and grown-ups relish Roman Meal porridge with its delicious nut-like flavor. Roman Meal porridge MUST never be stirred, except while mixing meal and water.

Roman Meal prevents indigestion. It is porous and remains porous if you do not stir while cooking. The digestive juices reach every particle quickly. Digestion is thus both rapid and thorough.

The bran in Roman Meal gives the muscles of their digestive system its natural work to do—and thus relieves constipation. The flaxseed also aids in this and prevents the bran from causing catarrh of the bowel. Ask your doctor. At all grocers.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS AMERICAN WIFE

How She Obtained Justice In Berlin

By F. A. MITCHEL

Minna Selfridge, an American girl, was quite a belle in Berlin shortly before the Pan-European war broke out. Two Germans, Count Herman Burnhardt and Heinrich Weber, were aspirants for her hand. Count Herman was not to the lady's taste, but Weber, a blue eyed, fair haired Saxon, was very much so. She accepted his attentions, and it was evident that his rival was much disgruntled. The count was an important functionary at court and considered himself insulted by a commoner aspiring to the hand of one he desired to possess himself. He was arrogant enough to show his displeasure even to Miss Selfridge.

When the war broke out Miss Selfridge had become Frau Weber. Neither Count Herman nor Weber was in the army, but both were kept busy in Berlin in the civil service. Those were days when every one to whom the slightest suspicion was attached suffered vigorous treatment. One morning as Weber was about to leave his wife for his duties of the day a file of soldiers entered his house, arrested him and took him off to prison.

The blow fell upon him and his wife like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky. Frau Weber had many friends among the German women and was not long in learning that the cause of her husband's arrest was that he possessed an American wife; that Americans were largely hostile to Germany, and complaint had been lodged with the government that Frau Weber had persuaded her husband to desert his country in the hour of its need and go with her to America.

Frau Weber went at once to Count Herman Burnhardt and laid the matter before him, asking his intervention. She called his attention to the fact that he was in a position to show a truly noble nature in assisting one who had been his rival and favoring one who had declined the honor he would have conferred upon her. The count promised to do all in his power to right the matter, assuring her that he would appeal to the emperor.

Several days passed, and Frau Weber, not hearing from the count, called upon him to learn the reason for his not keeping his promise. He told her that the emperor's time was all occupied and it was very difficult to get his attention for a moment except in most important matters connected with the war. However, the count was watching for an opportunity, and if one occurred he would at once avail himself of it.

Frau Weber had been at court and had met the emperor. She wrote him asking that her husband be released on the grounds she had stated to Count Herman. But whether the pressure on his time prevented or whatever the reason, she received no reply.

Every day women in Berlin were more and more called upon to take the places of men who were needed at the front. One day Frau Weber appeared at the office where a charge would be made against any one for disloyalty and offered her services as a clerk. She met with a refusal. The government had its eye on all foreigners and knew very well that she was an American. What was worse, her husband was a prisoner charged with intending to go to America to escape military duty.

One evening a young man whom Frau Weber had met in society before the war met her in the street. He stopped to speak with her, but only for a moment.

"I dare take only time to say a few words to you, for you are watched, and I will be compromised. I am employed in the bureau of justice and know who made the charge against you and your husband. On your promise not to reveal from whom you received the information I will tell you."

"I promise."

"Your enemy is Count Herman Burnhardt."

He raised his hat and passed on, the interview not having lasted a minute.

It would be impossible to find words to express the mental condition of the American at this intelligence. Astonishment, horror, anger, followed in quick succession. Then came deliberation as to how to make use of the information to effect her husband's release.

The more she thought of obtaining this release the more plainly she saw that, having no evidence against the count which she could use, an application in her husband's behalf would not avail anything. The only person she might influence through her knowledge would be the count himself. But if she went to him and accused him of the contemptible deed he would shrug his shoulders and declare that some enemy was accusing him falsely.

Could the count be compelled to withdraw his charge? Surely this was the only possible way of vindicating Weber. But how could force be applied to the accuser? The only man who could do so was Weber himself, and he was a captive. Minna pondered long in trying to find some way to bring power to bear on the count. Finally desperation brought her a desperate remedy.

Having formed a plan, she proceeded to put it in execution. Her first object was to obtain a disguise. Going to a coiffeur's, she bought face paint and a wig. Having changed her complexion from pink and white to olive, she painted a rosy tint in each cheek. Her own hair was a light blond; her wig raven black; her hands, too, she gave an olive tinge. This was all that was needed to make her unrecognizable.

Count Herman frequently dined at a restaurant in the Unter der Linden. Minna went there hoping to find him, but failed. On several different days she dined in the place where she had often dined with him, and one evening she was about to leave it when the count entered. He took a seat at a table and ordered his dinner. Minna went back, sat down at a table near him and ordered a dinner.

Presently the proprietor was attracted to a commotion in the vicinity of the count's table. A woman had accused him of having insulted her. The count protested. The woman declared he had said to her that in entering a restaurant without an escort she had placed herself without the pale of treatment as a lady. She said that she was an American and simply followed the custom of her country. The proprietor at first sought to quiet her and, failing, asked her to leave the place. She appealed to an army officer sitting near for protection till her husband could be summoned.

"There is no need of that," said the count. "I am perfectly willing to give you my address and shall be ready for any message your husband chooses to send me." And he threw a card on the table occupied by the lady, who took it up and immediately left the restaurant.

The same evening while Count Herman was at work in his office for in wartime he never rested—a messenger brought him a note, which read as follows:

Count Herman Burnhardt:

Sir—My wife informs me that you insulted her in a restaurant on the Unter den Linden this evening. I desire that you will give me satisfaction at once. I am an American and a stranger in Berlin, with no acquaintance whatever; consequently I have no one to call upon to act as my second. I am therefore compelled to fight you without one. You are welcome to as many attendants as you like. Yours,

ELIHU WAGSTAFF,
Little Rock, Ark., U. S. A.

The count, though vexed, could scarcely restrain a smile at this uncouth way of entering upon a combat.

"Tell Mr. Wagstaff," he said to the messenger, "that I will meet him tomorrow morning and will name the time and place later. I will provide him with a second. As the challenged party, I choose pistols, but if he prefers any other weapon I will cheerfully give way to him."

When an hour later a captain in the army, acting for the count, notified Mr. Wagstaff of the time and place of meeting he was received by Mrs. Wagstaff, who said that her husband had gone to bed and, since his nerve depended on his sleep, she would not awaken him. She would say, however, that since the count was pleased to give up the choice of weapons her husband would fight with foils.

When the captain reported this to the count the latter expressed some concern that he had not seen Mr. Wagstaff. He would have withdrawn from the matter, but his second expressed dissatisfaction at such a procedure, stating that he was bound to fight or suffer the consequences.

Count Herman was on the ground, attended by a surgeon, at the appointed hour and also with two seconds, the one for himself, the other for his opponent. A bundle of foils had also been brought. A few minutes after his arrival a carriage drove up, and out stepped Frau Weber. Her hair and her complexion were her own. She wore a cloak that reached to her feet. Advancing to the party, she threw open her cloak and revealed her figure in fencing costume. The count on seeing her was paralyzed; the others were amazed.

"Count," she said, "you are doubtless aware of the reason for this encounter. Will you send your attendants out of hearing, or shall I make my demands in their presence?"

The count was silent for a moment, then motioned the others to retire. When they had gone Minna said to him:

"You have acted a shameful part in lodging a false charge against my husband under circumstances that you know full well."

The count essayed to speak, but she stopped him.

"Either you must sign a paper retracting your charge or you must kill me or I will kill you."

Once more the count attempted to argue, but the woman, drawing a foil from beneath her cloak, stopped him with, "On guard!"

"Where is the paper you wish me to sign?" he asked.

Minna drew a document from a belt she wore and handed it to him. It read:

"I have been mistaken in my charge against Heinrich Weber and withdraw it."

Minna drew a fountain pen from her corsage and offered it to him. He accepted it, signed the document and handed it to her.

"It is enough that you have sought revenge upon a successful rival to ruin you as soon as the fact becomes known. I shall not use this paper until convinced that you do not intend to secure my husband's release. If you do not see that he is freed within two days I will send it to the emperor himself."

Re-entering her carriage, she was driven away. The attendants received no explanation from their principal. Within a few days Weber was released and returned to his duties.

DEER AND THEIR HORNS.

They Get a New Pair Each Year, and the Bravest Get the Biggest.

As every year horses shed their old coats for new ones, so the deer in our forests or parks drop their horns. Then, in about thirteen weeks, a new pair of horns arrives, but they are tender and easily hurt.

A deer's new horns are called "velvet" because they grow inside of a tough skin which is coarse and brown, like plush. For a long time he will not thrash his horns in the brush. It would be too painful.

When a deer is without horns he feels weak. When the new horns start and grow he begins to feel strong again. After awhile he tosses his head from side to side every day, and then he runs rapidly through the brush and undergrowth.

As his new horns become big they also become less easily hurt. In running through the brush the outer skin, or "velvet," is broken and peeled away. In the springtime the "velvet" drops off. The deer is then very proud of his new clothes.

If a deer is not afraid of pain he will try out his new horns long before his mates do. He will not wait until the "velvet" is gone. Wherever this outer skin is broken too soon the horn grows longer and larger. Thus it is that the bravest deer has the biggest pair of horns.

Give Your Stomach a Rest.

Give your stomach a good rest by eating plain salads or fruits or fresh green stuff, cutting out tea and coffee, soda water and other destroyers, and drink all the water you can pour down and watch the effect. After this internal cleansing you can eat what nature intended you to eat—meats, vegetables, fish, eggs and whatever you really crave. Men cannot make rules that go contrary to nature. Fads are symptoms of diseased stomachs or the outgrowth of some individual idiosyncrasy. There are no brain foods, no muscle building tablets, no nerve strengtheners, that can be made to take the place of a varied diet. Every bit of food contains elements which are taken up by the blood and distributed to the body.

Stepniak as Prophet.

A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian in England records an interesting statement made by Stepniak, the great Russian revolutionary, which is worth quoting. When he first met Stepniak, in 1889, the writer says, he asked what real prospect there was of any revolution in Russia. The reply was: "A great European war will be our chance. It will show the bureaucracy to be quite incapable of managing the affairs of the nation in a crisis."

WHY DREAD OLD AGE?

IT should be the pleasantest time of life and if coupled with good health it is. Many of our most remarkable men and women have won fame and prominence after reaching the sixties, and in lots of cases they have not been robust in youth.

The secret of health in old age is the prevention of bowel disorder. Constipation is the foe to be dreaded. Care in diet is necessary, also the avoidance of harsh cathartics, which only aggravate the trouble.

The ideal laxative for aged people is Chamberlain's Tablets

Directions for Employers

Who Purpose Claiming Exemption for Class One Men in Their Employ

THE following course is recommended for employers who have in their employ any number of men—bachelors and widowers without children (not otherwise excepted) who were 20 years old on the 13th October, 1917, and whose 34th birthday did not occur before Jan. 1st, 1917, and who propose claiming exemption for any of these men, to continue in work which is deemed to be in the National interest:

First, it will simplify matters for you and for the exemption tribunals if you instruct Class One men in your employ to go up for medical examination at the nearest Medical Board Centre.

Only Class One men, who upon medical examination are placed in Category A are liable for immediate service under the Act. Class One men placed in Categories B, C or E satisfy immediate requirements if they attach their medical report to their claim for exemption.

Employer's Statement and Schedule

Second, prepare a full statement of the total number of your employees grouping them according to their respective occupations and qualifications and stating the number in each group. Indicate the possibility or otherwise of replacing the labour of Class One men with the labour of those unavailable for military service, or outside the statutory class called up; the extent to which the withdrawal of men in the statutory class would affect the business, the reason for considering that the carrying on of the business is in the National interest, and such other facts and circumstances as may appear to be relevant.

Append to this general statement and classification, a schedule of the names, ages and occupations of all men in Class One, indicating as to those who have been medically examined, the medical Category in which they have been placed, noting against each name whether or not you propose to claim exemption on behalf of the man.

Where exemption is claimed employer should state his opinion whether such exemption should be conditional on the man's continuing to follow his present occupation and whether it would suffice if exemption were granted for one, two or more months, as the case may be.

A copy of both statement and schedule should be prepared for each man for whom the employer is applying for exemption.

Forms for Exemption

These forms may be obtained on request from any Post Master, who will transmit the forms when filled in, to the Registrar.

Claims for exemption must be made not later than November 10th.

INCOMPREHENSIBLE PROFITS, "BEYOND THE DREAMS OF AVARICE"

While the huge profits on bacon were pouring into the coffers of the Wm. Davies Co. to the extent of over one and a half millions in 1916, Sir Joseph Flavelle had "no qualms of conscience," as he told the Government Commission inquiring into the cold storage business in Canada at the City Hall Saturday afternoon. These profits, according to J. W. Bain, K.C., Government counsel, grew from $169,762 in 1914 to $1,639,000 in 1916. "That was over 100 per cent. calculated on a basis of $1,500,000 paid up capital," observed Mr. Bain.

"Beyond the dreams of avarice," interjected Gordon Waldron, K.C., and the Commissioner smiled.

Mr. Bain, K.C., Government counsel in the Henderson Commission inquiring into the profits of the Wm. Davies Packing Company, then addressed the Commission summing up outstanding points of interest in the inquiry. He said Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Brodie had gone very thoroughly into the Company's books. As to the unit values they could not be ascertained from the Matthews-Blackwell on account of the method of keeping the books adopted by that firm. He pointed out that the profits of the Davies Co. had jumped from $162,762 in 1914 to $1,827,494 in 1917. He submitted that profits were real profits and that depreciations made by the Davies Co., were "improper" so far as the Commission was concerned. Mr. Fox had not admitted these profits, bringing them down to $1,300,000 by reason of depreciation. The facts were that the real profits were $1,639,000 in 1916 and $1,827,000 in 1917.

"It seems to me remarkable that an item should be written off one year and not in another year, and I submit that they were written off on account of the tremendous profits made during the periods in question?"

Profits Incomprehensible.

Continuing, Mr. Bain also pointed out the tremendous percentage of profit made by reason of the war. "The profits," he said, "in some cases are almost incomprehensible. In 1917 they made between 40 and 50 per cent. on capital. I submit that you should find that they made those enormous profits by reason of the fact that they took advantage of the war and the conditions that arose out of the war. To me and many others, no doubt, it is wrong.

The Davies Co. obtained advantages over other competitors. They could go out and buy what they wanted absolutely sure that they could not make a loss. It was a case of heads I win and tails you lose.

"That undoubtedly had effect on the high cost of hogs."

"The very material reason of the high cost of bacon to-day," continued Mr. Bain, "was because of the lust of those gentlemen after the great profits they have been able to get.

"It does not seem to me right that this one firm should have got preference over other competitors and made what seems to me an undue or excessive profit."

"Profiteering," said Mr. Waldron in his address, "is the taking of unfair profits in times of human distress, and it is for you gentlemen to judge whether these gentlemen come under that category. That they got undue profits to which they were not entitled, I think, has been proved."

He characterized the cables between the Davies Co. and their agents as "immoral" and "shameful," setting forth as they did certain advantages which the Davies people had in their war contracts over other packers. Their intent is unmistakable.

"His Greedy Eagerness."

"This man, Fox, stands accused before his fellow citizens by his own evidence. Nothing can excuse the conduct of that man. Nothing can excuse his desire, his greedy eagerness to make profits. And the president of the company must bear this accusation with the management. I ask you to find a case of profiteering against this company, who made excessive and unfair profits out of the public, a profit which is reflected not only in the amount which they have put in their own pockets but in the amount which every citizen had to pay for pork products, not only in Canada but in the mother country, where they are fighting for our civilization."

The Circuit Rider In Japan.

We are in the upper room of the neat Japanese home. We have fallen flat on our faces and exchanged greetings in the deliberate and considerate manner of the east. Beside me the captain sits on his heels, a feat which I admire the more after trying it for ever so brief a time. In the middle of the clean mat floor a small stand supports an ugly kerosene lamp, the one jarring note in that dainty home. Behind the stand sits the Japanese pastor, and in front of it sits the church treasurer, both on the floor. In recognition of my foreign training I am allowed to sit on the window sill, a silk cushion having been placed there for the purpose by the good housewife, who, after seeing every one comfortably settled, had bowed to each in turn, kneeling at a distance and almost touching her forehead to the floor, and had withdrawn with the cheerful resignation of the Japanese wife.

LOVE LINKED WITH DEATH.

In Tucopia Girls Propose Marriage and Must Die if Rejected.

In the Pacific ocean between Fiji, New Guinea, New Caledonia and the continent of Australia lies the Melanesian group of islands, where head hunters and cannibals abound. Although strange and grewsome are many of the customs of the tribes, there are some that are most romantic. For instance, on the island of Tucopia the women propose marriage instead of the men.

When a girl of Tucopia sees a man whom she thinks she would like to have for her husband she does not rush up to him and ask him to marry her. On the contrary, she gives the subject deep thought and often the man a most careful investigation before she "pops the question." The reason is that his answer spells life or death to her.

It is a tribal law that any woman who has been refused must forthwith kill herself. Therefore a woman asks a man's hand only when she feels sure that his answer will be the happy one.

Many are the strange and seemingly inexplicable questions with which the women of Tucopia ply the stranger, who cannot realize the personal motive back of the solicitude of the dusky belles who inquire if he is married or not and the state of his wife's health. Romances are consequently very apt to turn out in happy marriage.

But there have been innumerable instances when a poor girl, smitten by the newcomer's charms, has been compelled to kill herself because the man with whom she has fallen in love has had to refuse to marry her.

Baldness with the women of Tucopia is a sign of beauty, and never until she is bald does a Tucopia woman become fully convinced that she is really lovely. But bald or not she takes great care whom she asks to marry her, for the tribal law has never been known to fail. If a rejected woman does not kill herself she is executed by the leaders of the tribe.

RED MONDAY IN PETROGRAD.

One Scene of the Revolt That Ended the Romanoff Dynasty.

Bullets flew in the streets of Petrograd one Monday during the revolution which overthrew the Romanoffs. A British nurse, telling Londoners of her experiences in the Russian capital on "Red Monday," says of one scene:

"I saw in the streets a wonderful procession of revolutionists, the vanguard of the brave liberators of Russia. The soldier patriots in their gray coats, on foot and in motorcars, were going down the street in a steady, orderly manner, protecting a crowd of starving men, women and children who were walking in the center of the procession. At their head was a band playing the 'Marseillaise' and a large red flag borne aloft.

"As the procession neared the Hotel Moscow, where the Nevsky begins, there was a sudden outburst of fierce firing from above, and the soldiers and women and children fell to the ground and the street soon became a shambles. The firing was from machine guns controlled by the police, who were in ambush on the roof of the hotel and who tried to bring about a wholesale slaughter of the people.

"It was astonishing how self possessed the crowd was in the face of this murderous attack. I saw the soldiers who had not fallen immediately enter the hotel and make their way to the roof, where they shot the cowardly police, captured the machine guns and brought them down to the street."

Lending Money.

"And now, my son," said the old man, "I must give you a bit of parting advice."

"Yes, dad," answered the young man patiently.

"Never lend money to a friend."

"What, never?"

"No, never."

"But why? Surely some friends are honest?"

"Undoubtedly. But if you lend money and try to get it back you will be called a tightwad, and if you lend money and don't try to get it back you will be called an easy mark."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Slaves of the Gown.

Some women live in a state of perpetual preparation of wardrobe. They never seem to acquire one in any approach to completion, and they are always in the act of either planning or of obtaining some separate portion of one in such a way that it would seem as if they lived to and for no other end or purpose. The materials of which their gowns are made must be of the nature of Penelope's web.

Curious Land, Curious People.

Near Cape Horn, in the islands of Tierra del Fuego, live the most curious people in all South America. It rains or snows or sleets nearly every day, and yet they look on their country as the finest in the world. They wear hardly any clothing and seem not to feel cold. Because he saw fires on the shore the explorer Magellan, the first European that rounded the Horn, called the island "the land of fire," which is almost the worst name he could have chosen. Their huts are made of bent boughs and covered with grass and give only the poorest shelter. The folk are vain, too, wearing necklaces of the teeth of fishes or seals and painting patterns on their bodies. Among them some colors have a novel meaning. White is the sign of war and red of peace. They are great mimics and will imitate voice and gesture perfectly.

Handicapped by His Name.

The handicap of a poet's name was illustrated in the case of Mr. William Wordsworth, who was the eldest surviving grandson of the poet. Mr. Wordsworth was a great scholar and a poet himself of high distinction. A volume of his sonnets was issued privately some years ago. On account of the similarity of his name with that of his grandfather, he always refused to publish any of his poetical writings, though pressed to do so by the people of such high authority as Matthew Arnold, who described one of his sonnets as the finest in the English language.

Odd Geographical Division.

The range of the Blue Ridge mountains in Pennsylvania is divided by a river every twenty-seven miles, as follows: From the Susquehanna to the Swatara, twenty-seven miles; from the Swatara to the Schuylkill, twenty-seven miles; from the Schuylkill to the Lehigh, twenty-seven miles; from the Lehigh to the Delaware, twenty-seven miles. At the next twenty-seven miles is a hollow of New Jersey, in which nestles a lake known as Culver's pond.

Right Thinking.

The quality of your friends is the quality of your thoughts. Think the thoughts of a thief and thieves will be your companions. Think clean, helpful, creative thoughts and surely your associates will be clean, helpful and creative. You attract to you what belongs to you.

Changed Ideas.

"Mrs. Smarty used to boast that she never let her mind run upon little things."

"Well, does she?"

"I should say so! She can't talk of anything but her baby."

Circumstantial Evidence.

"What makes you think all women hate each other?"

"Because a woman so seldom brings up a son fit to be another woman's husband."

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FRENCH HOLD ALL OF AISNE RIDGE

CAPTURE THE OUTER DEFENCES OF LAON

FRENCH COMPLETE CAPTURE OF THE FAMOUS AISNE CREST

Epochal Victory of General Petain's Men on Tuesday---Will Be Known as the Battle of the Caverns---Poilus Fought Far Below the Earth's Surface Driving Germans Out of Caves and Warrens---French Now Hold Outer Line of Defences to Laon.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, October 24.—General Petain's poilus fought in the air, on the ground, and literally far below the ground to achieve their epochal victory of Tuesday morning.

The fight will go down in history as the battle of Caverns—the conflict of Cavemen. The French won their objectives, which means to-day they hold every inch of the famous Aisne Crest and have shut the Germans off from their last look at the promised land of France beyond the ridge. Tuesday's drive was along a front of six miles, on the Allemant-Pantheon front. The French seized the last portion of the Aisne Ridge, including, to the west, a little over two metres of the historic "Ladies' Highway" (Chemin Des Dames) with its junction on the Bruisselles Highway, which the Germans still held, together with all observatories, notably Fort Malmaison. The French are now masters of every spot on the entire Aisne Ridge—from Vatokaillon to Craonne — which heretofore formed the backbone of the German positions.

HOLD DEFENSES TO LAON.

Not only that, but the French now hold the outer line of defenses to Laon. The battle was fought on the summit of this razor-back ridge, beyond which, on a plateau half a mile wide, there runs the Ladies' Highway. The northern slope of the ridge was in possession of the Germans, and it slid away abruptly into the Valley of the Ailett. Every inch of these German positions was honeycombed with caverns, tunnels and subterranean quarties. Many were two stories deep, electrically lighted and ventilated. Every one of them the Germans had converted into a veritable underground fortress. Where there was a single tunnel at Cornillet — at which place the French first encountered this German rabbit-warren system of defense—there were three tunnels here. Some of them proved almost insurmountable defenses.

CAPTURED SCORE OF CAVES.

Tuesday's battle involved the capture of a score of these German caves, tunnels and quarries. On the ground held by the French before the drive, that is on the southern slope of the ridge—there were similar caverns, grottos and warrens. These were manned and kept filled with French troops.

Monday night the caves on both sides of the ridge, German and French —were gorged with reserves, waiting the rush of the battle on the plateau. The entire ridge, literally, was alive, like a gigantic anthill. The masses forced below waited on both sides for the decision of a battle on the earth above, the manifestations of which literally trembled the whole ground.

The French artillery concentration was of unheard of intensity. Batteries secretly installed weeks ago opened with an appalling suddenness, a veritable volcano of steel, for eight days, minute by minute, day and night, at the German positions.

For six days, the whirlwind of the French barrage of both artillery and machine guns "staked off" the attacking front and isolated the Germans from munitions, food, communications or reinforcements. The enemy had to stick tight to his underground fortress.

RAIN OF HEAVY SHELLS.

Then came a simultaneous rain of projectiles of the great French 400, 380 and 320 millimetre guns—smashing the entrances of the tunnels and caverns, caving in those near to the surface, and actually shaking the ground like an earthquake.

I personally witnessed these giant guns lobbing shells weighing a ton each over the Aisne Forest. The missiles were visible to the naked eye from their departure from the cannon's mouth through their magnificent arc over the crest, and the beginning of their downward plunge to the German lines. Countless French airplanes wirelessly regulated every shot so accurately that one battery fired five shots from a distance of six miles, all five of which struck successively in the same hole, penetrating a subterranean fortress.

Although the Crown Prince had the Fifth Division of the Prussian Guards among the five divisions (75,000 men) facing the French, he rushed up two other Guard divisions and likewise a Bavarian division, thus concentrating in the zone of attack the very flower of the German army.

He entrusted the defense of Fort Malmaison to the Second Division of the Prussian Guard.

GERMAN RESERVES FAILED.

In pursuance of their past tactics, the Germans massed reserves in the caverns, intending when the French infantry dashed over the plateau, to rush those out of their subterranean warrens for a counter attack. But when the French did come the poilus out-Hindenburged Hindenburg. Behind the first wave of the French attackers, came specially trained battalions of poilus who seized the entrance to the caverns and blbckd them effectually with machine guns, grenades and powerful forces. They literally walled up beneath the ground, in vast and intricate undeground galleries, the huge reserves which the Germans had massed there. This fact alone accounts for th enormous and almost unprecedented number of German prisoners taken —a number out of all proportion, under previous army tactics, to the width of the front over which the French made gains.

CAPTURE OF FORT MALMAISON.

The capture of Fort Malmaison was perhaps the most brilliant of all manoeucres of the assault. For weeks preceding the attack, four regiments which had been chosen for Fort Malmaison rehearsed their plan of battle. They were latter perfect in their parts. Just before the move was made on the powerful fort the giant French guns rained a hundred tons of shells into the fort, then, while one of the French regiments assaulted the position from the front three others encircled it. The combined drive of the four, carried out with the precision of men drilled to every motion, completely smashed the picked Second Guard division.

Although the attack was launched at 5 a.m. and in complete darkness, except for the flashes of the guns, the entire battle plan, the capture of subterranean fortresses, Malmaison, and all was executed on clockwork schedule.

PARIS—The official story of the French victory is as follows:

The text reads:

"North of the Aisne the attack which we launched this morning developed under extremely brilliant conditions. Despite mist and rain, our troops attacked with admirable enthusiasm formidable organizations of the enemy, which were defended by the best troops of Germany, supported by heavy artillery.

"In their first dash our soldiers captured the line indicated by the quarries of Fruity and Bohery. A little later Malmaison Fort, in the centre, fell into our hands.

"SHOW IRRESISTIBLE SNAP."

"Pushing their advance still further, our troops, after a desperate engagement, in which they gave proof of their irresistible snap, drove the enemy out of the quarries of Mont Parnasse, which had been partly crushed by our big shells.

"On the left our progress was continued with the same success, the villages of Allemant and Vaudesson remaining in our power, while, on the right, our troops carried on to the heights dominating Pargny-Filain.

"Finally, in the centre, our troops drove fresh enemy reserves helter-skelter, and captured the village of Chavignon. At this point our advance

NOT FIGHTING FOR POLITICAL ENDS IN RUSSIA

Premier Kerensky in Emotional Speech Declares That They Are Struggling Now For the Very Existence of Russia

A POWERFUL APPEAL

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 24.—Tuesday, in an emotional address to Parliament, Premier Kerensky appealed to delegates to endeavour to arouse in the people the same sense of individual responsibility at the front and in the rear which carried the Russians to victory for a time in the post revolutionary offensive early in July. The Premier deplored the present demoralization of the army. If only we could rekindle the enthusiasm of those July days in the heart of each man, he said, we would have peace by Christmas, an honourable peace, for a free Russia, with the war fought to an honourable end.

He was applauded on all sides.

"We are not fighting for political ends, but for the very existence of Russia," he declared.

AUSTRIANS TO ATTACK

Reinforced by Troops From Russian Front and Assisted by German Munitions, Artillery and Aeroplanes, Offensive is Planned

MASSING FORCES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By John Hearley.)

ROME, Oct. 24.—Austria is starting an offensive, hoping to anticipate the concluding phase of the Italian drive toward Trieste and Laibach. Semi-official advices to-day indicated that the enemy has massed great numbers of troops recently, withdrawn from the Russian front, and has managed to persuade Germany to grant her considerable aid in the way of munitions, artillery and aeroplanes.

Offensive squadrons of the newest type of Gothas have been encountered by the Italian forces.

Just what Austria plans to gain by an attempt at an offensive at this particular time is not clear. Cold weather in the dizzy heights on which the battle line now runs, has heretofore put a stop to major fighting operations during the winter, on account of the snow and ice.

A Manifesto To War Veterans

Must Secure Defeat of Candidates Who Will Not Help to Enforce Conscription

(Canadian Press Despatch).

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 24.—"It behooves us to bring all our forces to bear and leave no stone unturned to secure the defeat of any candidate who will not give the fullest guarantee that he will do all in his power to enforce conscription," said James J. Shanahan, acting President of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, in a manifesto to the members of that organization, issued today.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.— Le Canada to-day features a despatch from Ottawa, which indicates that Sir Joseph Flavelle will resign in a few days from his position as chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board. The story also alleges indignation in England owing to the "disclosures" made at the recent investigation in Toronto.

PRISONERS TOTAL 8000

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Oct. 24.—Official reports indicate now that at least eight thousand prisoners were taken in the latest drive by Petain's troops north-east of Soissons. The Germans have attempted no counter attacks on the Verdun front, but made violent attacks in the Aisne sector, which were repulsed with heavy losses. In the Champagne district the French made successful raids.

REGISTRATIONS AT LOCAL OFFICE ARE VERY SLOW

Total So Far Is Only 166 of Which All But 10 Are Claims For Exemption—Only Fifteen Days Are Left

PORT HOPE'S WARNING

There is still no sign of a rush of Peterborough eligibles under the Military Service Act to register. Up to 11 o'clock this morning the total registrations at the post office only numbered 166, of which 156 were claims for exemption and ten were reports for service.

There are only fifteen days left for men to register or suffer the penalties prescribed under the Act. They are advised to act at once as there will undoubtedly be a crush next week.

Down in Port Hope the tribunal officer is impressing upon young men the seriousness of the situation. Under the heading, "Final Warning," the following notice appears in the Port Hope Guide:

Up to date only 47 from Port Hope and 23 from Hope between the ages of 20 and 34 have registered. All the above have courageously asked for exemption.

This showing is far from satisfactory and not fair to the Postmaster or to yourselves. Remember, the longer you delay the most aggravating you are making it for all concerned.

Under the Military Act you are today soldier. Let me say for the last time— choose between wearing the "khaki" or the "brown and yellow." Five years is the term. Far better to be on the outside looking in, than on the inside looking out.

I may further add you are all being rounded up and none shall escape. Men in the Township of Hope take notice. The Act will be rigidly enforced though tempered with strict impartiality.

E. J. W. BURTON,
Tribunal Officer.

Medical Examinations.

Deputy Minister of Justice Newcombe has announced in an interview that the medical examination of Class One men is entirely optional. He says:

"I should like to take this opportunity again to correct the misunderstanding which has arisen in some quarters with regard to medical examinations. Medical examination before report for service or claim for exemption is entirely optional. It is recommended where the candidate is not too far away from a Medical Board, and it is otherwise reasonably convenient. If, however, this course is not found convenient, it is quite in order for a man to report for service or claim exemption without going in for medical examination. In such a case, he will receive notice by mail in due course as to the time and place where he should present himself for medical examination. If an exemption is granted on grounds other than physical unfitness, no further medical examination will be necessary until the exemption expires."

NEW RECORD AT THE ARMOURIES FOR NUMBER EXAMINED

Medical Board Passed on the Physical Qualifications of Sixty-one Candidates yesterday—Register System Working Well

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Yesterday's Figures.

Candidates examined	61
Placed in A category	38
Placed in B category	5
Placed in C category	2
Placed in E category	16

Yesterday saw a new record set up by the local Medical Board when at three sessions, a total of sixty-one men were examined. Twenty-two were examined in the morning and twenty-five in the afternoon, while fourteen went before the doctors last night. Judging by the number of men presenting themselves, the 1,000 mark will be reached before the finish of to-night's session. Men are coming into the city for many miles around, and the morning trains each day bring fresh quotas to face the medical examination.

At yesterday afternoon's session the results were:

Category A	14
Category B	1
Category C	3
Category E	7

At night out of fourteen candidates only one man was rejected, which is the minimum of E category men at any one session. The figures were:

Category A	11
Category B	2
Category E	1

This Morning's Session.

Candidates examined	21
Placed in A category	12
Placed in B category	3
Placed in E category	6

Total Results So Far.

Number examined	574
Fit for the trenches	577
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	57
Fit for duty in Canada	65
Untit for any service	275

The system of registering the names of young men who wish to be examined is working very satisfactorily at the armouries. Candidates are booked for one or two sessions ahead so that they know just when they will have a chance to go before the doctors. This morning twenty-one men were examined, twelve of them going into the A category.

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—Total enlistments in the Canadian Expedition-Forces from the 1st to the 15th of October exceeded the total wastage during that period by 371 men, according to a statement issued by the Militia Department to-day. The figures are: Total enlistments in infantry, artillery, railway construction, forestry and miscellaneous units, 2,458; total number of casualties and discharges, 4,887.

Bondsmen Fail To Sign Agreement

Five Hundred Dollar War Bonus Payable to Garbage Contractor is at Stake

Why the bondsmen of Mr. E. K. Graham, garbage contractor for the city, have so far failed to sign an agreement which, if properly carried out, will benefit Mr. Graham to the extent of five hundred dollars, is something that is puzzling the members of the Property Committee. At a meeting held last evening, anything but commendation was expressed at the way Mr. Graham is performing his duties. The clause vesting in the Sanitary Inspector, the right to remove ashes and refuse under certain conditions and deduct the cost from the remuneration paid to Mr. Graham, was read and approved by the committee in the hearing of Sanitary Inspector Stapleton. The Inspector reported a number of cases where the contractor had failed to remove ashes, etc. A letter was also received from City Solicitor Gordon, stating that neither Mr. Graham nor his bondsmen had signed the agreement respecting the five hundred dollar war bonus granted Mr. Graham on the condition that he properly fulfills his contract.

"It will be a fine day when these fellows are through," observed Mayor Duffus, who suggested that next year the city undertake to do the work instead of letting it out on contract.

Ald. Saunders, chairman of the committee, also had several complaints.

CAUSE OF HIGH PRICES

At the Henderson bacon investigation, in answer to an inquiry of the Chairman as to why the cost of raw material had gone up, Mr. T. F. Matthews of Matthews-Blackwell, replied that it was—

"Because forty million men had been taken from active production all over the world and turned into active consumers."

Of course the fact that so many men have withdrawn from productive occupation and devoted to destructive occupations, means much. It has created scarcity and, according to the law of supply and demand, extraordinary demand and limited supply, must advance prices. The reason given is generally applicable, but in Canada there are local conditions that have an influence upon prices. Artificial scarcity, with active demand, can be made, and has been made, a medium of advance of price. Though—not forty—but sixty—million men of the world are non-producers and consumers only; and though this condition accounts for a general world scarcity, there has not been, taken all round, greatly lessened soil production in Canada. We have high prices, but they are not so much due to scarcity of food products as to inability to get at them. With fifteen million more pounds of staple food in cold storage than a year ago—two pounds per head of our population of seven and a half millions—it seems plain that not limited production, but lack of access — improper locking away from the people of the food they require—is a very potent cause of high prices.

This does not seem to be right. A few men and corporations are holding food for high prices, which if released and put into consumption, would cause a sensible decline in price. While the world effect of the withdrawing of sixty million of the most active and most healthy men o fthe world from productive operation may easily explain general high prices, there are other and local causs that add to the general range of the high cost of living—causes that many of us in our simplicity, perhaps, think can be removed, if the Government goes the right way about it.

In England, good margarine is sold at about one-fifth the price of butter. With butter 50 cents per pound that three years ago this month was 32 cents, it is plain to see that permitted importation of margarine would help a good many of us to have something more tasty than dry bread.

ONLY THE LABEL.

The Globe says that "the new Government ought to have the support of organized Labour—it wears the Union label. Unfortunately that is all it has—the label, the name on an empty vessel, as far as the "labouh" character of its elements is concerned. Finance, farming, the "big interests," and capital have their representatives in the government, but the portfolio of Labour, the Labour Department, is not provided with a minister of its special interest.

It seems an anomoly that a win-the-war government should not have represented in its councils, as the head of the department, a representative of the chief agency in winning this war. Seven-eighths of the soldiers in the field or under arms, are drawn from the ranks of labour, and it is to labour that these soldiers owe an adequate supply of munitions, food supplies, etc. A lawyer, as custodian of the interest of labour—as Minister of Labour—cannot have the knowledge of conditions and the sympathy necessary to make him a practically useful Labour minister.

An illustration of the importance of having labour interests personally and sympathetically represented consists in the fact that it is due to the personal interest, sympathy and knowledge of the Great War Veterans that the desirable forty per cent. increase in soldiers' pensions has been impressed upon the governmnt. The union government is only a name, so far as organized Labour is concerned; and, besides, it is not living up to its published programme, which it might better do if it had a real live Labour man as Minister of Labour. One of the pledges of the Union Government was:

"Adequate consideration of the needs of the industrial population —the working classes; maintenance of good relations between employers and employed, and such conditions of employment as will assure suitable standards of living among the labouring classes."

This is admirable sentiment as well as good policy; and the Gvernment has a good chance to apply its policy to the postmen, who are swaying upon the balance of strike unless their reasonable and scornfully-treated demands for increase of pay to a living point, are met. If the government wants to "assure suitable standards of living," the matter is easily covered in the case of the letter carriers of Peterborough and elsewhere—increase their pay; simply that and nothing more. There is no need of wrestling with economical problems as between employer and employed, the Government is the employer and the postman, the employee. "Suitable standards of living" are "not assured" to the postman who gets from $12 to $16.80 per week, in the face of the statement of the Governmen's own Labour Department that a living wage for an average family is slightly under $18.50. The Government should come to the point of fair dealing at once. By paying starvation wages to some of their employees—notably the postmen—they set a bad example to other employers of labour and give the lie to their claim that their policy is to "assure suitable sandards of living among the Labour classes."

It would be something as new as disgraceful if the govenment employees in the Postal service should have to go on strike to secure their rights.

The Premier Says It Is Not His Fault

That Labour is Not Adequately Represented or Represented At All, in the New Government

The following letter has been received from Sir Robert Borden in reply to a letter on the subject sent by Mr. Burnham:

J. H. Burnham, Esq., M.P.
Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Mr. Burnham,—Your letter of yesterday is before me. I have already stated publicly my intention to give labour adequate representation in the ned Union or National Government which has been partly formed. My efforts in that direction have not been hitherto crowned with success, but the fault is not mine. The effort will be continued until it is brought to a successful conclusion. Probably within a day or two an announcement will be made on the subject.

Yours faithfully,
R. L. BORDEN.

Ottawa, Ont., October 23rd, 1917.

It seems a little strange that the head of a government should have to, or at least, should, state his inability to do what is technically in his power to do, and place the responsibility upon some one else. "The fault is not mine." If it is not, then it must be within his cabinet or outside of it. In any event the responsibility of the failure so far to give labour adequate representation in the new government, should be localized, because so important an interest should not be overlooked. That labour has not been adequately represented in the old government is freely conceded. Sir Robert cannot evade responsibility for that, nor plead that "the fault is not his." He was the leader and, as a rule, responsible for cabinet representation in the old government. He is leader of the new government, and if the new government is to be a success, it must be resolutely headed by a leader who leads.

It is hoped that Sir Robert will show that he has the will and ability to deal firmly and satisfactorily with the situation. If the fact that Labour is not represented in the new cabinet is not Sir Robert Borden's fault, the public should not be kept in ignorance of where the fault lies.

The demand for adequate representation of Labour in the new cabinet is not a class matter, nor the concern of organized Labour only. The protection of the interests of labour as a whole, both in respect of the workers themselves and in the interests of the country of a whole is a matter of most important national concern. Labour has borne, is bearing, and will be called upon to bear, and will bear, so great a part in this war that adequate representation, adequate weight in the councils of a win-the-war government, is conspicuously indispensable.

The wonder is that, instead of being apparently treated as an afterthought, labour representation and the protection of labour interests, was not practically regarded as a prime subject of consideration.

This is a war of democracy, and any war-winning policy of administration, should have as its first care, its central motive of policy consideration of the masses of the people. The good Lord knows that the "big interests" have had their innings and run up a big score—of profits and special advantages. With a new government there should be a turn of the tide.

Academic laudations of this fight for democracy are but the brayings of asses, if we don't practically recognize its claims in our national administrations and activities.

HOW PARCEL CARRYING CAN BE MADE A PATRIOTIC ACTION

The Governor of New York has thought enough of the necessity of men for productive labour that he has issued the following:

PROCLAMATION.
State of New York
Executive Chamber

To the People of the State of New York:

Men are needed for productive labour. They must be reserved for such work and not drawn therefrom to do non-essentials. If you will show due consideration your dealer will be able to supply men for productive fields, instead of withdrawing them therefrom. The needless delivery work that you put upon stores, means an unnecessary drain on the country's man power.

At the request of the Editorial Conference, representing the leading business newspapers, I desire to point out that every shopper can be patriotic in five ways:

By carrying parcels home whenever possible;

Accept without complaint less prompt deliveries in war time;

Do not demand special deliveries;

Avoid having goods sent home unless you are sure you are going to keep them;

Bring back to the store such goods as are portable when return cannot be avoided.

The stores will give you the best service in their power, but both the stores and the public must do their duty to the country.

As governor of the State of New York, I ask the public to do these things for the welfare of the country to the country.

GIVEN under my hand and the Privy Seal of the State at the Capitol in the City of Albany this ninth day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventeen.

(Signed) Charles S. Whitman.

By the Governor,
Wm. A. Orr,
Secretary to the Governor.

Attention has, heretofore, been called to the wisdom and necessity of doing everything possible for ourselves that we may reelase others for productive service that we cannot do ourselves except indirectly—that is by meeting the call of the governor of New York, which, though we owe no allegiance to him, we are bound to observe, because the United States and ourselves are "in the same boat—allies for winning the war.

It is not much to ask of people that in order to save waste of labour in doing things that the people, the public, can do for themselves, they carry their own parcels.

Of course it's a great convenience to have parcels delivered—even small ones—but it's an encouragement of laziness or indifference — two things that cannot go together with patriotism.

We know how citizens can help merchants by avoiding to give orders for Saturday delivery when the ordering can be equally well done any other day of the week. And not only this, but they can help the merchants by refraining as much as possible from ordering "goods on approbation," involving the likelihood of return, and double, delivery expenses. This is not only good for the merchants, but good for the customer. One city merchant says the delivery and return delivery of parcels costs him $1,000 a year. The public is invited to study the five ways of Governor Whitman to help in war work.

It may seem strange that what may be considered a little thing should be so insisted upon. But when a country throws its whole soul into the winning the war, when all the efforts of all its people are demanded, we see the imoprtance of little things as a part of a mighty whole working together for a glorious end.

It seems a mighty sight easier to make a "union" government than to make "union" politicians.

FAIR AND WARMER.

Avery Hopwood's hilarious farce, "Fair and Warmer" seen for the first time in Peterborough entertained a very large audience at the Grand last night and lived up to its advance notices as a "sunburst of laughter." Dull moments were as few as reports for service at the post office, and nothing funnier than this play of "temperature and temperament" as it is styled on the programme, has been seen here in years.

"Fair and Warmer" deals with a lively night in the lives of two married couples. Laura Bartlett is so tired of the impeccable conduct of her husband Billy that she has decided to get a divorce. Billy's friend, Jack Wheeler, himself inclined to indulge in frequent poker games under the guise of visits to the Mystic Shrivers, diagnoses the case correctly and advises Billy to make his wife jealous. Mrs. Bartlett goes off to the opera with a friend on the night the Wheelers are coming to visit them. When they arrive Wheeler announces that there is an initiation at the Shrine which he must attend, so he takes his departure and Laura keeps her opera engagement, leaving Billy and Mrs. Wheeler to talk things over. They finally decide to co-operate in arranging a situation that will teach their co-partners in life a lesson. During the process they take on board a considerable overdose of spirituous refreshment and finally Billy goes to sleep on a davenport and Mrs. Wheeler curls up in a rug on the floor. The developments that follow through the rest of that act and in the third chapter are fast and furious and at times the audience screamed with laughter. All is finally squared away of course before the final curtain.

The farce was capitally acted. Henry Stockbridge as Billy Bartlett was irresistibly funny. The part is full of possibilities and Mr. Stockbridge took every advantage of the humour of the lines, and of the situations. Miss Lillian Foster as Mrs. Wheeler, shared the honours with him. Her work was clever and effective and she won the audience from the start. Miss Grace Benham did stellar work as Mrs. Bartlett and the "Jack Wheeler" of Jack Hayden was equally good. A clever "bit" was that of Thomas Springer as Harrigan, the express man. "Fair and Warmer" scores a direct hit as a laugh producer.

Hanna's New Order Meets With Scanty Approval Anywhere

Quaker Oats Company Among Those Seriously Affected by Order That Small Packages of Breakfast Foods and Cereal Packages Are to Be Done Away With.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.---Food Controller Hanna's order that after November 1, breakfast foods and cereal products must be sold in twenty-pound packages is not meeting with the approval of some of Toronto's wholesalers.

The order means that within a couple of weeks housekeepers may be asking for "a half dozen of shredded wheat, please," or "a pound and a half of corn flakes."

Here are some opinions:

Says R. C. Smith, advertising manager of Kelloggs, of Canada: "Who started his row? The good women who think they know more about the business than anyone else. They think that the packing of the goods has increased the cost of living; well the good women are wrong.

"The very cheapest way of handling his class of goods---especially corn flakes and crisps---is the package system, which we are now using. They are so delicate that it would be impossible to handle them in bulk of 20 pound packages. We would have to get a license or close up."

R. S. McIndoe, sales agent for the Postum Cereal Co., declares that nobody would buy corn flakes or grape nuts in bulk. "There would be no alternative for us but to close down our plants if we did not get a license to put up the smaller packages as at present." The Postum Cereal Co. employs about 450 people in Canada, the majority being located in Windsor.

The London plant of the Kellogg Corn and Flake Co., and the Quaker Oats Co., of Peterborough, Ont., and the Shredded Wheat Co. of Niagara Falls, Ont., would also be affected.

Representatives of these firms declare that corn flakes cannot be sold by the pound. Such food is too easily dampened and crushed. Chewing the food is one of its best points, and as soon as the crisp is gone the need of chewing is done away with.

In Toronto, at present thousands of pounds of rolled oats are bought by hotels and restaurants in bulk, usually in 90-pound bags.

At present packing is done by machinery. To do away with the packages means to do away with the machinery and perhaps substitute new machinery. "But that wouldn't amount to so much" added a Toronto manufacturer. "I am afraid some factories will have to close up. At least those in London, Toronto and Peterborough, where they specialize in the manufacture of corn flakes will not be able to continue business. I can see no way out of it. People won't buy corn flakes done up in bulk like that. It would be as tough as leather".

Third of Cost Involved.

Carton's cost the manufacturer $8 per 1,000, including the cost of wax paper. This means less than one cent per package. But added to this there is the cost of labour and machinery. These figure up high, and in the handling of millions of packages nearly one-third of the cost of the entire product is involved.

Will there be any saving to the consumer? This is the important question. "I can't see where there will be any saving to the public," replied T. J. Medland, local wholesale grocer. "The price should drop, but it won't. There will be a saving of paper and labour for some other industry, but the public who buy these breakfast foods will not gain anything from this as far as I can see."

In special cases the Food Controller may license the sale in smaller packages if necessary in the interest of the public, the order-in-council states. This is taken by some to mean that manufacturers of the more delicate breakfast foods will be granted licenses to put out the small packages as at present in return for paying a big license fee.

Wholesalers Claim Great Waste.

Wholesalers stoutly maintain that the cost of packages is more than saved by the convenience of handling small packages. One local dealer stated that the question of doing away with packaged breakfast foods was fully discussed by a committee of the American Food Controller and the idea was turned down.

A 20-pound package of corn flakes would measure nearly four cubic feet, and would require a box two feet high, one and a half feet wide, and one and a quarter feet deep. As it is only the "original" package must contain at least 20 pounds of the product retail grocers would have the right to sell householders out of these packages in bulk.

"We all know how much waste there is in handling tea in bulk," states one wholesaler. "It wouldn't compare with the waste which would result from handling such articles as corn flakes and some of the crispy breakfast foods."

No Food For The Belgian Children Of Normal Weight

Mr. Hoover, chairman of the Belgian Relief Commission, has just had an astounding experience in Belgium according to George Barr Baker, a member of the Commission now visiting this continent.

"Mr. Hoover went to Belgium," he said, "and saw 1,200 children standing in line in a district near Brussels waiting for their food to be doled out to them. They are all school children, none of them being much over 14 years. All of them very happy---the poor little things had their food tickets in their hands and were facing the pleasant prospect of getting something to eat. Their mothers and others of the woman relatives were standing by watching them.

"Suddenly Mr. Hoover saw one of the Belgian women who was working with the Commission, step over to the line and drag a child out of it. The child screamed and fought to get back into the line, but the woman kindly but firmly forced it to one side. This was followed by other women doing the same thing, which was always accompanied by the screaming of the child.

"Puzzled by these extraordinary incidents Mr. Hoover questioned one of the women workers about it.

"'They are of normal weight,' she said, 'and cannot have a meal today. They must wait until their weight is reduced before we can supply them with food. This may be, perhaps, one or two or three days. Only those who are under weight, and are actually staving to death under our eyes may have food. There is so little food compared with the need that only those in need of it must have it.

"'Mr. Hoover was astounded and overcome and asked the woman if it was possible that the children must be really starving before they could be allowed to have a meal.

"'Yes, it is so,' she said, sadly. 'We cannot feed so many little mouths with so little. If we have the food we could give it to them, but what can we do? Those who do not show actual signs of starvation must stand aside for those who do.'"

The scene thus described, which is now being repeated all over Belgium, explains why Mr. Hoover is making a special appeal to the people of this continent for increased subscriptions so that every child in Belgium may have food enough to keep it up to normal weight.

Subscriptions will be gladly welcomed by the Belgian Relief Commission.

Peterborough, Oct. 24th, 1917.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The letter in your last night's issue asking that a Liberal convention be called demands the consideration of every Liberal in this constituency. I agree with the writer in every particular except that of at once calling a Liberal convention. He is right, absolutely right, when he states that during the last six years Liberals have seen every principle for which they stand "wantonly violated." He is right, too, when he states that criticism is required even in war time. The question for Liberals in this constituency to consider is whether in view of the national demand for united co-operative effort till the war be won they are willing to forget for the time being the ghastly record of the late Government and support the Government which has just been formed. Personally I am strongly of the opinion that we Liberals here should support the present Government for these reasons: (1) It is as nearly as may be a truly National Government. When the other Labour member is appointed it will be composed of representative leaders of all parties. (2) The one purpose of the Government is that of doing our share towards winning the war with the greatest possible effort and the least possible waste. (3) The very formation of the Government is a response to a Dominion-wide demand for the whole-hearted co-operation of all parties against a common enemy. (4) Criticism of the Government will not be wanting and will be given in full measure by members elected in constituencies opposed to conscription.

I may be wrong, but I believe that West Peterborough as a whole favours a National Government. I believe, too, that Liberals and Conservatives alike in this constituency are anxious to join hands till victory over Germany be assured. My strong opinion is that the executives of both parties should get together and call a joint convention having an equal number of delegates from both parties to nominate a union candidate. To my mind there is no good reason why in the face of a world menace with which we are grappling to the death we cannot forget for the time being our rights and our wrongs, our predilections and our prejudices, our party allegiance and animosities. The times demand sacrifice and co-operation. Peterborough must make a response one way or the other to that demand in the matter of an election.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

Patronage List To Be Abolished?

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 24.— The new government, it is understood, has in contemplation the abolition of an ancient and time dishonoured institution, the departmental patronage list, and the substitution for it of purchase by non-partisan business methods. The formation of a non-partisan purchasing board, probably modelled after the excellent system evolved by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, is said to be in contemplation to take the place of the present special privilege system, based not on business methods, but on partisan favouritism.

The word patronage also refers to appointments. So far pre-union promises have been carried out by the union administration and all appointments made by them have been party appointments. But there have been pretty well cleaned up. No more Senators will be appointed until after nominations, as the government is waiting to discover how many of the candidates for seats in the red chamber it will need in the meantime to run in the coming elections.

There are men, especially in Ottawa, where the life of a sitting member is one grand, though unpleasant orgy of patronage dispensing, who are skeptical as to the success of the new government aims. Old politicians declare that they might as well hope for the milennium to come at once. But then there has never been a Union Government before in Canada. The days of the pork barrel and the party job hunter may be on the wane.

Announces The End Of The Spoils System

There will hereafter be no patronage lists in any department of the Government. He has instituted a new feature at the hall, having procured handsome brass badges for the firemen, which can be pinned to their civies. This will enable the men to jump on the street cars or assume their rights at any fire should they not be in distinguishing uniform.

Peterborough Cheese Board Closed A Successful Year This Morning

2785 Boxes Sold at 21½ Cents —Most of the Factories Will Close Next Week—Prices This Year Have Been Very Favourable and Production High.

A BIG DAIRY YEAR

The last meeting of the Cheese Board this year was held this morning, when Mr. Kerr, of Belleville, bought the entire offering of 2,785 boxes at 21 1-2c. The price a year ago was 21 5-8c., and at a subsequent meeting in November, when 1,806 boxes were sold, the top price was 23 cents. The cheese sold this morning were all the October and whatever November cheese may be made. This obviates the necessity of calling another meeting. After some discussion it was decided to allow one pound a box off to cover shrinkage in curing.

The factories boarded as follows:

Keene	120
Warminster	125
Selwyn	150
Villiers	140
Warsaw	195
Westwood	265
Oakdale	95
Missing Link	50
Pine Grove	90
Myrtle	200
Ormonde	250
Young's Point	155
Lang	110
North Dummer	80
East Emily	125
Stoney Lake	45
Mt. Pleasant	50
Norwood	250
Fleetwood	125
Killarney	115
Apsley	50
	2,785

Mr. Thompson opened at 21 1-4c. and in a lively scramble the bidding ran up to 21 7-16c., Mr. Kerr's offering for the board. Mr. Cook raised to 21 1-2c., and Mr. Kerr made it 21 1-2c. for the whole Board.

Mr. Kerr reported to the Board that he had been unable to collect $36.07 from Shearer factory for short weight. All the factories had sold on the basis of Montreal weighing this year and with the exception of Shearer. The bill had been sent to the salesman, Mr. Miller, but at a meeting of the directors of the factory it was decided not to pay it. The usual rule of the board that Peterborough weights be accepted had not obtained here this year since the Commission's regulations had come into effect.

Mr. Cook moved, seconded by Mr. Braden, that the secretary write Mr. Miller telling him that Montreal weights and inspection had been the basis of this year's business.

This Cheque Was Lost.

Another little item Mr. Kerr reported was the loss of a cheque for $1827 in favour of Lang factory. All that was necessary was that the salesman sign a bond that if the cheque were found it would be returned to Mr. Kerr. The Lang factory salesman assented to this request.

On a motion by Mr. Gillespie, seconded by Mr. Thompson, the calling of the annual meeting was left to the executive.

Millinery Priced For Quick Selling

It will interest the ladies to read the announcement of the American Hat Store, which appears to-day, giving the particulars of an unusual purchase of millinery from a Toronto wholesale house. The showrooms of the American Hat Store have been noted for its attractive display of New York and French models in seasonable headwear of a captivating character, and yet the prices have always remained moderate. But a recent transaction, by which the choicest creations of a wholesale millinery house has been secured at a small fraction on the dollar, will afford such an opportunity to the ladies as is seldom within their reach. Just at this season of the year, when new winter millinery is in demand, this sale is one which none can afford to miss. See advertisement on last page.

Motorists Seek Protection At Level Crossings

At a session of the Dominion Railway Board in Toronto, yesterday, the Ontario Motor League presented a recommendation that a survey of all level crossings in the Province be made as a preliminary step to providing adequate protection to automobile traffic. Speaking for the League, Mr. T .N. Phelan said that uniform standard sign boards should be placed three hundred feet on either side of level crossings.

Average Speed.

Referring to the braking efficiency of cars, Mr. Phelan pointed out the distance of 300 feet would also provide for the uncertainty of the human element in the driver making up his mind how to act. He said it was estimated that a car travelling 20 miles an hour could be stopped in 20 feet.

"Twenty miles an hour is a low estimate," stated the chairman. "I should think 40 miles an hour would be more like the average speed on country roads."

Minor Suggestions.

The minor recommendations made by the Motor League were as follows: The erection of advertising signs at or near crossings should be prohibited; that watchman make use of "stop" signs in place of flags in the day time; that where trains are cut at crossings not protected by gates or watchmen, responsibility should rest on the train crew to protect the crossing; that wig-wag signals are preferable to bells; that gates should be painted in alternating black and white stripes instead of one solid colour; that the whistles on the majority of trains do not give a warning sufficiently penetrating; and that a continual safety educational campaign is necessary to supplement all physical forms of protection.

Objects to Hogs-Backs.

Dealing with questions submitted by the board as to elements of safety, objection was taken by Mr. Phelan to the introduction of hogs-backs on the road to compel motorists to reduce the speed of the car approaching a crossing, by claiming it would divert the driver's attention so much that it would be rather a source of danger.

Deputy Minister of Highways, W. A. McLean spoke in favour of a survey of the level crossings in the province, and the dealing with each one separately to put it into shape iself. He declared that the policy of the department was to cut out the dangerous level crossings on many main highways by diverting the roadways.

"What is your idea of the reason for accidents, Mr. McLean " asked the chairman.

"I think that most of them are due to impetuous and inexperienced driving," said Mr. McLean.

Stop at Crossings.

The opinion of the chairman was that the only way to prevent accidents at level crossings would be to compel the driver to stop at certain crossings as designated before crossing, and to provide certain warnings to show when a level crossing is being approached.

The board will consider the suggestions of the Motor League, and the railway companies will also submit suggestions to the league from their viewpoint.

Mr. Reg. Turner and Mr. S. R. Armstrong of Peterborough attended the session.

IN MEMORY OF H. T. NAISH.

No doubt he oft' was weary
With the toiling of the day;
With God intrusted duties,
Still working, yet time to pray.

He bore the sacred viols,
And the golden harp of praise
Through all the wearisome toils,
Through all the unpleasant ways.

His hands, faithful and busy,
With honours real were filled;
In the ministry of prayer
He was wonderfully skilled.

He brought us times of blessing,
His earnest prayers availed;
His sinful comrades quailing
When thus he fervently prayed.

A man of faith and power,
An overcoming wrestler
In the quiet, lonely hour;
A good, noble warrior.

France, Sept. 2nd.

Dear Mother and All,—As I again have a spare evening I am taking advantage of it by writing for, no doubt, you like to know where and how I am. The paper here does not cost the soldiers anything, and yet I've heard people in Canada say the Y.M.C.A.'s are a freak, and do no good whatever. If you ever hear anyone say that just tell them for me that is a perfect falsehood. In this camp there are a number of large roomy buildings run by the Y.M.C.A. In them the soldier is always welcome, to games, books, magazines, and can for three pense get a cup of hot coffee or tea and a half dozen tea cakes. Dozens of writing tables are here simply for the use of the soldiers. The Y is a noble institution and doing a grand work. Services are held here too. Concerts and other amusements. A song service is going on now in the chapel. My! how the lads do sing. They just sing as though their whole soul was in it, and I believe in most cases they sing as they never sang before. For some it may be their last song service, as a lot go up to the trenches every week, and a few come back.

We have a few fine preachers here. I was at a service this morning that effected me greatly, and everyone else too. The preacher was a very powerful and inspiring speaker. He spoke on Faith. I have heard preachers in Canada take this for their text, but never heard it handled as this man put it before us.

Well, it is just a week to-day since I had the long 18-mile march from Boulogne to this Canadian base. I did not expect to be here this soon, but in the army one never knows what is coming next, and I am still here, and as far as I know will be this week, and might be next week or longer. Chances are, however, that I'll soon be sent up to the firing line to reinforce the First Canadian Siege Battery to which I belong. Remember I'm still a long way from the firing line, cannot even hear the guns, but it doesn't take long to get there.

We haven't done hardly a thing this week, except eat, and lazy around. One day we trained in using our gas helmets, and went through gas with them on, but the helmets entirely protect one from the gasses. We went through Lackrymatoy, or tear gas without any masks on to get used to it; it makes the eyes run tears, but the affects pass away soon after. It rained like sixty the day we took the gas drill, and I was very glad I had on a rain coat or slicker, as we call them. It rains an awful lot here, and in fact has rained every day more or less the last week except to-day, which is a very fine one. The wind is blowing and as it is sandy here the ears and eyes just get plugged full of sand, so do our tents if we leave the flap open. But I don't mind sand for its a whole lot better than rain.

I met a bunch of Belleville fellows to-day. A band that left Belleville with the battalion in the spring just came here yesterday. I know many of the fellows, and it seems good to chat with them. I love band music and have just been listening to them playing for an hour.

The country here is much like Peterborough, only not so hilly, as Otonabee and with less swamps. They have the queerest ways of harvesting, real old-time methods. In all the French country I've passed through I only saw one binder, something like our own Deering. The grain is cut with a thing something like a cradle, only the steel blade is much longer and heavier than ours, and there are fewer wooden prongs above it. It seems a very clumsy thing, but the French peasants swing it smartly, and the women bind the sheeves. The birds are very scarce here, and also wild flowers, but probably that's due to the time of year. There's lots of wild mustard and shepherd's purse here, and many other of our worst weeds. I guess we got them from Europe all right.

We have a jolly time in our tent. There are twelve of us in one tent, and although our heads have room around the outside, our feet are piled pretty deep around the centre pole. Some of our lads are good singers, and we have some jolly old songs before falling asleep. One of our fellows is a Methodist preacher from Ottawa, a young fellow and a very excellent chap. So we are not very bad, and in fact we close the evening with prayer.

I hope the box of badges arrived with the souvenirs of Edinburgh. I have often wondered how you people got the harvest in. Hope you are all well, and write soon. As ever,

VICTOR.

RECEPTION AT THE ROY STUDIO

Splendid Photography Demonstrated to Many Visitors

The handsome rooms of Mr. F. L. Roy's studio, Hunter Street, with the cheery grate fire, artistic decorations of huge yellow chrysanthemums, ferns and palms, presented yesterday the first of the three reception days, an ideal spot for an extremely pleasant and instructive half-hour. In the tea-room afternoon tea was served to the large number who, regardless of weather conditions, dropped in. Mrs. Roy and Mrs. Dearle poured tea.

The art exhibition proved a great fascination to all who came. This featured the four latest developments in modern photography, which have grown from the fact that the mechanical end of photography has been so perfected the time had come for the artistic to be developed.

The first of these features, the soft focus lens, carries with it the charm of reproducing the original as the eye beholds it. In the ordinary photo the defects of the face are accentuated and become almost the main feature of the photo, proving a disheartening effect to the sitter. The new lens does away with all of this awkward phase and life-like and soft toned effects produced.

In the colour photography in which photographing in oils has been brought to a fine degree of perfection, is a triumph to the art of photography. Priceless old paintings of ancestors so dear to the hearts of the descendants are reproduced to such a fine degree of perfection a critic would find a difficult job to distinguish. This latest addition to the field of art will render it possible for all branches of a family to possess an absolutely true reproduction of the beloved original. This branch is accomplished by photographing the old painting and expert retouching the result in oils, and has been studied by Mr. Roy for several years.

The sketch photography, absolutely new to this city, combines a photograph with soft hand finishing in crayons; the red chalk photography is also a novelty which, by the interest and admiration displayed by all who viewed it, bids fair to become an institution in art circles.

Child Photography.

Nothing is lovelier than the dainty photos of children in absolutely natural attitudes, and home backgrounds. This Mr. Roy's exhibition proved also to have reached a high pitch of perfection. In his fireside photos, with the soft tones radiating from the grates, a touchingly home-like atmosphere is accomplished, and photos which will live for ever dear to the hearts of the possessors when the originals have gone, are made.

Reception To-Night.

The reception will be continued this afternoon, to-night and to-morrow. This evening's exhibition will carry with it features of unusual interest to all interested in the artistic side of modern photography.

COAL WAS VERY MUCH UNDER WEIGHT

City Takes No Chances in Selling Coal That Is Under Weight—Scales For Weighing Bread

The average citizen who pays ten dollars a ton and over for coal would receive a severe shock if he weighed the coal and found it sixty pounds under weight. This is exactly what the police department discovered in connection with one ton of coal that was weighed. A report covering the activities of the police during the past week or two in weighing coal purchased from local merchants, was presented at a meeting of the Property committee of the City Council held last evening. Coal purchased from two local dealers was found to be correct in weight, while that of three other dealers showed differences in favour of the coal merchants of fifty, twenty and sixty pounds respectively. Two loads of coal sold through the medium of the municipal coal yards was overweight to the extent of ten and ninety pounds respectively.

"That is rather serious," observed Mayor Duffus.

It could not be said that the aldermen were elated at the prospect of the city giving away ninety pounds of coal.

Ald. Langford was of the opinion that the coal sold by the merchants found to be under weight should be weighed more frequently and the necessary steps taken to protect the purchaser. The north ward alderman also suggested that the committee in charge of the municipal coal yard take more care to see that the coal was more evenly distributed regardless of precedence in respect to orders. Ald. Langford said that so far as he knew, a man with a five ton order in one month would be served ahead of a man who came later with a one ton order and was really in need.

Mayor Duffus informed Ald. Langford that he was out of order in introducing the question at a Property committee meeting. He believed that the coal situation was in capable hands and that no needy case would be overlooked.

Bread Under Weight.

The aldermanic mind switched from coal to bread. It was reported that the police are in possession of several large loaves of bread that are under weight. An order was on tyle signed by the Chief of Police asking the committee to purchase a suitable set of scales for the use of Bread Inspector Reid. A sample set priced at ten dollars was put in as an exhibit. The scales did not find favour with the critical mind of the aldermen and they were condemned in favour of a cheaper set.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Saunders, chairman of the committee, were named a purchasing committee.

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL WOULD MEAN BIG LOSS TO CITY

"Wage Loss Alone Might Reach Six Figures" Said Mr. McDonald For the Quaker Oats Company

"While the Quaker Oats Company is willing to co-operate in every way in the matter of food conservation we think that the recent order in Council respecting a minimum twenty-pound package for cereal products would defeat the purpose for which it was intended." This summarizes a statement made this afternoon by Mr. George A. McDonald, Sales Manager of the Quaker Oats Company. "It would disrupt business," said Mr. McDonald. The Quaker Oats Company has large contracts for packages and boxes in which cereal products are packed, and it would require at least six months for both the manufacturer and the wholesalers to get out from under in respect to supplies of all kinds. "The loss in wages alone, added Mr. McDonald, might reach six figures.

Speaking of the present form of package goods, Mr. McDonald said that packages, as they are used at present, are a guarantee to the consumer of the purity and quality of the proluct.

Under the present order, boxes and packages would be barred and jute bags which are a much scarcer commodity, would have to be used.

Mr. McDonald could not interpret the order as applying to the consumer. The consumer could hardly be restricted to the purchase of cereal products in minimum quantities of twenty pounds. Under such circumstances it would be difficult to avoid deterioration and other losses which were bound to occur. The present packages are designed to meet the requirements of the average family, and any departure from present conditions would be inducive to much greater loss than is at present experienced," said Mr. McDonald.

GERMAN LOSSES TERRIFIC.

"The enemy losses in the course of the day were large, in addition to those inflicted on him by our artillery preparation. The number of prisoners counter up to the present exceeds 37,500. In the enormous amount of material captured we have counted 25 heavy and field cannon.

"Notwithstanding the unfavourable weather, our aviators carried out with audacity the missions imposed upon them, their machines flying 50 metres above the lines."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, October 24.—Germany's population wants peace, says a paragraph in an important authoritative report received here, and people declare it will be concluded in November. German workmen have been stirred to a high pitch of discontent. They are demanding increases of pay and more liberal portions of food. German children are obliged to go to bed at four p.m. and stay there till 10 a.m., so that they will not require so many meals. Eight hundred soldiers were killed, it is stated, when Allies' aeroplan bombs dropped on a circus in Essen. Interned enemy aliens are treated with enormous hardships and are denied sufficient nourishment.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

GENEVA, October 24.—All German towns and cities along the Rhine are expecting reprisal air raids. The number of anti-aircraft guns has been doubled. The mayors have summoned meetings to explain precautionary measures to the population, who are advised to keep calm.

Are Picking A Seat For The Prime Minister

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—The question of where Premier Borden and Hon. A. K. MacLean will run at the coming election is at present engaging attention. The Premier and Mr. MacLean, were formerly the senior and junior members for Halifax respectively. As both are running on the same platform, one will run in Halifax at the coming election. If Mr. MacLean runs there it is expected that the Premier will run in Kings, though he has his choice of several constituencies in various parts of the Dominion. If the Premier runs in Halifax Mr. MacLeon, it is said, may run in North Cape Breton, now represented by D. D. MacKenzie. If the latter persists in his decision to run as a straight Liberal, then it will be a fight between two former close colleagues. The second Union candidate in Halifax will be a Catholic.

EXEMPTION BOARDS KEEP PLOWING JUDGES AT HOME IN PETERBORO'

Both Mr. Joshua Smithson and Mr. J. H. Garbutt of the Peterborough Plowmen's Association have had to decline several offers to act as judges at plowing matches. On account of their approaching duties on two of the exemption boards in this county, Mr. Smithson, a member of the executive of the Provincial Association, had been requested to act at the Provincial match which opens to-day on a big farm between Paris and Brantford. He has also been appointed a member of the Exemption Board at Keene. Mr. Garbutt is on the Bridgenorth Board, and both have been requested by Judge Huycke to attend a conference of the county tribunals on Saturday morning.

Mr. Garbutt had been invited to judge a match at Athens.

Mr. Burnham Will Ask P. O. Department To "Come Across"

Mr. J. H. Burnham visited the Post Office this morning and discussed with the letter carriers their grievances to which the Government has turned an unfriendly and inconsiderate ear. The reasons for the demand for higher salaries were gone over and Mr. Burnham requested the men to write him a letter covering their case which he will present to the Department.

To Seize Germany's $200,000,000 And Put It Into Liberty Loan: Custodian Of Property Acts

Many Offers Already Received by the Federal Official Amounts of This German Property, Including Cotton, Will Reach a Vast Total.

CAN BE OBTAINED EASILY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Property and money amounting to $200,000,000 or more, belonging to German subjects or owed to them by corporations and individuals in the United States will be seized and used to buy Liberty bonds with which to finance the war against Germany. Already preparations are under way by A. Mitchell Palmer, Custodian of Enemy Property, to employ this money against Germany.

Mr. Palmer, who qualified as custodian, has opened offices at 220 F Street, will be the largest individual purchaser of Liberty bonds. All the money he obtains in his official capacity will go toward the purchase of the bonds.

Upon coming to Washington to take up his important duties, Mr. Palmer found hundreds of letters from corporations and others offering to turn over to him large amounts of money in the shape of dividends from German-owned corporations in the United States as well as amounts due in settlements of estates and bills owed German business houses by American houses.

Inasmuch as the moneys can be easily received and their status does not require any great amount of investigation by the Custodian they will be received without delay. Mr. Palmer will completely qualify tomorrow when he will file a bond as large as that required by the Government of the Secretary of the Treasury, $150,000.

Transcending in importance the collection of money is the confiscation by the custodian of metals and materials owned by German citizens products that go into the making of war materials. These will exceed in value the amounts owed German citizens in cash. It is estimated unofficially that the value of cotton, copper, steel, and oil stored in the United States for German corporations will amount to $150,000,000, although no official tabulation has been made of them yet.

As soon as Mr. Palmer can organize a force he will begin seizing materials. The first step in this direction will be formal notice to all corporations to inform the Custodian of the materials held by them as well as money owed German citizens. Under the law sixty days is allowed for making returns. Therefore probably three months will elapse before the vast stores of German supplies in the United States are confiscated and finally employed for uses by this Government.

It is expected that Mr. Palmer will soon confer with William J. Flynn, Chief of the Secret Service, and that the first confiscation of materials will be that of cotton, of which there are millions of bales in the United States paid for by German money.

Inasmuch as the Custodian will not be able to collect within the next few days any large part of the millions owed German citizens, it is believed that several powerful banks will buy heavily of Liberty bonds, and that the Custodian will purchase these from the banks from time to time as the money comes into his possession. It is not his intention to wait until all the money is received before employing it in this way.

The alien property Custodian may, under the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act, invest all funds or money in Liberty bonds. The money collected by him will be held until the end of the war, and then dealt with as Congress directs. One of the novel and important features of this portion of the law is the requirement that all money and quick assets paid over to the Government shall be invested in United States bonds.

The President has directed that they shall be Liberty bonds. Such a course is in line with the modern and advanced policy of dealing with private property in time of war. By this means enemy property is temporarily conscripted by the Government to finance the war, and to be paid back to the enemy or otherwise disposed of at the end of the war, as Congress shall direct.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards —Receipts 125 cars, with 1,397 cattle, 140 calves, 3,026 hogs and 2,246 sheep and lambs.

No material changes in the cattle prices this week since Monday. The exception to a generally fair demand for all offerings is in the case of a class of rough heavy steers, 1,150 to 1,200 pounds for which there appears to be a very poor demand just at present. With this exception, practically everything else is in fair demand and all this week's offerings were pretty well cleaned up at the close of yesterday's market. A few of the heavy steers referred to were still being held over.

There is a fair trade in stockers and feeders.

Sheep and lambs holding steady, but with a fair run yesterday the common lambs were easier.

Hogs were again on the weak side with a heavy run, the market settling at $16.75 fed and watered, and $17 off cars.

"There's a Reason"

The Germans Must Fight And Not Dig In This Winter

Secretary Baker Announces the Purpose of the Allied Forces on the Western Front to Be One of Incessant Pounding at the Huns, Allowing Them No Time to Recuperate or Renew Their Strength

FULL CONFIDENCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25. — There are to be no "winter quarters" in France this year. This is the significant news from the front, made public by Mr. Baker, Secretary of War.

The purpose of the allied forces on the western front to continue their pounding of the German lines without cessation even during the winter months, is reflected in the weekly review of military operations issued by Secretary Baker.

"It is not anticipated," says the War Department statement, "that the Allies will go into winter quarters this year."

The great offensive launched by General Haig and French is to go on. The German forces, already showing signs of a crumbling morale, are to have no rest. The Secretary of War admits that the difficulties of an offensive will be increased by the winter weather, but the assertion is made with apparent confidence that the allies, with an accumulation of men and material and improved methods of operation will triumph over all obstacles.

Americans Are Fit.

Secretary Baker also says that the American forces in France are now in fighting trim and feel at home in the war zone. His statement in full follows:

"Our men in France, after three months' intensive training, are in splendid physical condition and efficient fighting trim. They have recently become acclimated and now feel at home in the war zone.

"Our troops have met with the most warm-hearted and enthusiastic reception on the part of the armies and people of France.

"The morale of our men overseas is reported as excellent.

"The week just closed has been one of relative quiet on all fronts.

"Bad weather already prevails along the western front, wintry conditions will soon set in and the terrain will become increasingly difficult for attacking troops. Nevertheless, the potency of the allied material and men, the accumulation of the technical means of combat, and the preparations which have been going on for many months will make it possible for the British and French commanders to triumph over natural obstacles and with few short intervals we may expect the offensive to press forward.

No Winter Quarters.

"It is not anticipated that the Allies will go into winter quarters this year.

"The full importance of the battle in Flanders is beginning to be revealed. In order to appreciate the real significance of this engagement and the effect it has had on the morale of the German army and the German people, we must consider briefly the German attacks in the Riga sector, including the capture of Oesel, Dago and other minor islands of the Finnish Gulf.

"While no attempts should be made to belittle the importance of the positions gained by the enemy, we cannot fail to record that it is apparent that the Germans undertook the expedition with a view to bolstering up the morale of the country. More particularly to be able to meet the impending internal difficulties which threaten to culminate in a renewed Cabinet crisis in the near future.

"The German higher command has invariably picked out a weakened objective in order to be able to record a success, which should be of political rather than military value. The islands of the Finnish coast in the hands of the enemy in no way offset the recent allied victories in Flanders. Sound strategy demands that no such diversion of forces be undertaken at so crucial a moment.

"If the enemy had any confidence in being able to stem successfully the tide of the allied advance in the west, he would throw every ounce of his strength into the balance in Flanders, and, if possible, by crushing the allied armies, bring about 'peace with victory,' which the German has often stated as his objective.

Full Confidence in Victory.

"Germany by extending her lines in the East, has merely added to the length of her line of communications. Thus, the events in Russia to-day should cause us to have increasing confidence in final allied victory.

"Along the Western front, trench raids, as well as the usual artillery duels, are reported. Isolated counter attacks were conducted by the enemy in such a manner as to indicate that no real success was expected, but merely serve to keep up the aggressive spirit of the troops.

"It is evident that the terrible punishment by allied artillery fire is beginning to have a very decided effect along the western front. Never before in any series of engagements have so many German divisions, after brief encounters, been withdrawn and replaced by fresh troops. Deserters from German ranks taken into the allied lines have become increasingly numerous.

"Rumours of an impending Austrian offensive directed against Italy have been current during the last week. Reports of concentrations of Austrian and German divisions to take part in this attack are noted. Any one familiar with the situation can at once determine that these rumours are exaggerated. Even should the season permit it, the concentration of the number of fresh enemy divisions, estimated as high as forty, could not, as a physical possibility, take place in the narrow Trentino Valley fed by a single railway system.

"However, it is possible that the Central Powers, fearing further Italian successes along the Isonzo front, have massed a considerable number of troops in an effort to check the Italian advance and, if possible, regain some of the terrain lost during recent engagements.

"An interesting summary of troop movements in the United States shows that since the present mobilization began 914,195 persons have been transported by the railroads for the War Department, of whom 256,815 were transported in standard or tourist sleepers, the remainder in ordinary day cars. This vast movement has been conducted by the railroads of the country without a single accident, and the co-operation between the railroads and the department has been most cordial and effective."

THANKSGIVING ANNIVERSARY SERVICES HELD

Special to The Examiner.

The annual Thanksgiving and anniversary services of the Presbyterian church, Mount Pleasant, held on October 7th and 9th, were a great success.

On Sunday, October 7th, morning and evening, services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. MacIntosh of St. Andrew's church, Lindsay. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with chrysanthemums and ferns, dahlias, astere, autumn leaves and mountain-ash berries and special music was rendered by the choir, assisted by Mrs. R. E. Greig, of Toronto, whose solos at both services were highly appreciated. Handsome collection plates were presented to the church by Mrs. H. Keen, of Toronto.

On the following Tuesday evening a fowl supper was served in the Temperance Hall, followed by a high class programme, given by the male quartette, of St. Paul's church, Port Hope, Mrs. R. E. Greig of Toronto, Mrs. McCarthy and Miss Pearl Merrifield of Port Hope, soloists, and Mr. Chas. Hornby, of Omemee, violinist. The Rev. T. D. McCullough acted as chairman in his usual well-pleasing manner, and a short address was given by the Rev. Mr. Clarke, of Cavan.

A hearty good time was partaken of by all present, and the proceeds were most gratifying, amounting to $120.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

Ormiston's eyes still searched her face, glowing with dissatisfaction.

"I get no thanks, it seems," he growled. "A sorry welcome, I must say." Taking his cup from the table, he rose. "Come, my gentle buzzards, let us drink to the sourest and saddest wench from here to Cathay!"

The others responded neisily. Tench set his cup upon the table, and rubbed the bandage that encircled his forehead.

"The good raw liquor eases the pain," he cried. "A shrewd blow that Spanish cutthroat gave me."

"Forget it, old war horse!" Ormiston slapped him heavily on the back. "Think of the fifty thousand good golden doubloons we brought back, and never mind a few scratches."

"Ay, Firebrand, I've one myself, but what of it?" Long Rodgers reached for the rum flask. "By Heaven I've a bitter thirst!"

"The Dons fight well when the devil's in them, and that's always," Tench went on. "I saw one running about the deck with a sword cut in his side you might have laid your two fingers in, and he made no more of it than if it had been a fleabite. More rum, girl!" He began to hammer on the table with his cup.

Ramona brought a second flask from the cupboard. As she set it upon the table, Ormiston took her by the arm.

"Here, too, girl," he said thickly—"and a kiss."

She tore herself from his grasp, her temper flaring to white heat. "You beast!" she cried. It was the first time he had touched her, since his return, and she suddenly found that she could not endure it. Love had worked many changes in her, during those three short weeks.

Ormiston's brow contracted in a black frown.

"Be quiet, wench!" "Are you not my lawful slave, taken in fair fight from the Spanish, who are enemies alike to God and man?" He staggered to his feet, facing his companions with a drunken leer, a combativeness born of liquor. "Who fails to agree with me, let him choose his weapons, and I'm his man." Dangerously quarrelsome, he fumbled about the table for his rapier.

"Save your steel for others, Firebrand," Long Rodgers observed with a laugh. "I've had enough of fighting, for one." He seized the flask that Ramona had brought, and would have placed it to his lips, but Tench snatched it from him.

"Would you drain the battle, pig?" he exclaimed. "Give your betters a chaice. I'm as dry as a musty Testament."

Ormiston fell back into the chair, his eyes still fixed upon Ramona. The girl regretted bitterly her momentary outburst, but Ormiston had forgotten his anger.

"By Heaven, the wench has spirit," he roared, his eye kindling as he observed her flushed cheeks, her heaving bosom.

"Spirit enough, and to spare, Bull," laughed Tench, "as you'll find out some day to your sorrow."

"Zounds! Do you think I can't take care of myself? You croak too much, you one-eyed old crow. Come—sing us a song."

"Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we," roared Long Rodgers from his place upon the couch.

"Be quiet, fool. Your bellowing annoys me. Come, One Eye."

"Not I. The Buzzard here has a sweet voice. Let him sing."

The others burst into laughter at this sally, but Ormiston was not to be turned aside. "Up with you," he called to the two in the corner.

They stopped their game, and De Rocheville, pocketing his winnings, took Ramona's guitar from the broad window sill and began to strum it. Graves faced his companions with a look of awkward embarrassment. "What—me?" he asked.

"Why not?" Ormiston's ill nature had passed. "And none of your rascally fishwives' jingles, either. Give us a good old English ditty, with the salt of the sea in its breath. Strike up, Frenchy."

"W'at s'all we 'ave, Monsieur Buzzard?" the Frenchman laughed.

Graves took a pull at the rum flask, and hitched at his belt.

"It's a bit of a song I heard once, down Bristol way. Never mind the tune, Frenchy. Just come in with a note or two whenever you can. It's all one to me." He cleared his throat with solemn gravity.

"Good ol' Buzzer," rumbled Long Rodgers sleepily.

"Hold your tongue!" Ormiston admonished him, intent upon the song. "On with you, Buzzard."

The latter began to sing, piping out the words in a reedy nasal voice.

"Oh, if I were a herring and could swim unto the shore,
Oh, if I were a say-dove and could fly the ocean o'er,
I'd fly unto my true love, who's awaitin' at the door,
I'd wed her with a golden ring and plow the main no more.

Or, if I were a merchant-man a-tradin' furrin' ports,
Or if I were a whaler, or a Bristol man of sorts,
I'd turn my back upon the sea and live upon the shore,
I'd wed my Pol—or else my Mol, and plow the main no more.

A thunder of applause greeted his efforts. Ormiston, his good nature now completely restored, observed Ramona, standing in utter wretchedness before the bedroom door.

"Is she not a handsome craft, my hearties!" he cried. "Look at the lines of her, slim and fair, like an English-built clipper." He went up to the girl and tore the scarlet cloak from her shoulders. "Come, my beauty. Wake up. 'Fore God, you go about like a death's head." In her clinging nightdress she faced the grinning crowd. "Give us a dance," Ormiston went on, as the gril picked the cloak from the floor and once more placed it about her.

De Rocheville struck up a rollicking air, while the others cheered lustily, refilling their cups. This proved as good sport as even the taverns afforded. The Firebrand was a royal host.

"A merry rogue, by my soul!" observed Tench. "Let the wench dance. 'Tis all she's good for, I'll warrant."

"Well, girl, begin!" Ormiston exclaimed.

"Not to-night—ah, God!—not to-night."

"On with you. Am I to be kept waiting?"

"Madre de Dios! I cannot." She covered her burning face with her hands.

Ormiston's former ill nature returned with a rush. Her opposition served only to whet his anger.

"Dance, you sniveling fool!" he roared, "or, by Heaven, I'll take the whip to you." He raised a threatening arm.

She saw that she could no longer oppose him. There was still the chance that she might, by falling in with his humour, succeed in persuading him to return to the town It was poor sport, at best, this baiting of a woman. Even he might tire of it. To dance thus, before these men, seemed the crowning moment of her degradation, yet what mattered that, so Barton might be saved. She was already damned sufficiently in his eyes; no additional humilation on her part could affect the issue now. A wave of courage swept over her. She would play her part to the end, if thus the man she loved might be delivered from his danger. With cold fury in her eyes, she whirled into the applauding circle, her body moving in the lively steps of the cachucha. The motive, the purpose that now inspired her rendered her indifferent to all else, she put her whole soul into the task before her—a dance of death, it seemed, yet what mattered that, to one who no longer had reason to live.

Never had the men about her seen such dancing. The efforts of the tavern women seemed puerile compared with it. They stood spellbound, watching her whirling figure. At the first steps, her cloak slipped to the floor; she no longer heeded it. The light of the candles shimmered over the silk of her nightdress, scarcely less white than the flashing limbs beneath. For many minutes she whirled before her grinning audience, her brain filled with a strange madness.

At last the revulsion came. All her fire disappeared, suddenly snuffed out, as a candle might have been snuffed out. Her strength vanished, and with it the spirit that had animated her. With a shuddering cry she sank to the floor, a pitiful, huddled, spiritless thing, shaking from weakness and despair. De Rocheville stopped his playing with a screaming discord. Only the choking sobs of the girl upon the floor disturbed the sudden silence.

Ormiston, in spite of his liquor, must have felt something of the change that had come over her. He turned to his companions with a grim laugh.

"Enough, my frinds! The girl is tired out. Back to the town with you. There be wine and wenches aplenty in the taverns. Leave me alone with my woman."

They needed no second invitation. The girl's sudden collapse had robbed the sport of its savor. "Out with you," cried Tench, as the party crowded through the door. "The Firebrand would be alone with his ladylove." They stumbled forth, very noisy, very glad to get away, waking the silence of the night with lewd jokes. Ormiston set in place the heavy wooden bar, then went toward Ramona, a flare of eagerness in his reddened eyes.

She still crouched upon the floor, but her sobbing had ceased. Something at least had resulted from her effort. The Firebrand was alone. She revolved this thought within her mind, and drew still another draft upon her all but spent courage.

He stood beside the table, watching her with the first expression of kindness that had crossed his face since his return. Slipping off his coat and baldrich, he threw them upon the couch, then tossed his silver mounted pistols after them.

"Damme, girl," he asked, shaking her by the arm, "what's wrong with you?"

She rose, cowering from his touch. "Nothing—nothing—please go and leave me."

"Leave you?" He laughed long at this. "Leave you? By the Lord! And me ashore for the first time in a fortnight? Are you losing your senses?"

MOTION PICTURE FILMS.

How They Are "Edited" Before They Reach the Public Eye.

After a motion picture film has been developed and printed it is sent to the general manager or to the director to be "edited." Like an author's manuscript in the hands of an editor, it is shortened here and there, the captions altered, some parts entirely "cut" or deleted and the whole film dressed up to suit the ideas of the men closest in touch with the theater going public.

The editing takes place in the projection room, says the Popular Science Monthly, but the altering—cutting the film and changing it—is done in the cutting and assembling room by men who do nothing else. Sometimes the men in the cutting room ("cutters," in the trade lingo) are so overwhelmed and confused with orders issued by the studio officials that they are compelled to ask for additional explanations. Needless to say this wastes much time.

By means of the phonograph, however, one motion picture company is eliminating this waste and saving money. As the director watches a picture in the projection room he utters his editing orders into the transmitter of a dictating machine. The film is then sent back to the cutting room with the phonograph record.

A SUBMARINE BASE.

It Is a Supply and Repair Station For Undersea Boats.

What is a "submarine base?" Well, a submarine base is, in a word, a supply and repair station for undersea boats. Craft of this kind are very elaborate and exceedingly delicate pieces of mechanism; they are liable to need tinkering at frequent intervals.

Hence there must be a machine shop on shore at the service of the boats when at intervals they return from cruises. There must also be a storehouse containing all kinds of supplies and spare parts for the submarines. Most important of all, there must be tanks of fuel oil.

Usually there is attached to the base a "mother ship"—a good sized steamer, with machinery aboard for making emergency repairs. The steamer also carries dynamos, which may be used for charging the batteries of the boats—though at sea the charging is accomplished by the oil engines that propel the submarine when on the surface.

When it is not practicable to establish such a shore station the "mother ship" may be utilized temporarily as a floating base.

Loafing on the Job.

Mrs. Woman, are you married? If you are we wish you all of the happiness and the best of blessings a generous world can give you. But let us ask a bold question and probably offend you. We do not mean to be impolite. It is just the perversity of human nature to want to know if you married a lazy man—a man who talks in a loud voice about his back yard garden and lets his wife do all the work.

Didn't Do It.

Flatbush—He's always knocking the married men.

Bensonhurst—Yes, I know it.

"Only a few years ago he told me he was just crazy to get married."

"That's right, but it seems he wasn't quite crazy enough."

Caught In His Trap.

"I am in an embarrassing situation," declared Judge Flubdub, former member of congress.

"How is that, judge?"

"Here I am called upon to try to make sense out of a law that I framed myself."

Musical Note.

Mrs. Jones—Does my daughter's piano practicing annoy your husband? Neighbor—Oh, not at all; Jack can't tell one note from another.

The employee who has a horror of working overtime will never own the business.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

An easy way to clean paints: Paints in the bathroom or kitchen that have been soiled from smoke or grease can be easily cleaned by heating vinegar, and with the use of a sponge wipe the paints. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Power Of Love

It Risked Even Life.

By RICHARD MARKLEY

Most young men go to college without any fixed life plan before them. What they will do with their education they put off deciding until after they get it. I was one of these. I was a good classical scholar and one of the honor men of my class. The closing days of my college life were very pleasant and very exciting. I delivered the salutatory in Latin, having the satisfaction of being considered a very learned young man.

I went home with the plaudits of my admirers ringing in my ears. But there I found a contrasting quiet. The excitement had all died out, and I found myself face to face with the problem of a career. Many young men who take honors in college become pedagogues. I had no such inclination, nor did I care for a profession of any kind. I preferred a stirring life. I went to the city, hunted for a business position and got one with a house doing a commission business whose clientele was in South and Central America.

I stood the humdrum of business life for about a year, when some one was needed to go to Honduras to collect a debt owing the firm. I offered to go. My offer was accepted, and within a few weeks I found myself in the country of the rubber tree.

While collecting the debt I was approached by some men who told me that they were plotting to seize the government. They persuaded me to join them. They were defeated. I, with others, was captured in arms and thrown into prison. The same evening we were told that we would all be garroted the next morning.

When at daylight an officer entered the room where we were confined to take us out to execution he said to me:

"I understand that you are an educated man. Am I correct?"

"I consider myself a good classical scholar," I replied.

"Very well." Then, turning to a subordinate, he said:

"Take him to his excellency."

I was led to the president's house and told to wait till called for. About 9 o'clock I was conducted to the president's private office.

"What do you know about the classics?" he asked.

I told him that I was a college graduate and had at commencement delivered an oration in Latin.

"You're just what I want," he said. 'My son wishes to enter an American college next year and needs a tutor. If you will fit him for the entrance examinations I will pardon you for your stupid complicity with these rascals who have sought to put themselves in my place. But understand, your sentence is only suspended. You will come into my family and be one of us. Any digression from a straight path and you will suffer under your sentence for treason. Say nothing to any one of your connection with traitors."

I did not understand what he meant by "any digression" till I arrived at his house and for the first time saw that he had a daughter at that tender age when girls are liable to fall in love with any presentable man they happen to be thrown in with. Donna Inez was nineteen and of course a Spanish type. It was plain that I had been warned against making love to her.

I was introduced into the family by President Sanchez as a college graduate he had imported from the north to tutor his son Pedro, sixteen years old. Senora Sanchez was probably the only person in the house that knew I was under sentence of death.

I have a theory that we only enjoy by contrast. Another way of putting it is, "Stolen fruit is the sweetest." The president made a great mistake in warning me. For a young man of twenty-three to be forbidden under penalty of death to make love to a young girl is a terrible temptation. Had Senor Sanchez made no such threat I might have lived in the same house with his daughter and not transgressed. As it was, I was tortured with a terrible desire to win her and with a terrible fear of the garrote if I did.

Whatever were my feelings, I dared not show them even to the young lady herself. And here I made the same mistake with her that her father had made with me. Observing that I had unintentionally inspired her with a sentiment that might lead to love, I confided to her the secret that love with us meant death for me.

From that moment a passion that might otherwise have either never been born or at least soon have died out flamed up in Donna Inez and absorbed her whole being. Could this passion be scientifically analyzed I think it would appear that the predominant element in it would turn out to be a desire that I should accept death in preference to giving her up. There is something paradoxical about this, but nature is full of paradoxes.

There would surely come a time when we would put not our necks in a halter, but my neck in the garrote. We were one day in the room where I taught Donna Inez's brother, he having just gone out. She gave me a reproachful look.

"For heaven's sake, senorita, what is it? I beg of you be careful. You understand the position in which I stand."

"I do. But I love you. Why should we be parted? Fate is very cruel."

"If we yield to this passion I must pay the penalty, and if I pay the penalty you will lose me. There is but one course for us. We must part."

"Are you not willing to take any risk at all for my sake?"

"Do you wish me to suffer the garrote for your sake?"

She was silent for a moment, with downcast eyes.

"I do not wish you to suffer, but I wish you to be willing to suffer on account of your love for me."

There was something irresistible in her face as she turned her eyes up to meet mine. I clasped a hand that hung loosely by her side and felt a current running from her arm into mine. Then it was all over with me. I drew her toward me and kissed her.

The next few weeks were the most delightful to me of any period of my life. I was constantly stealing interviews with Donna Inez, knowing all the while that if caught in one of them I would pay for the pleasure with my life. True, there were moments when the abyss on whose brink I stood would appear beneath me in all its terrible reality. But had it not been for these moments would my enjoyment with the girl I loved have been so keen? I think not. It was the one that brought out the other.

The bliss of one of our meetings was interrupted by a terrible scare. We heard a step in the adjoining room. Inez clung to me, clutching me like one drowning. We heard the same step retreating.

"It's father!" she gasped.

Some moments passed. There was no recovery for us, for we did not know but that we had been discovered. Finally she said:

"If there has been a false alarm and you will not be torn away from me to die I vow that I will never again expose you to such a danger. I forbid you to speak to me of love again."

She persisted till I had promised to obey; then, after a long parting kiss, she left me.

When I saw the president again he showed no trace whatever of having discovered the situation. Inez and I had received a terrible warning; we had both been brought to a realization of our danger and had determined never to expose ourselves to it again. Our resolution lasted forty-eight hours. Then we found ourselves again clasped in an embrace. For two days my desire to caress my love once more had been increasing until the last moment, when not a thousand garrotes could have deterred me.

"Heavens," gasped Inez, "we are again in the maelstrom! The pitcher that goes often to the well is at last broken."

"There is but one course for us to pursue," I replied. "If you love me living you must love me dead. I will leave you and at last your love will die."

"No," she exclaimed; "it will live forever."

Then suddenly the blood left the cheeks of both of us. Again we heard the step in the adjoining room, the same step we had heard before.

"We are lost!" we both cried in a hoarse whisper.

"Your father has been watching us," I said. "The last time he caught us he was not sure. He has waited for more conclusive evidence. He has caught us a second time. I do not expect ever to see you again after this one last parting."

She swooned in my arms. I carried her to a lounge and laid her on it. I dared not call any one; indeed, I feared that some one would come in and find us there together. She soon opened her eyes, but the moment she remembered what had taken place was about to swoon again, when I spoke reassuring words I did not feel, and she regained control of herself.

I had now not the slightest doubt that Senor Sanchez knew of what was going on between me and his daughter and would choose his own time as to fulfilling the conditions he had imposed when I had come into his family.

I was kneeling by Donna Inez striving to convince her to the contrary of what I felt when again the step was heard. This time it was coming directly toward us. Abandoning all hope of keeping our secret longer, we clung to each other and awaited the blow. In another moment Senor Sanchez stood in the doorway. He saw his daughter's arms fall from about my neck, limp. She had again passed into unconsciousness.

He rushed toward her and, replacing me, took her in his own arms. When she came to herself he began to reassure her:

"Pardon, little one; pardon! I did not intend to put this strain upon you. I was led into it by a desire to test the strength of love." He took her wrists in his hands and folded her arms about his neck. "When the tutor was about to come to us I saw that he was just such a person as would capture a young girl's fancy, and I endeavored to ward off such a result, having other plans for you. Then when I saw that love was proving itself stronger than the fear of death I kept my eyes upon you both, not from a desire to spy on you, but to observe the power of the bond that united you. Kiss me, my darling. I promise you I shall not oppose that which even the fear of the garrote cannot subdue."

My neck was encircled, but not by the garrote. A wedding garland was thrown about me and Donna Inez's arms as well. I became a stanch supporter of my father-in-law and fought for him when he was again attacked by revolutionists. He swears by me, telling every one that he does not know how he could get on without me.

Writing on an Egg.

Hand a friend a hard boiled egg with the request that it be minutely examined. After he has satisfied himself that the egg is of the ordinary kind you tell him to break off the shell, and, much to his astonishment, he will discover his name plainly written on the white of the egg.

There is a previous preparation, but it is very simple. Dissolve one ounce of alum in a half pint of vinegar. Take a small pointed brush and outline whatever you desire on the shell of the egg. Let it dry thoroughly and then boil the egg for about fifteen minutes. If these directions are carried out all tracings of the writing will have disappeared from the outside of the shell, but when the shell is cracked open it will plainly show on the white of the egg.

PRONOUNCING WORDS.

A Test and a Flippant Fling at the Critic and His Theory.

Comes now another to trouble us in these days when the wayfarer has already enough bothers to keep him from lingering overlong in his humble repose. It is a man who has discovered that there are 25,000 English words more or less commonly mispronounced and who would show us how to rescue ourselves from the disgrace.

By way of illustration he challenges all comers to try to pronounce offhand such words as actinism, archimandrite, batman, beaufin, bourgeois, brevier, buoy, demy, fugleman, fusil, oboe, rowlock, tassel, vase and velleity. He intimates that anybody who can give them all correctly can qualify as a .300 hitter in the pronunciation league, but still has a long way to go before he reaches perfection.

But what of it? An oboe sounds as sweet whether one calls it an oh-bow or an oh-boy. If the writer of this article told his printer to set it in boorzhwah type the printer probably would call a meeting of the chapel and insist on a strike vote. You can call it a vase or vawze, but it takes a dime to get it filled, where it used to cost only 5 cents. As to demy and velleity, most of us have got along very well for a good many years without writing or speaking either of them and hope to struggle along the same way at least until we have a little rest from worry over the high cost of potatoes.

The hardest thing about it is to determine which of several schools of pronunciation is most desirable—the London, the Melbourne, the Canadian, the Texas, the Massachusetts, the Alabama, the Georgia or the Missouri. Moreover, if 25,000 words are mispronounced most of us are democratic enough to let the majority rule and be willing to make it unanimous. — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

AMERICA AWHEEL.

The Case of Pippkins Will Do to Illustrate the Point.

"My neighbor, Pippkins, has changed his manner of vacation," declares Edward Hungerford in Everybody's. "In other years his annual outing was a rather portentous affair. The family began to plan it some months in advance. There were railroad and steamboat and hotel booklets on the library table. When the time came Mrs. Pippkins and the girls went to a huge wooden hotel on the edge of a lake. They dressed three times a day. When Pippkins ran down on one Friday of each fortnight he boarded a hot, dusty, overcrowded train and rode for five uncomfortable hours. They insisted that he don a Tuxedo each evening for dinner. He used to wonder if the game was quite worth the candle.

"Today there are no such doubts in Pippkins' mind. He has a car—so have four-fifths of the families in our quiet street. Pippkins caught the fever early in the game. Today he is a veteran and hardened motorist. He talks earnestly and learnedly of gears and of transmission, and he is superlatively critical of every car except his own. I might write a story upon how that car and its predecessors in the Pippkins family have changed their very soul, but this is not the time nor place. Sufficient is it to say that Pippkins is now a motor expert, and Dr. King down at our corner says that Pippkins has grown ten years younger.

"Mrs. Pippkins and the girls have all but forgotten when they have been on a railroad train in summer. They live in the family car.

"Multiply Pippkins all the way across the face of the land, and you begin to have a definite perception of America awheel."

Efficiency.

Efficiency is no new invention; it is as old as intelligence itself. None realize efficiency so completely as the creative genius—our Darwins, Faradays, Edisons and Fords—and none so completely practice and exemplify working explosively. Genius itself, we are told, is the capability for taking infinite pains.—William H. Smith in Industrial Management.

COURSE OF THE HARVEST MOON.

This diagram illustrates the course of the harvest moon by the black lines and white moons, and shows the different curve followed by the moon of the other months by the fainter line and gray moons. In September we have the full moon nearest the autumnal equinox.

We Can Help You Stimulate Business

A little stimulation in Midsummer may put you back in the running again, and even yet, if you concentrate your efforts, use liberally the means that have made others prosper in your line of business you can succeed as they did.

Some Merchants Say:—

"As Soon as Business Picks Up I'll Advertise"

This is not consistent. The farmer does not wait until harvest time to sow his seed—and, remember this, that if you ever reach the point in business where you believe you can get along without advertising, somebody else will own your business. ¶ It isn't the age of a house that counts most. It's the efficient, up-to-date, daily publicity that brings its goods before the buyers that spells SUCCESS.

Moderation in All Things

THERE is a Roman proverb which declares that "Where the sun goes the doctor need not enter."

No doubt is there that sun, air and water are good for the body as well as for the soul, and that there is nothing else that will take the place of any of the three.

These being indisputable facts, it is a pity that the faddists should have fallen upon them as material for their dissertations.

Sun, Air and Water.

A rather startling announcement has been made recently that the American people are threatened with extermination if they do not mend their ways and live out of doors, making salamanders of themselves, as it were.

One statement is that unless the American women put aside the vanities of high heeled shoes and tight fitting clothes and let the sun send its rays into every crack and cranny of the human system in a few years at the very most they may make up their minds to producing a race of anemics.

Sun baths are all very well in the winter, spring and fall, but the unwisdom of going about too much in the hot summer sun is daily being demonstrated by the number of heat prostrations in the cities.

Plenty of fresh air is essential at all times, and it is hardly possible to get too much, but one may find its substitute, the electric fan, dangerous if not properly used.

Certainly these fans are a great aid in keeping comfortable in warm weather, but should be used judiciously and should never be turned directly upon the body, if one would avoid neuralgia, rheumatism and even pneumonia. On the other hand, if properly used the electric fan will prove a means of getting air that is cool and greatly purified.

The drinking of water is quite as essential to summer comfort as is the daily bath, but both of these also require care and proper attention to special needs. In travelling, especially, one should be sure that the water is pure and should carry one's own drinking cup, or use only the sanitary one furnished individually.

The much vaunted cold bath is a wonderful tonic for some constitutions, but there are others who find the shock and consequent reaction too severe. For these the daily bath of warm water, with the gradual cooling of the water, will be found most beneficial.

In Search of Health.

Proper bathing, plenty of good, pure water taken internally, fresh air and sunlight will be found to be better than all the medicine in the world, if taken judiciously.

But even the gifts of nature must be used with proper discretion.

One cannot revel too thoughtlessly even in the attributes of health without having to pay the fiddler. Use discretion in all things if you wish to finish up the summer in good condition.

When Vacations Are Over

VACATION time and all its allurements should be forgotten by the girl or woman who finds that she must return to her duties in the office or workroom. If she has had a pleasant trip or otherwise enjoyed herself she should feel deeply grateful for the pleasures that came her way, but should not bore others around her by constantly referring to the many phases of her vacation.

When Vacation Is Over.

The businesslike woman knows that she is under certain obligations to her employer and those in authority. Hence she keeps her mind on her work when she returns to it. She doesn't waste any time in idly dreaming of those carefree, happy days just over with. On the other hand, she enthusiastically resumes her interrupted duties, feeling truly glad that she is back.

Life has, indeed, a serious side. Vacations and all the joys that go with them should be forgotten when one hears the working whistles blow. The man or woman who has engaged our services should receive our first and best consideration. He or she believes in us, relies on us, and if we're made of the right stuff we certainly should dismiss outside matters from our minds and apply ourselves in the right way to the work that means our livelihood.

The girl who has lost her head over the "fine" friends she met while on her vacation can hardly be expected to resume her duties very enthusiastically. Such misguided persons should remember that most peo... look and act their best before strangers and that the pleasant acquaintances of an idle hour rarely develop into lasting friendships.

Far better to forget all about those people. Fine feathers make fine birds, yet, unfortunately, it is not always the most sterling type that adopts such raiment.

The young woman who comes back to her desk or counter feeling disconsolate or unhappy because she cannot maintain the style of this or that acquaintance she met while away is not only a very foolish but a positively weak minded girl. Many of these ultra-smart women would give worlds to exch... places with her—to know the joy that comes from receiving a well earned salary and to experience the feeling of "fitness" and strength that comes to one for every sacrifice one bravely makes.

Whatever your duties may be, remember you are a part, a cog in the wheel of the business that requires your services, and if you would find the right kind of contentment you must do your work as well as lies within your power to do it.

You should look out on life sanely, remembering that the idle few are never happy persons. Work is honorable, and no matter how humble one's calling may be the right thinking girl or woman will put dignified and conscientious effort into it. Thus gradually she will rise to a more important position.

No, life is not all laughter, lights and music, and soft, clinging silken frocks. If it were we would very soon grow weary of it all. Life means to those who would be truly happy work and honest efforts to get along, and sacrifices proportionate to one's ability in bearing them.

The Valued Employe.

Therefore, those of us who have come back from a pleasant vacation should feel that we owe our good employer a certain debt of gratitude. We have been allowed this freedom from our work in order that we may build up new strength, mental and physical, and thus fit ourselves to more easily withstand the cares and responsibilities that every working day brings.

Then it remains for us to demonstrate by quiet, conscientious effort that our good employer's kind offices are appreciated—that we are determined to merit a continuance of his or her sincere regard.

If we do this we shall not find our work unpleasant or our business associates tiresome, but, on the other hand, will develop into a valuable and valued employe and gradually rise in the esteem and good will of those around us.

A Word About Success

A MAN or woman who is succeeding—or who is an acknowledged success—is generally the recipient of much favorable comment. Every one seems anxious to shake his or her hand and to tell this successful person how wonderful is the work that he or she is doing.

All the world pays tribute to a winner, but seems to forget—or rather doesn't want to know—the poor soul who, through storm and sunshine, heroically fights his or her way upward.

At best the favor showered upon those who have "arrived," is shallow and empty. Persons who have made good don't care a snap of their fingers for any such demonstration. Criticism or praise will neither help nor hinder them, although some moralists go on the say that every "knock" is a boost.

The average "success" can thank grit and stick-to-itiveness for the worthwhile things that have come his or her way. Yet only a brave few are blessed with these twin virtues. The countless majority drop out of the race simply because—well, in most instances because no one knew nor cared, nor offered them the one, rousing, hopeful word that would have meant new strength to make another "try."

Women who loudly sing the praises of this or that woman who is a success, are silent when it comes to reaching out a helping hand to some one who is a failure. To-day there are countless brave, unselfish men and women struggling on against overwhelming odds, to whom a little kindly interest or encouragement would mean a new lease of life.

The world has no use for such fighters, but they are deserving of more praise than are those "brilliant successes" whom every one is so anxious to applaud.

Persons who have "arrived" are in a world of their own—a world far removed from ordinary humanity. Those of us who admire them from afar would be doing better and more commendable work were we to single out some one whom we could assist with a whole souled word of encouragement—some one who has tried hard to "get there" but failed.

How weak and how selfish it is for us to withhold our regard for such and such a person until he or she has become a success. When the race is run the winner cares absolutely nothing for the plaudits showered upon him.

He knows no one can wrest the honors from him—that they are secure for all time but while he was running—when doubt and uncertainty and suspense all but crushed him—what hope and added strength a rousing word would have given him.

Few of us are blessed with exceptional talent, yet every one of us are needed in, and are very necessary to our little world. True, we are very human and often wish that we could attain the heights of this or that favored one. But after all we are in the place for which we are best fitted—the place wherein we can do worth while work.

THEY ARE SPREADING GOSPEL OF THRIFT

Here is a food conservation team of the Department of Agriculture demonstrating home canning methods. Teams of this kind are now at work in every county of each of the thirty-three Northern and Western States teaching by practical demonstrations how to conserve food. It is estimated that 800,000 boys, girls and mothers are members of Uncle Sam's food army, under the leadership of the department experts.

What Inculcating a Love of Pretty Clothes Did for One Girl

EXCESSIVE love of dress may have driven many women to evil. It is a favorite theme with authors and dramatists. But I know a man who believes ninety-eight girls out of a hundred could be turned from a life of shame—provided they were headed that way—if they could be interested in clothes and had the money to get them honestly—and he is willing to let his wife experiment with his theory!

Whatever may be the conviction of my readers on this point, I can tell one story of him, and vouch for its truth, that is most interesting in itself, quite apart from theorizing.

There was a little girl in his town who got into bad company when she was twelve. She had a drunken mother and a stepfather and had been reared in sickening poverty and squalor. At twelve she was an overworked slavey in a cheap boarding house, anaemic and catarrhal. No wonder she got into bad company!

The authorities sent her to a home where she spent five years. The nuns turned her out a pretty, healthy, well mannered girl, but without vocational training. She wandered back to the old town and the heavy maid-of-all-work drudgery. In three weeks she was running around every night with her old associates.

The man said to his wife:—"Take her as lady's maid and train her."

"I don't need a lady's maid!" declared his wife.

"Well, what of it? Take her, anyway, to save her from the street. And when you get her, start her in on clothes. Give her all your old ones, buy her new, and influence her to spend all she earns on her back."

The day has gone by when this woman says to her husband, "You're crazy."

The girl came, and her new mistress proceeded, dubiously. She sewed neatly, which was promising, and she was intelligent and likable. They talked clothes and fashion and colors and fabrics until the woman hated the subject. Not so the girl. She took to it like a duck to water. She had been starved for beauty. Turned loose in the woman's smart wardrobe to mend and press, her eyes sparkled and she hummed most of the day; the fashion and art magazines at her disposal gave her keen pleasure; and the dainty little maid's apparel given her found her a proud creature. Like every Eve of us, clothes thrilled her.

Her mistress began to dress her from the skin out—once the lady's maid uniforms were settled. Say it was wrong, if you will, to give her every stitch of halfworn silk, satin and lace underwear! But the girl's clever fingers mended and refashioned them, and by the time the silk against her skin got to be an accustomed feeling she had acquired a new outlook on life. She no longer wanted coarse things in amusements or companionships.

Outside clothes came afterward. Many of them were made over from cast-offs and were of excellent material, but she was directed and encouraged to study catalogues and cheap shop advertisements and get good styles in the kind of material she could afford. It is remarkable how chic the poor shops sometimes are. In three months the girl was as smart as they make them. Only a woman would have known how inexpensive most of her stuff was. Undoubtedly the directing good taste of her mistress kept her from choosing the wrong thing and taught her how to wear her clothing right.

She was encouraged to shop on her weekly afternoon off, and was not given Sunday afternoons. Her evenings were spent with clothes in magazines or in the making. She soon preferred them to the parks and the cafés.

When youth began to call for companions, not only were her own inclinations upon a higher plane but she appealed to a better class of young men. She was such a smart little thing that nice boys who would not have taken out a servant girl were proud to be seen with her. She married the chauffeur, who afterward set up a business of his own in used cars. Into this marriage she carried an interest and cleverness for dress that makes her (I say it boldly) a successful wife.

For men, the humblest of them, ask for something good to look at in a life's partner.

The Sympathetic Chaperon

EVERY one of my girls wants to be socially popular, and some of them wonder why they are not. Dear girls, learn to be generous—generous to yourselves, your time, your words, your accomplishments.

Not long ago I read this little unsigned verse:—

"If any little word of mine can make a life the brighter,
If any little song of mine can make a life the lighter,
God help me take my little word and take my bit of singing
And drop it in some little vale and set the echoes ringing."

That is the right, the generous spirit. It is not so much what we do as the spirit we dot it in that counts—the quick, hearty response to a request that makes the action a pleasure.

The generous girl is always popular. But can you imagine one good reason why a girl should be popular whose tongue is a spiteful weapon or who, no matter how accomplished, always refuses to give others pleasure?

Sometimes the ungenerous girl is just a selfish girl. She takes and keeps the best of everything for herself—from the most comfortable chair in the drawing room to the attention of all the available young men—then expects to be popular.

That makes me think of something else, girls. The ungenerous girl always monopolizes all the young men—if she can. The attention, the admiration of one or two does not satisfy her if others are around. She wants them all, and if she doesn't get them is inclined to be disagreeable. She is the sort of girl who will not introduce another girl to a young man if she can possibly avoid it. Often she makes the other girl feel cheap and mean as well as embarrassed.

"A girl must have a mighty poor opinion of herself, her own charms, to act like that," happy, generous Polly exclaimed. "Why, I like the girls to meet Keith. If he doesn't like me better than any one else I surely don't want to marry him, and how is the poor dear going to know unless I let him meet the girls?"

"You're safe indeed!" laughed Martha. "Keith thinks you the most wonderful girl that ever lived. He told me so the other day when you insisted on my taking your place at tennis. But really, Pol, lots of the girls are just like Miss Dawson says. They won't introduce you to a man if they can possibly crawl out of it. And it makes one feel such a ninny to stand by waiting."

"Be a give and take girl," I interrupted. "If you are no popular be sure it is your own fault, girls. If you can play or sing, if you golf and play tennis, but won't do so when asked—while some other girl will—you may depend on it that if a hostess has to make a choice it will not be you she will invite.

"If you know some nice young men and have girl friends, introduce them. If the young men are worth while they will like you all the better, and you will be surprised to see how popular it will make you with the girls.

"Another thing: The generous girl is never a spoil sport, neither is the popular girl. Nothing in the world will make a girl more unpopular. The spoil sport never wants to do anything her companions propose. If they want to dance she wants to sit on the porch and gaze at the moon. If they want to golf or play tennis she wants to read. Put your own selfish desires aside, girls; do as others propose. You will be repaid over and over, for you will be popular, sought out by clever hostesses and a favorite with all your companions.

"Just one more idea, girls, then I must stop for to-day. My editor says I must. Have a friendly spirit. Do not expect others to make all the advances. It is the acme of conceit to imagine others will seek you out and compel you to become one of them. Meet those you wish to know at the halfway house of acquaintanceship."

Filet Lace Edging

A NUMBER of my readers have written to me asking for the directions for making filet lace edging.

Many of you when buying this filet lace in the American shops must have noticed that the pointed edges have been cut, then terminated by a festoon stitch.

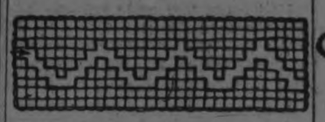

Figure I.

This proves that many of the big producers of filet lace are ignorant of the manner of making this pointed edge of the lace in a direct manner. They are satisfied to cut these points out of a straight band of filet lace.

This takes all the style and richness

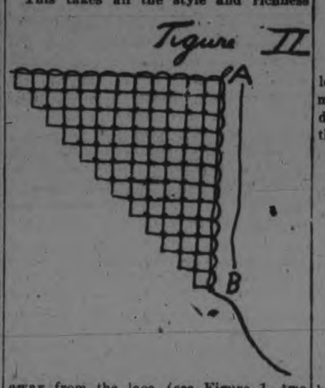

Figure II

To make a real filet lace edge you commence in the same manner as to make the squares in the preceding lessons.

When you have obtained the length of the border (see Figure 2, A, B—the height desired for the lace) you continue the work in making regularly, on the side of the right border, an increasing number of meshes (see Figure 3, C), while on the other side the last four squares are disengaged (see Figure 4). Then in the following round you disengage again the last (see Figure 4).

You continue in this fashion the lace edge until you have obtained the desired length. In view of the great variety of models which exist I am at the entire disposition of the readers to give them the directions to follow for the different

In one of the lessons I will give the directions to make a fringed lace. This is very useful both in house and costume decoration. American women, who seem to have a natural aptitude, should know how to make all these real laces, which, even if they are well able to pay for them in the lace shops, makes them appreciate the beauty and delicacy of this handiwork.

The Very Busy Woman.

THE very busy woman sighed enviously when the friend who had been calling upon her had gone. The friend was a woman who paid scrupulous attention to all the little personal niceties. It was the daintiness of her grooming, the finish in every detail of her costume that had roused the envy of the very busy woman.

"I always think that I am going to get things sufficiently organized to allow time for 'finish'—but I never do," the very busy one complained later in the day to an aunt—a woman of the old school, as dainty in all her personal appointments as she was apt in her advice to those who sought it of her.

"I simply love a well groomed look. I like all the little personal comforts and finenesses of living. I do not mean extravagant luxuries, or anything that is over self-indulgent, but just those little things and ways that add such a happy grace to living.

The aunt cut her short just a little impatiently.

"Begin with finish!" she exclaimed in her axiomatic way. And that was positively all that she said on the subject.

The very busy woman sat up straight, looked at her aunt very intently—then laughed, a happy light-hearted laugh.

"I see exactly what you mean," she cried. "And to prove that I do I am going to manicure my nails immediately."

"And you might spend a few minutes brushing your hair till it has some lustre," suggested the aunt, "and in trying to see if you can't do it becomingly."

"Of course I can do it becomingly," bridled the very busy woman.

"No one would suspect the fact," retorted the aunt spicily. "If you thought it really important to do it prettily you would learn to do it so quite as quickly as you do it the way you wear it now."

"You are perfectly right," murmured the very busy woman. "But I really should be writing that important letter."

"You'll write it in half the time if your hands and your hair look well," insisted the aunt, undaunted. "Before you do your nails go and black those shoes. They are a disgrace. You try to hide them under your skirt every time that I look at them. There will be time for all these things before you have to write that letter. Do them with zest as duties of utmost importance (which they are), and see if they take a great deal of time."

They didn't. And the difficult letter that had been a weight on the very busy woman's mind was written quickly and easily for the good spirits her attention to her personal appearance had inspired.

After the letter was finished the aunt said:—

"No woman worthy the name can have a complete self-respect who does not satisfy the demands of her fastidious inner self. It is a self that is continually telling her how she should appear. She simply cannot fly in the face of its dictates and be happy and spirit-free.

"I am speaking now of the normal woman—not of women in whom the love of daintiness is so extreme as to carry them into senseless expenditure of time and money in satisfying it. I'm talking about the women, like yourself, who from some twist of conscience feel themselves called upon to busy themselves with every duty before the great duty to self and others of looking their best and cultivating the little niceties of life.

"It is positively tonic, this self-respecting care of appearance. It gives you poise, it smoothes out the nerves. It increases your efficiency in any branch of work.

"Your room! How austere it is. How devoid of the little comforts that you would want to see in the room of a dear friend? You say that some day you are going to take time to make it cosey. Take the time right away. You can if you regard the duty to yourself seriously enough. You need a cosey room to rest in, to think in, to soothe you.

"You have let yourself drift away from social doings. Why? Simply because you have not recognized its folly, so stultifying to your development and happiness.

"How can you have a proper self-respect when you treat yourself so badly? And let me tell you right here—it is only the properly self-respecting person who is respected by others!"

Dangerous Game

COMPARING husbands is a dangerous game. "Married life is much more attractive than I had any reason to hope," remarked a bride.

And why did she dread it, though she loved her fiancé? Because of the conversation of older sisters and their friends concerning the vagaries of husbands.

Love is not blind, but love desires the world to be blind and hides the faults of husbands.

Love is not in control when either husband or wife is willing to criticise the other in general conversation. She who constantly holds up her husband as a paragon very probably exaggerates his virtues and minimizes his faults. Another man may possess neither the same virtues nor the same faults, yet prove a more satisfactory husband for another woman.

When the little ones' stockings become much worn at the knee and hard to mend put a neat patch under the worn place, then cut leg off at ankle, turn leg so the front will be at the back and stitch leg on foot again with finest stitch of machine, going around twice to be sure to catch all threads.

The patch will come under the bend of the knee under pants or skirts where it can seldom be seen and the knee now will be free from darning and you will have doubled the wear on the stocking leg.

There is no exercise so tiring as jumping, and yet this is just what most women do in operating the sewing machine. Try pressing down the toes of one foot, then the other, as though pedaling. You will be much less tired after a day's sewing.

French Extend Their Gains in Aisne Section--British Repulse Strong German Counter Attacks--Austro-Germans Develop Their Offensive Against Italians---Germans Retreating at Northern End of Russian Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 25. — Further progress was made last night by the French on the Aisne front between Cravibnon and Mont des Binges. The French War Office statement issued this afternoon says the Farm of Rohay was captured by the French, and that a number of prisoners were taken. Twenty-five German airplanes were brought down by the French pilots last night, or compelled to land in a damaged condition.

The announcement follows: North of the Aisne the situation in the sector between Braysen-Laoncois and Chavignon was not changed during the night. On the front between Mont Des Binges and Chavignon our troops made further progress and reached Rohay Farm. The number of prisoners taken up to last night in this region exceeds 500.

German aviators attacked Nancy. There were no victims.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Bulletin), October 25.—The War Office to-day announced that another German counter attack south of Houthoulst Wood was completely repulsed. The unsuccessful assault came after extensive artillery preparation last evening, the statement says.

PETROGRAD, October 25.—The German retreat on the northern end of the front continues. The War Office reports that the Russian vanguards lost touch in some sectors with the retiring Germans who destroyed all the bridges, roads and buildings.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 25.—The German official statement says Germans attempts to make another landing on Werder Peninsula in the region of [illegible] yesterday by Russian artillery fire the War Office announces to-day.

The Russian statement says that the Germans who left their advanced positions so far have retired about fifteen miles in the Riga region near Pskoff High Road, and in the sector of Little Jaegel River.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, October 25. — Taking advantage of their possession of the bridgehead of Santa Maria and Santa Lucia the Austro-German forces which yesterday began an offensive on the Isonzo front brought the battle onto the slopes of the right (west) bank of the Isonzo, says to-day's official statement.

The Austro-German offensive struck at two points on the Isonzo lines near Flitch and in the region of Tolmino. The attack apparently is being developed west of the river in the Tolmino area. Santa Lucia is on the west bank three miles below Tolmino, which is east of the river .

FOE CLAIMS 6000 ITALIAN PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 25. — Six thousand prisoners were taken by the Austro-German forces on the Italian front in the beginning of their offensive yesterday, according to Vienna advices sent by the Central News correspondent in Amsterdam.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBOROUGH

His Majesty the King, the British Parliament and People, have sent out an urgent call to Canada for assistance to the British Red Cross.

The need is greater, the demand more insistent, than ever before. Toronto has just given $850,000.00, and other cities in proportion. Our own City Council has wisely and generously granted $5,000.00 as a start. Last year a similar grant was supplemented by private subscription to nearly $9,000.00. This year I am asked to urge our good people to make it at least $10,000.00. Will we do it? We can if we will.

No personal canvas will be made, but private subscriptions are urgently asked and sorely needed. Please send them to Mr. Peter Campbell, Treasurer of the local fund, who will be pleased to acknowledge all such, large and small, both personally and through the local press.

E. C. S. HUYCKE,
Chairman Local Committee,
British Red Cross.

ROUNDING UP THE SLACKERS IN CHICAGO NOW

(Canadian Press.)

Chicago, Oct. 25. — Thirty men out of a total of six hundred taken last night by the police and federal authorities. The remainder of the six hundred were released after an investigation lasting nearly all night. Plans for a round up were made several days ago following a conference between federal authorities and the officials of the exemption board of District No. 44. Six hundred and eighteen registered men in that district failed to respond to the call for examination.

ANXIOUS TO LEASE ISLANDS

Mr. M. W. Peters, who is anxious to lease an island off Burnham's Point for the establishment of a bathing place, will be asked to meet the Aldermen at their next meeting and discuss the proposal. It is claimed that the sewage from East City enters the river at the point mentioned. This is a matter that will be taken into consideration.

Total results so far:
Number examined	1027
Fit for the trenches	614
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	60
Fit for duty in Canada	65
Unfit for any service	288

The number examined by the local Medical Board yesterday was ten short of Tuesday's record, the total for the day being fifty-one, of which thirty-two were placed in A category. There were six pronounced fit for non-combatant service overseas, and thirteen were rejected.

Th 1,000 mark was reached and passed last night, and when the session was through the number examined since the Board commenced its operations three weeks ago last Monday was 1,004. Of these, nearly 60 per cent. had been placed in A category, the total number found fit for the trenches being 597, while the total rejections were 232, or approximately 28 per cent. B and C men together are only responsible for about 12 per cent. of the total number examined.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—Sir Thomas White has received a letter from Mr. Knight, secretary-treasurer of the Great War Veterans' Association, expressing thanks on behalf of the twenty-five thousand members of the association for the increase made in the rate of pensions and for the changes in the regulations relating thereto.

RAVAGED BY DISEASE

Thousands of Letters Taken From German Prisoners Describe the Suffering in Germany From Dysentery, Cholera and Typhus

"FALLING LIKE FLIES"

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Oct 8.—(By Mail.)—Thousands of letters taken from prisoners at Verdun describe in harrowing terms the ravages of dysentery, cholera and typhus throughout Germany.

Some idea not only of the widespread nature of these epidemics, but of the effect they are having on the German population, can be gained from the fact that over one half of the letters found contained references to the spread of dysentery caused by improper and insufficient food. These letters spoke of the disease at Cologne, Mulheim, Cobourg, Burstadt, Juben, Alankenberg, Stagard, Altona, Weisbaden, Crune, Bermy, Pollnow, Stettin, Mickel, Zanow, Halle, Duisbourg, Rugort, Beeck and other towns.

TYPICAL EXTRACTS.

Some typical extracts follow:

Burstadt, Aug. 6—I believe it will soon be the end. At Mannheim dysentery exists since a long time now, and the streets are closed. Now it exists also at Burstadt. Mamma is very much afraid, because a great many people are dying of it. They fall almost like flies."

Guben, Aug. 18. —"Dear brother, here people are dying every day of dysentery, only it is not allowed to be known outside."

Guben, Aug. 10.—"To-day there are again some dead. Always of dysentery. But it is true that it could not be otherwise with what we have to eat. There is absolutely no fat left in our bodies."

Chemnitz, Aug. 10.— "The hearses are obliged to gallop."

Mayence, Aug. 11.—"Since several days both cholera and typhus have made their appearance to the extent that several streets have been closed to traffic."

Gollub, Aug. 9.—"At Graiudenz and Thorn people are dying of cholera. We can be sure the disease will come here also. My God, we must die now or later."

Cologne, Aug. 11.—"An epidemic of dysentery has broken out here. The barracks and hospitals have been closed for fifteen days. Dysentery also reigns among the civil population. People no longer have any fat or grease left in their bodies. Many have died."

What makes these letters all the more reflective of the condition of Germany is that all of them had been carefully censored before being sent to the soldiers. Presumably the details cut out by the censor were far more serious than the ones above, which were passed.

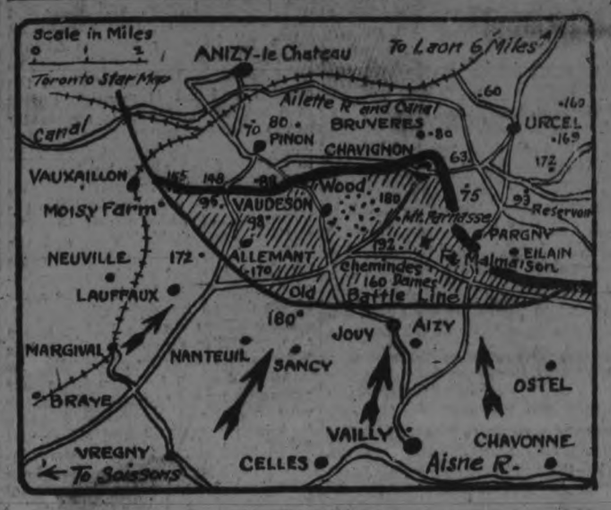
Pte. Ebbs Is Congratulated By Gen. Odlum

"Cannot Afford to Lose Men Possessed of Courage and Determination Such as Yours" Writes Brigadier

The Examiner has several times referred to the experience of Pte. J. W. Ebbs, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, in rescuing a wounded officer and remaining for a week in a cellar behind the German lines. The exploit earned the Peterborough soldier a Military Medal. Recently he received the following letter from Brigadier-General Odium, commanding the 11th Canadian Infantry Brigade:

"My Dear Ebbs,—I am delighted to hear that your remarkable determination and endurance have justly been recognized by the granting of the Military Medal. You held out under conditions of the utmost hardship for six days, when you found yourself cut off from our lines and showed great loyalty to Lieut. McLean in rescuing him and helping him to survive his long trial. In addition to this you remained in the cellar while it was heavily shelled by our artillery, showing that you were ready to face the worst ordeal rather than surrender. I am exceedingly glad that you were eventually rescued not only for your own sake, but because we cannot afford to lose men possessed of courage and determination such as yours."

Union Convention Is Needed To Select Local Candidate



French Advance.

Map indicates the location of the battle front as it was before the latest French attack. The shaded area represents the French gain, which extended to a depth of two and a fifth miles. The villages of Allemant, Vanudesson, and Chavignon, the fort of Malmaison, the western end of the Chemin Des Dames, and Mount Parnasse, all of which were captured, appear on the map along with the principal roads.

Premier Borden Asks All Supporters of Union Whether Conservative, Liberal, Labour or Independent to Get Together and Choose Candidate.

HOW ABOUT PETERBORO'?

The official statement from Premier Borden, given out for publication last night, asking that all supporters of Union Government whether Conservative, Liberal, Labour or Independent, get together and endeavour to agree on candidates acceptable to the Government, puts the issue squarely up to the electors of West Peterboro.

The Conservative party organ in Peterboro has been claiming Capt. J. H. Burnham as the Union candidate. Capt. Burnham was nominated over two years ago at a party convention. There has been no attempt to get the views of Liberals or independents who favour Union Government on the question of a candidate.

Premier Borden asks the supporters of Union to get together, and select a suitable man. The logical step now is for representatives of the Conservative, Liberal and Labour Associations to hold a conference and arrange a union convention to choose a win-the-war nominee. There seems no other course open in view of the following from Ottawa:

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—"It is the earnest desire of the Government that in each constituency the supporters of Union Government, whether Conservative, Liberal, Labour or Independent, should confer together and see if they cannot agree upon a candidate who will be acceptable and who may be designated by the Prime Minister as the Government candidate date, for the purpose of the Military Voters' Act."

This appeal has been issued by Sir Robert Borden with a view to avoiding contests in various ridings between candidates favorable to the Government based upon the union of war parties in the country. It is the duty of the Prime Minister, under the Military Voters' Act, to "recognize" the candidate in each electoral district to whom shall be allotted the ballots cast in favor of the Government by soldiers overseas. Should there be more than one supporter of Union Government running in a constituency that task might be a difficult one. Indeed in some cases it might be practically impossible to decide for which contestant the soldiers' vote belonging to a constituency should be counted.

Official Statement.

"The formation of a Union or National Government has changed the political situation throughout Canada, and in many constituencies two or more candidates, Conservative, Liberal or Labor, may desire to run and be recognized as Union government candidates. Under the Military Voters' Act it is the duty of the Prime Minister to designate a candidate in each riding as the government candidate, who thereby may receive the benefit of soldiers' votes, which are given, not for a particular candidate, but for the government. It is the earnest desire of the government that in each constituency the supporters of Union Government, whether Conservative, Liberal, or Independent, should confer together and see if they cannot agree upon a candidate who will be acceptable to, and who may be designated by the Prime Minister as the Government candidate for the purposes of the Soldiers' 'Military Voters' Act."

Mr. Gordon's Views.

That Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is not a representative of the Union Government, is the contention of Mr. G. N. Gordon. The latter contends that as Mr. Burnham was nominated at a party convention long before the formation of the Union Government, it will now be necessary to have a Union convention to nominate a candidate.

172 MEN OUT OF 182 REGISTERED WANT EXEMPTION

Registration Here Under the Military Service Act Continues Slow—Regulations in Regard to Working of the Act Are Published

SOME HEAVY PENALTIES

Unless the Class One eligibles in Peterborough hurry up and register, there is going to be a mad rush in the last few days before Nov. 10th. Up to 11 o'clock this morning only 182 men had registered, ten of them reporting for service and 172 claiming exemption. It is hard to understand why men who have been graded "B," "C" or "E" are not complying with the law and claiming exemption. The present call is only for Category A men and the others have simply to ask for exemption on physical ground, and it will be granted by all the tribunals. Men in other categories than A should waste no time in registering and clearing the way for "A" grade recruits. Only fifteen registered yesterday, and all claimed exemption.

Regulations governing exemption tribunals were issued by the Military Service Council yesterday, and have been despatched throughout the country. The regulations are lengthy and cover no less than 97 different clauses. They lay down the rules on which all tribunals under the Military Act—both local and appeal—will work, the duties and powers of registrars, the appointment of military representatives and finally, make special provision for offences and penalties.

Here are, in brief, the offences cited and the penalties provided therefor:

Refusing or neglecting to attend for medical examination when required by local or appeal tribunal—fine not more than two hundred and not less than twenty-five dollars and imprisonment for not more than three months. Tribunal may further issue a warrant to apprehend the man and compel him to submit to medical examination.

For bribing or attempting to bribe any member of a tribunal, medical board registrar or any person concerned in the administration of the Act—imprisonment for not more than five years and not less than one year. No fine.

Offering Reduction of Wages.

Employers stipulating or offering to stipulate with an employe for reduction of wages in consideration of employer exercising right to claim exemption for employe—fine not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars, or

GAVE QUART OF HIS BLOOD TO SAVE A COMRADE

Pte. A. W. Jones of Peterboro' is Suffering From Weakness as Result of a Heroic Sacrifice for Another Wounded Soldier

ENLISTED WITH 59th

Mr. Jones, 650 Concession Street, has received a letter from the Canadian Red Cross Society, telling of the condition of his son, Pte. A. W. Jones, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion, and who was wounded in France while fighting with the 46th Battalion. While in hospital after being wounded, Pte. Jones sacrificed a quart of his blood to save the life of a wounded comrade.

The letter is as follows:

Dear Sir,

I beg to inform you that Pte. A. W. Jones, 455916, 46th Battalion, is now at Royal Berkshire Hospital, Reading, Berks, England. Our authorized Red Cross visitor has twice recently seen him there. She tells us that he is suffering from weakness as the result of a most splendid action of his. He volunteered to give a quart of his blood to a comrade who would otherwise have died. This was successfully performed.

I am glad to be able to tell you that she says that Pte. Jones is doing well, although progress is rather slow. You may rest assured that he is receiving every attention.

He will be visited regularly, and should he be in need of any comforts other than those supplied by the hospital, we will gladly send them to him from our parcels office. Should you be anxious as to his progress at any time, we will be pleased to make inquiries on your behalf.

Yours very truly,
Constance Scott.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, OCT. 25, 1917

NO PEACE YET.

Lloyd George said in a great speech in London a day or two ago:

"I have scanned the horizon and see no terms in sight which will lead to enduring peace. The only terms now possible would be an armed truce, ending in an even more frightful struggle."

This is somewhat depressing, coming at the beginning of the fourth year of the war. But it shows the invincible determiantion of the allies to keep up the fight till the spirit and power of militarism is absolutely broken and destroyed. And the longer the war lasts the better the prospects of success. The power of the Central Allies is steadily weakening in all its elements, while the power of the Entente Allies is growing. Next year the mighty forces of the United States will be reckonable fatcors in actual fighting, and it is hoped, as it is possible, that the military power of Russia will recover at no very distant date.

The Central powers have all they can do now, and a little more, to meet the forces of the allies, and are steadily being pushed to bay. With the United States a new and formidable element and with possibly Russia; with continual decline of the submarine menace, the outlook for Germany and her allies is darkening ominously.

This is encouragement to make the victory certain, for we all recognize that Lloyd George is right in saying that a present or near peace would be an "armed truce ending in an even more frightful struggle." We can easily see this. All the warring nations have learned the art of waging war in a terribly efficient way. They have perfected new means of destruction so that if another war were to come after a few years' rest, and of course intensive preparation, imagination cannot pitcure the terrible reality of a conflict in which all the combatants, armed to the teeth as they would have to be, and with the terrible enginery of destruction on land and on the sea and in the air, as developed in this war, immensely improved upon—"horror on horror's head accumulating"—the present struggle would be a mere matter of outposts compared with the gigantic horror and immensity of the new agony of warfare. This war must be a finished war —a fight to the finish. This condition constitutes an appeal to us Canadians to keep up our work. We are perhaps only a drop in the bucket as far as numbers are concerned, as far as resources are concerned; but our numbers so far in the fighting lines have been doubled by the valour and resource of our soldiers. We cas do more in the matter of our resources; we are learning to economize; we are training ourselves to greater production in all respects; we are learning to save and sacrifice in the great cause; and—we must "carry on."

It does not seem notoriously extravagant to increase soldiers' pensions forty per cent. when one pork packing company made the capital profit of one hundred per cent. on its capital.

CANADA'S FIRST AND GREATEST THINGS.

The intensity with which nearly half a million Canadian soldiers, and the mass of the Canadian people are throwing themselves into the work of saving Canada, is proof that Canada is worth saving. This is not shown by war work alone, but in part by outstanding achievements to Canada's credit.

Yesterday in Brantford, the Duke of Devonshire unveiled a monument to one of Canada's outstanding achievements, in the form of a monument to Dr. Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, one of the most universal scientific inventions that has its place in varied environments, from the quiet sidelines of the country to the thundering lines of the battle front.

We have done a great many other unique things that are a credit to a country of seven and a half million people. We can boast, if we were given to boasting, of the greatest bridge in the world at Quebec, the sole work of Canadian engineering and structural skill.

We have built in British Columbia, in the Dominion Observatory at Victoria, a telescope which the Scientific American describes as "larger than any telescope now in use, and the largest in the world." It is further described by the same authority as "repreesning the latest advance in astronomical and engineering science. . . the largest, most complete and convenient in operation of any ever built."

Canada can also boast, not only of the largest and most important canals system in existence, but also of having not only the only hydraulic lift-lock on this continent, but the largest in operation in any country. The Scientific American reminds us of another achievement. The new Canadian government railway terminal docks at Halifax are described as "the greatest in the world, and capable of accommodating the largest vessels afloat."

In "first things," the telephone is not alone. Canada was the first country in the world to establish a wireless telephone station, and going a little further back Canada was the first country to send a vessel across the occasion, the "Royal William," in 1834, under its own steam.

It might also be worth while to remind ourselves and outside humanity that Canada has the greatest existing system of electric power development, and that Ontario has, in spite of Judge Latchford's judgment, the greatest municipal Hydro-Electric system in existence, even if it is the hardest thing to keep free from politics.

If Canadians were at all given to bragging, we might boast that Canada has perhaps the greatest money-coining—in ratio to capital—pork packing industry, with the most child-like and bland smile — on four feet; also the greatest cold storage system in the world—the one that holds on the hardest, not to except the greatest cold storage plant, represented by Canada's possession of the only North Pole in this round world, planted deep in Canadian ice and frozen soil, the axle tree on which the northern half of the world spins, and as it spins is fighting the greatest war in human history.

What is the moral difference between a moribund government doling out offices of emolument, and a bankrupt stealthily paying in full a list of preferred creditors?

IS IT A UNION GOVERNMENT?

The despatches tell us that the new Union Government has filled four of the ten Senate vacancies with men representing the partizan following of the Borden Government. The despatch naively states that these appointments were made "in pursuance of arrangements consummated before the Union." If we have a real union, non-partizan Government, what authority has it to carry out the partizan commitments of the old partizan Government—to turn aside from war-winning work to implement the promises made by the Borden Government to reward partizans with seats in the Senate? Surely Sir Robert Borden, in the transition stage between partizan Government and a non-partizan or Union Government, abused his power to the limit by making appointments that consistently with honourable responsibility he had no warrant to make.

If these appointments were necessary in the public interests—in helping win the war—they should have been left to the Union Government. If they were a solatium for surrender of place to admit confiding Liberals to the Cabinet, they might have been left to the Union Government which, as in the case of the new Senators, might have been trusted to implement the partizan bargains of the old partizan Government, without subjecting the transitionery Premier to the charge of ignoring the injunction:

"'Tis well to be off with the old love
Before you are on with the new."

There should be no such crossing of the wires. Some Conservative journals assert that the Union Government has to stand on its own responsibility; that it has its specific work to do—to win the war—and after he war is over the Borden Government will have to give an account of its stewardship; and that the old party situation will return. Then why not leave it at that? Let the Borden Government stew in its juice till after the war, and not use the Union or non-partizan Government to strengthen its position in the Senate—to help in the post-mortem distribution of patronage—decidedly "a new way to pay old debts."

We need not use the Union Government to strenghen the suspicion in the minds of many that the formation of the Union Government was not so much the simon pure product of patriotism as a slant means of promoting popular forgetfulness of the record of the Borden Government. The way the Borden Government's partizan interests and partizan pledges of its degenerate days are being deferred to and cried out by the Union Government seem to offer a sort of excuse to the sitters in the seat of the scornful.

If hell is the proper destination of profits from munitions, by what route shall we bill 100 per centt profits from water-logged bacon?

Weekly Report On Farm Conditions

Potato Crop is Being Harvested —Ploughing is Behind

Potatoes feature the weekly reports submitted on crop conditions to the Ontario Department of Agriculture by the District Representatives. In all sections during the past week farmers have been busy harvesting this important crop, and there are still considerable quantities to be taken pj, in some sections 25 per cent. and in ethers even higher. The yield is reported as being about the average and rot is mentioned only in a few sections, and is apparently not assuming any serious proportions. Prices continue at from $1.25 to $1.50 per bag at local points.

Other farm work receiving attention at the present time includes the taking up of roots, which in most sections have yielded well, and the filling of silos. In a few cases threshing has not yet been completed, but silo filling has been the order of the day in the dairy districts.

Preparations for the 1918 crop are also receiving attention. Some late fall rye is still being sown. Reports fairly well agree that the fall wheat sow some weeks ago is coming along very well, and prospects indicate that both fall wheat and clover will be in good shape to stand the winter. Ploughing, however, has been interfered with by the lateness of the harvest, supplemented by the difficulty in getting experienced ploughmen, and a good open fall will be very necessary in order to get the usual amount of land turned over before the ground freezes up.

Live Stock.—Live stock conditions almost unanimously receive favourable mention. The fodder supply is on the whole very good, both in quantity and quality, and a considerable number of farmers are reported to be taking advantage of the announcement a short time ago by which the freight to carload lots of breeding stock is prepaid to rural Ontario points. Carloads have been shipped from the stockyards to several sections and the farmers are making arrangements to use the fodder to the best advantage.

One representative notes that there are not as many auction sales as usual this fall, and others refer to firm prices where live stock changes hands. At an auction sale in Peel County recently, the lowest price for grade sheep was $23, while pure-bred ewes brought as high as $55. A grade dairy cow was reported as changing hands in another county for $250.

MAY A. BELL MARKS COMPANY

It will be a pleasure for the friends and acquaintances in this city to know that May Bell Marks, the people's favourite actress, will be seen here at the head of the Marks Bros. No. 1 Dramatic Company for a stay af one week with matinees, Wednesday and Saturday.

The name of R. W. Marks is a guarantee to every one that they will witness plays that no other attraction can secure, and that they will be given a production of every play as they are noted for paying special and strict attention to all the details of electrical effects and mountings.

May A. Bell Marks' former appearances will be remembered for her originality, grace and ease, as well as her entirely different conception of the many roles she had portrayed. Never has she been known to play two parts alike, and all times she has received the highest of praise, from both the press and the public, for clever work. She is an actress that is at home in comedy, dramatic or romantic roles. The opening production will be "Was She to Blame?"

Policeman May Accost Men.

The regulations also provide that after the expiry of the time limit for reporting for service or claiming exemption (in the present case, Nov. 10) any man reasonably supposed to be a member of the class or subclass called out may be accosted by any commissioned or non-commissioned military officer or by any police officer and his name and address, place of employment, place and date of birth taken.

"If" the regulation adds, "the officer questioning him has reasonable grounds to believe that the answers are untruthful or evasive he may detain the man and take him before a justice of the peace to be dealt with according to law."

HAVING A GREAT ANCESTOR.

It Would Be All Right if So Many Outsiders Didn't Butt In.

In the American Magazine Sid says:

"A man tackled me for a job the other day. After enumerating his various accomplishments he wound up with a final claim that was intended to impress me with his importance once and for all. He said that he was a direct descendant of Bishop Ump-te-ump, the most learned man of his time in England. I asked what time that was, and he said that it was about 400 years ago. I told him that, allowing twenty-five years for each generation, he must be the sixteenth descendant. 'No; not the sixteenth,' he said, 'but the fifteenth.' 'All right,' I said, 'call it the fifteenth. Now, let's take a sheet of paper and see what your credentials really are. Let's see. You had one father and one mother, two grandfathers and two grandmothers, four great-grandfathers and four great-grandmothers, eight great-great-grandfathers and eight great-great-grandmothers, and so on.'

"Carrying the multiplication back to the fifteenth preceding generation, I showed that at the time the bishop lived my friend, the applicant, had exactly 32,768 ancestors. In other words, the bishop was only one of the 32,768 human beings who were his forbears at that time.

"'You have mentioned the bishop. But what about the other 32,767?' I asked. 'It seems to me that I ought to hear something about them if I am to judge you by the good blood which you say is in you. The bishop was all right. You are lucky to have as much of him in you as you have. But the bishop's stock has been considerably watered. I don't believe he would recognize you. What about the rest?'

"That is the trouble with this heredity game—if you carry it back very far. Old Mother Nature is a wonderful leveler. She won't let geniuses or boneheads breed in a straight line. To the weak she frequently gives a child of incredible talent—to keep the neighbors from getting abusive. To the brilliant and favored of the earth she often presents a choice piece of ivory in the shape of a dull son. Apparently the idea is to carry the race forward together and not to play favorites.

"Another feature of the scheme is that it keeps us all interested. Surprises abound on all sides. There is no telling where the next giant is coming from."

The Word "Data."

When you are tempted to use the word "data" stop and reflect. There is a good word, "facts," that in most cases is better. Remember that "data" is a plural noun. "Datum" is the singular, and it means something that is known already. Data are things given, known. It is a mark of ignorance to say "this data."

A Notable Statue.

In the beautiful city of Buenos Aires is perhaps the only statue in the world erected by white men to a negro. This is the statue of Falucho, a negro soldier who refused to haul down the Argentine flag at the bidding of the Spanish soldiery during the first Argentine revolution and was shot down by the Spanish.

A HINT TO CITY BUYERS

It would be a great convenience to merchants and to the customers themselves, if the residents of the city would think ahead a little and avoid doing any ordering of goods for Saturday delivery, except in case of absolute necessity.

Saturdays the city is filled with country customers, and city people should, as far as possible, leave the field to them. If city people give or 'phone orders for Saturday delivery they will find merchants busy with country customers, and delivery of town orders becomes difficult, especially when scarcity of help reduces delivery staffs. Nearly all city customers, by a little thought can foresee their needs and order what they want before Saturday. By so doing they will get better service and delivery of orders, and do a great favour to the merchants. It seems to be only thoughtlessness that makes many people postpone orders till Saturday. This is war time and we should all work together for each other's good.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

MUSIC HISTORY IGNORED.

It is an extraordinary thing that the only people who know anything about the History of Music are musicians. Yet most people know something about the history of medicine, law and theology. Even in the field of architecture, where there are many well-read persons, no ledge of the several periods and classes of architecture. The history of painting is not a closed book, and the history of literature is co-ordinated with the political history of England for every schoolboy.

Yet there is more romantic and interesting material in the history of music than in any other study dealing with the past. Take one instance. In any piece of music written in four-pulse measure that letter "C" indicates the rhythm. The music-teacher tells us that the "C" means "Common Time." It does—nowadays. Some centuries ago it meant "Imperfect time," and the sign was not a "C" but a half-circle.

The old monks discovered that there were two divisions of Time. Time, two-pulse (or four-pulse) and three-pulse. They were fascinated with the inherent beauty of three-pulse or waltz rhythm, so fascinated that it reminded them of the Trinity, three Persons in One God. Therefore they called this form of rhythm "Perfect" and put a circle at the beginning of the music as an arbitrary sign to signalize that rhythm. The two-pulse or four-pulse rhythm they called imperfect, and being logical in their day and generation, expressed the idea by a half-circle. It remained for some genius to put a dot on the upper part of it and assume that the sign was a "C."

There is not a sig of any kind, not a note, a line, in a ew bars of modern printed music which is without its interesting story Most of us, unfortunately, seem to imagine that the one international an universal language sprang full aned into being. On the contrary, itwas the production of long and ardous study, sometimes for hundreds of years.

THE POWER OF THE MILITARY BAND.

The rookie descring to his folks a day's camp duti is told them how tired, weary, footsore and disgusted they were with the gruelling, wearing, tearing game, then came the climax in an order for parade and then a queer thing happened.

We heard the band in the distance—our band. I always have written you what a corker it is. Well this time, it beat anything I ever heard all hollow. You know how any band music always gets me,—makes me ngle all the way from the top of my ull down. Well, here we were, the hole blessed weary crew of us who ad been spitting venom just a minte ago, grinning across at each other and making for it. And gosh, what parade that was! Walk? I could have walked to China and back again with music in my ears. Tired? Who said tired? I wish you people could appreciate the feeling a fellow gets when there are hundreds keeping time to the rolling rhythm of a band that knows its music. You fell that you belong, that you're one of a group and that you're all there for one purpose, one, do you get me? It was over in a short while and we were to bed just as tired and weary as we had been before only what a difference in feeling there was about it! A fellow knew the 'why' of his being so knocked out and appreciated what there was in that which had before seemed the madness of the whole thing.

"We found out later that the captain, the good old scout, had given special orders to the leader of the band to put some ginger into the music. And, by the Lord Harry, if I ever get there that's what I'm going to do, make men get the goods across, but have them to it to music.

MUSIC—PART AND PARCEL OF RELIGIOUS LIFE

Varied as are the different conceptions of music, there is no argument as to its power of good. Carlyle said music is a kind of inarticulate, unfathomable speech, which leads us to the edge of the infinite. Mozart called it the harbinger of eternal melody. Luther avowed it was next to theology, while Herbert Spencer referred to it as the fine art, which more than any other ministers to human welfare. But, however, it may be defined, it has for long been closely associated with religious services. No evangelists attempt to reach their hearers without the aid of The Message in song.

There are examples, outstanding examples, of careless men who have wandered far from the teachings of their mothers, where every attempt to bring them back failed, until a song penetrated to the depth that mere spoken words could not reach. Music has been the means of changing many a life.

It was not generally thought that Handel was a deeply religious man, yet we are told that he was frequently deeply moved when setting music to sacred words. He was found in tears when writing that great aria "He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." He said himself that in writing the "Hallelujah" chorus he reached such a state of spiritual emotion that he "did think he saw heaven open, and the great God Himself."

Music to-day is of inestimable value in the work of the churches. It has to be in the natural order of things, for music at its source is sacred.

THE APPEAL OF THE WALTZ.

Originated in France—New Dances Do Not Lessen in Popularity.

Amid all the recent books—fiction, war subjects and miscellaneous—the old standard novels and poets still hold a large place. In spite of the hundreds of passing popular songs that come into being each month, the standard ballads and drawing room songs are not condemned to a hastily dug grave. In the same way with the comparatively recent birth of the Turkey Trot, Maxixe, Tango, Bunny Hug and Fox Trot, et al, the old established waltz has not been shoved off the dance programme.

It will continue to live on. The waltz is really of ancient origin though that fact seems to have no detrimental effect upon its popularity. There seems to be something about the formation of the waltz that appeals to the sense of rhythm born in man and it appeals to the people of all ages. A consultation of references on the waltz show that no exact date can be ascribed to the introduction of the waltz in England from France. In 1800 there was published a caricature of a couple, with the note that "this was intended for a quiz upon the then foreign dance, waltzing." Again, in 1810 the same artist published another sketch, "La Walse, Le Bon Genre," with the note "The walse was at this time new in England and just coming into fashion."

The fame, or rather notoriety of the new dance had, however, reached England some years previously. Dr. Burney had seen it danced in Paris in 1780, and was moved to write,—"How uneasy an English mother would feel to see her daughter so unfamiliarly treated and still more to note the obliging manner in which the freedom is returned by the females."

Raikes in his journal declares that "no event ever produced so great a sensation in English society as the introduction of the English waltz," about the year 1811. He relates how the mornings, which had hitherto been dedicated to lounging in the park, were now absorbed at home in practising the figures of a French quadrille, or whirling a chair around the room to learn the step and measure of the German waltz.

It is a debated point whether the waltz originated in France or Germany, whether it came from the French "La Volta," or the German national dance, the "Landler." According to French authorities, "La Volta," was simply the waltz a trois temps. Provence was its birthplace, and it was first introduced at the court of Henry II., at Fontainebleau in 1555 by the Comte de Saulte, who is said to have invented it, for many called it La Volta de Saulte, and the name is suitable both because of the etymology of the word and the character of the dance.

It enjoyed a great run throughout France, and even penetrated to Scotland, where it met with furious opposition, one writer averring that its importation into France had been effected by the power of witches. Mary Stuart once exhibited her agility in this dance, but she was careful not to repeat the experiment and this was about the last heard of it.

The contention of Germany is that the first waltz tune appeared in 1670 popular song called "O du lieber Augustin." From Germany the dance made its way to Vienna, and was introduced into the opera while by and by it found its way to France, whence it came to England—"The insidious waltz, this imp of Germany, brought up in France."

The waltz when first danced in London, was a slow movement a trois temps, and the early English waltz compositions were very poor. Strauss came to London in 1837 and his waltz music created a perfect furore. It killed the old trois temps waltz and the deux temps usurped its place. Now that the fascination of the waltz is so accepted a thing, it is difficult to realize the commotion its introduction caused.

Those who attended the church tea meeting at Westwood on Monday evening, report a large turnout and a good time.

Hastings was visited by a most disastrous fire early Tuesday morning, and, as a consequence, the whole plant belonging to the Hastings Tanning Company, Hastings, is a mass of smoking ruins. The fire originated on the second floor of the building, and is supposed by some to be the result of an over-heated shaft. The night watchman had been through the building about three-quarters of an hour before it was discovered, and found everything all right, but about 3 o'clock the flames were bursting out and threatening destruction. He at once ran to the nearest telephone and aroused the inmates who quickly called up their neighbours. The fire alarm was sounded and soon the streets were alive with citizens. The brigade hastened to the scene and soon had a stream of water playing on the building, but it could not be held in check and the entire plant was wiped out. Some forty or fifty men will be thrown out of employment. The loss to the Company will be thousands of dollars, partially covered by insurance.

The fire brigade deserve great credit for the splendid work which they did in preventing the fire from spreading to the adjacent dwellings. It was at first thought that the roller room (a separate building) might be saved, but it was found to be impossible and everything is wiped out entirely. Rain has been falling during the day which has been helpful in preventing the fire from spreading. Representative members of the company from Kitchener are expected to arrive in town this (Tuesday) evening, to view the situation.

THE ASSORTMENT CONTAINS MANY REPRODUCTIONS OF FINE OLD ORIENTAL PATTERNS

Long, long ago the masterful, intricate patterns, superb colour harmonies and fine textures employed in the making of rugs brought the early traders to the Far East For centuries the public's appetite for these famous old patterns has been unsatisfied. To-day in houses where the presence of quality is a foregone conclusion you will find a profusion of these Oriental floor coverings. We were fortunate this Fall in securing copies—in Wilton—of many of the most celebrated designs, among them is the Kirmanshah that has survived for over fifteen hundred years.

A Seamless Wilton Rug developed in rich tones of ecru, terra cotta, orange and black. The result is a beautiful Persian trellis pattern that will adapt itself to the environments of a living room, dining room or drawing room. Moderately priced at $64.00.

A Wilton Rug in the famous Kirmanshah design. As the name would signify it is characteristically Persian. The border is executed in old blue, dull green and mullberry; the centre is deep rose and decked with a large medallion that corresponds with the border, in colour harmony. Size 3 x 4. Fringed on both ends. Priced at $90.00.

A Persian panelled pattern in a deep pile Wilton, that could be most attractively displayed in a living room. A most perfect harmony of colours is employed, namely light and dark ecru, delft blue and black, The honor as to which is the predominating shade is equally divided between brown and ecru. Size 3 x 4. Price is moderate to say the least, at $55.00.

PREMIER BORDEN'S CAMPAIGN

First Gun to be Fired in Halifax —Meanwhile Country is Waiting For Sir Wilfrid's Manifesto

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterboro Examiner.)

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—Sir Robert Borden will start his campaign during the first week of November. The first gun will be fired at Halifax, and included among the Premier's associates on the platform will probably be Hon. Arthur Meighen, Hon. Frank Carvell and Hon. N. W. Rowell. The writs are to be issued the first of the month, just as soon as the Western Ministers return from their visit to the prairie provinces.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his part is conferring with his Lieutenants in Montreal. Yesterday Hon. George M. Graham took part in the deliberations. Sir Wilfrid's manifesto, it is believed, will be issued almost immediately after his return. Of all the manifestos which he has delivered since 1886 this is probably being looked forward to with the greatest interest.

News trickling in from the various constituencies to Ottawa indicates that so far few straight union candidates have been nominated. Party fights appear to predominate.

There is a merry fight at Ottawa; Three Laurier Liberal candidates are in the field. They are "Hal" McCiverin, former M. P. for Ottawa; Auguste Lemieux, K. C., brother of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, and Horace Chevrier, partner of Senator Belcourt.

For the Conservatives, Messrs. Fripp and Chabot, the sitting members, are again in the field, and are claiming the Unionist endorsement The Conservative convention takes place to-morrow night. Napoleon Champagne, M.P.P., is out as a win-the-war Conservative, and in a letter to the press to-day complains of the fact that the convention room will only hold 300 people whereas the membership of the Conservative association is 300.

The abolition of patronage by the new government will have an important effect upon the Conservative candidates, who for the past six years have been the greatest purveyors of patronage in the Dominion.

In the vicinity of Ottawa party fights will be waged with Laurierites and Unionists in the field in Russell, Prescott, probably in both Renfrews and very likely in Carleton. At the Ottawa Conservative convention to-morrow night an effort wil be made to change the name of the asociation to the Ottawa Unionist win-the-war Association.

Medal For A Peterboro' Man

William O'Rourke Has Saved the Lives of Seven People

Some time ago it came to the attention of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., while in Ottawa, that William A. O'Rourke of Peterboro, deaf and dumb, had performed an especially heroic action deserving of recognition. Mr. O'Rourke had called upon Mr. Burnham in connection with some matters and also his employment in the Government Printing Bureau at Ottawa, and was asked about the good deeds he had performed. It appears that Mr. O'Rourke was appointed by the Government as a delegate to the Deaf and Dumb Congress held at Seneca Lake, New York, last year, and while there he rescued at the risk of his own life, two women from drowning. Altogether Mr. O'Rourke has rescued seven people.

Mr. Burnham brought the matter to the attention of the Royal Humane Society. A great difficulty was experienced in getting Mr. O'Rourke to furnish evidence concerning his heroic deeds. He did not wish any reward, and was content to do his duty. This extraordinary measure of self sacrifice nevertheless made it necessary in justice to the public to make some recognition of Mr. O'Rourke's deeds.

This has come to hand in the form of a bronze medal suitably engraved and bearing Mr. O'Rourke's name. Mr. Burnham will forward the medal to Premier Borden, who will, no doubt, be pleased to present it to Mr. O'Rourke.

Mr. O'Rourke, while in the city, was an employee of the Examiner.

To Have Complexion That Men Admire

A man may admit, with great sophistication, that powder and rouge are necessary aids to beauty," says a well-known writer, "yet deep in his heart he dreams of the woman whose loveliness needs no artificial touching up Women who appreciate men, who give consideration to the masculine viewpoint, avoid using anything that might indicate their beauty is not all their own.

"Such women in increasing number are acquiring the mercolized wax habit. By applying the wax at night as they would cold cream, washing it off in the morning they secure, and maintain, entirely natural complexions. Their faces exhibit no evidence of having been beautified. Nothing is added to the old complexion the latter, ingrowd, is discarded. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, an ounce is sufficient, absorbs the discolored outer skin, gradually, almost imperceptibly. The fresh, clear, satiny tenderskin which appears, bears a healthy youthful bloom not comparable with the artificial color.

"The Eye, Ear and Nose" of a Suit

Doctors who specialize in their practice become expert in their particular specialty, and men and women seek them out when they are afflicted with the malady to which the doctor has devoted his study and experience.

Thirty tailors contribute to the making of each individual suit; and each tailor is a specialist, having become expert in the making of his specialty.

One man makes collars.
Another makes pockets.
A third makes linings.
A fourth fits the lining.
A fifth shapes the shoulders.
A sixth sews in sleeves—so on.

And thus the thirty specialists produce a Semi-ready Coat, and the Chief Examiner pronounces it good before there is sewn in the pocket the "Shield that Shields."

District Convention Was Great Success

Instructive Addresses and Profitable Discussion at Annual Gathering of Representatives From Epworth Leagues and Young People's Societies.

OFFICERS ELECTED

At the annual district convention of the Methodist Epworth Leagues and Young Peoples' Societies, held yesterday in the Trinity Church Sunday School Rooms, the election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Rev. B. J. Greatrix.
President—Rev. C. W. Barrett.
1st Vice-Pres.—J. Kennett.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Thompson.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Miss Jean Buck.
4th Vice-Pres.—Mr. Fred Lewers, Fraserville.
5th Vice-Pres.—Miss Pearl Burnham.
Secretary—Rev. J. G. McKee.
Treasurer—Mr. H. Nellist.
Summer School Representative—Miss Brooks.
Conference Representative — Rev. W. Higgs.
Reporter Youth and Service—Rev. W. H. Clarke.

Nine Districts.

Nine of the twelve branches of the Peterborough District sent representatives, these from Trinity, Mark Street, St. James, and George Street Churches; Lakefield, Warsaw, Fairview, Millbrook, and South Monaghan. The reports from these branches were extremely encouraging and indicated progress and increased interest in the Leagues.

Best Meeting.

An interesting feature of the programme was the report given by each league on what each considered their best meeting. This brought out some valuable hints to all, and was supplemented by a round table conference, conducted by Rev. Mr. Higgs, on League Methods.

Mrs. Stephenson's Address.

The principal speech of the afternoon session was an exceedingly interesting talk on "The Epworth League in Relation to the World-wide Kingdom of Christ," by Mrs. (Dr.) Stephenson, wife of the General Secretary of the Forward Movement. Dr. Stephenson's experiences in the mission field have been many and varied. Starting in 1898, the doctor took a trip to the Prairies in the West, where the first summer school for the training of missionaries was started. This movement grew, and in 1911 a similar school was founded at Victoria College, Toronto, with an attendance of 43. The influence of missions and necessity Dr. Stephenson illustrated by the fact that one man home on furlough from his activities in China communicated with the War Office as to whether his services were more needed in Flanders than in the mission field, and received the decided answer that his services in China were ten times more valuable to humanity than in the war zone.

Evening Session.

At the evening session, which was opened with some splendid stereoptican views of Chinese life, explained by Mrs. Stephenson. A musical programme, including solos by Miss Etta Kempt and Miss Pearl Johnson, was given, and an address by Rev. Mr. Thomas.

Two Elements.

"There are," Dr. Thomas said, "two elements in the human character—the inner and outer. These," he said, "are closely allied, one being the fountain from which the other springs. One includes the physic phenomenon, the other the words and deeds from which the world judges us. We are constantly giving expression to the inner. We are interested in the success, advance, and all activities of our Allies in Flanders. There are inner motives which make all the visible things possible.

"In the hearts of the foes is unquenchable hate and greed—in the Allies, a love of liberty and devotion to the highest principles. So behind the death grapple are these feelings in the inner life.

Evident in Every Sphere.

"This law of two elements is evident in every sphere. The impulses which are peculiarly Christian will find expression in the daily life. It is essential to young people that each should be in the right relationship to God and fully consecrated to His service. Young people should start with that foundation, and give expression to it in their daily actions.

Four Phases.

"There are four phases in Christian experience: The complete acknowledgement of God, this takes courage to give expression to; religious habits, such as consistent church attendance, prayer, etc.; separation from sin, and readiness for service.

Resolution of Sympathy.

A resolution of sympathy to Rev. J. Gladstone McKee was passed in the death of his wife, which occurred this week.

HOME WITHOUT COAL.

Mother Had Given Daughter $15.00 to Buy a Supply, But Where Did the Money Go?

A woman was recently reported to Alderman Dobbin as being without coal or wood and therefor a worthy subject for relief. Investigation by Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney showed that there was really no fuel in that house. The Adjutant foraged some wood and made a fire. He then learned that the woman had given her fourteen-year-old daughter five dollars a month for three months to be deposited with Alderman Dobbin in payment for coal. But the coal hadn't come and there was no record at the Patriotic Fund Office of the money having been left there. Adjutant McElhiney forgot to ask whether the girl had brought home receipt slips from Mr. Dobbin, but as the stubs at the office do not record this woman's fifteen dollars there is no doubt that the receipts were never made out for the reason that the daughter did not bring in the money. What she did with it is another question. This family should have received fifteen dollars worth of coal and would have received it if the money had reached the Patriotic Fund Office. Further enquiries will doubtless reveal how the girl spent the $15.00.

The Disease Of Anthrax

Disease is Liable to Attack Human Beings as Well as Cattle

The disease of anthrax occurs among sheep, horses, cattle and other herbivora or grain eating animals. No animal of any of these classes is capable of resisting anthrax infection providing suitable conditions obtain. The disease is also liable to attack human beings, although it does not appear epidemically in man. Many cases have been reported where men have died as a result of contracting anthrax from the skinning of an infected animal, or from handling the wool or skins of animals that have died from the disease.

This information is brought out in Bulletin No. 23 of The Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, entitled "Anthrax." The bulletin is written by Dr. Chas. H. Higgins, Pathologist, and deals with the subjects of occurrence, methods of infection, infection, diagnosis, etc. It is pointed out that the carcass of the mal that has had the disease should be destroyed by fire, care being taken that all discharges and litter about the animal be burned with it, even to the halter that the animal has been wearing. Under no circumstances should the animal be skinned, as this is a most dangerous procedure. Neither should it be dragged over the farm. Deep burial is sometimes resorted to, but it is not nearly so satisfactory as burning.

Veterinarians, farmers and others who have reason to suspect the existence of anthrax are compelled under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, to promptly notify the Minister of Agriculture, the Veterinary Director-General, or the nearest Veterinary Inspector.

Many Splendid Speakers To Give Addresses At Sunday School Convention

Gathering Here Next Week Promises to Be of Unusual Interest and Importance — Many Delegates Coming.

PERSONAL SKETCHES

The 52nd Annual Convention of the Ontario Sunday School Association, Section B, of which will be held at Peterborough on October 30th and 31st and November 1st, in the George Street Methodist Church. The programme promises to be of unusual interest and profit, judging by the many splendid speakers and Sunday School workers who are announced to speak.

The programme begins on Tuesday morning, October 30th, at ten o'clock, a session of prayer, greeting from the president, welcomes to the city, and responses. In the afternoon at 1:45 in General Session, the keynote address will be given by Rev. T. Anson Halpenny of Ottawa, theme, "Deep Calling Unto Deep." At 3:15 the Convention adjourns to parallel sessions for the Elementary, the Secondary and the Adult Divisions. These parallel sessions resume on Wednesday morning, occupying all the forenoon, an Administration Division for Sunday School officers being added. The General Session of the convention will resume Tuesday evening in the Convention Church, the George Street Methodist.

The next General Session is on Wednesday afternoon, with twin meetings Wednesday evening for men and for women.

From 10 o'clock till 12 on Thursday morning Denominational Parallel Sessions have right of way, and on Thursday afternoon and evening united General Sessions.

Detail souvenir programmes, badges, song books, and other delegate courtesies are furnished to all registered delegates. Registration fee for the entire convention is $1.00. Registration will commence Monday evening in the Convention Church.

Among the speakers will be found: Rev. T. Anson Halpenny, Ottawa; Mrs. Palmer G. Burgess, Westboro; Rev. R. S. Mason, Rev. J. C. Robertson, Rev. S. T. Bartlett, of Toronto, Mr. J. Arthur Jackson, Gananoque, Rev. C. W. DeMille, Napanee; H. H. Burrows, Guelph.

PERSONAL SKETCHES.

Prof. E. O. Excell.

Many, many years ago Sam Jones found Mr. E. O. Excell, then a comparatively young man, conducting a choir in a very humble quarter. Somehow he realized especial gifts in Mr. Excell, and sought him as an associate. For many years the two were associated. It was while leading the singing in Sam Jones' great mass meetings of thousands of people that Mr. Excell got his skill in leading large choruses. There is no question about it, he is without equal, all things being considered.

Mr. Excell is to lead the music at the International Convention at Buffalo next June. He has been with the Ontario Sunday School Association at Ottawa, Owen Sound, Hamilton, and the Golden Jubilee at Toronto. While at the Owen Sound Convention, Professor Excell met Prof. C. C. Laugher, now of Bowmanville, and at Mr. Excell's request, Professor Laugher will play the piano, accompanying the organ, for the music at the Convention.

Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner.

Mrs. Bryner has had the longest public career in the Sunday School field of any woman on the continent. More than twenty years ago she began to be used by the Illinois Sunday School Association. Her excellence soon brought her into demand, and she visited different parts of Canada, as well as many parts of the States, before 1900. Since that time most of her work has been with the staff of the International Sunday School Association, first as general field worker, then for nine years Superintendent of the Elementary Division. No member that has ever been on the International staff, or is now on it, has as wide a grasp of the full range of Sunday School problems as Mrs. Bryner. Her late sister, Mrs. Zillah Foster Stevens, of Alton, Ill, deserves the credit for organizing and launching the Temperance Department of the International Sunday School Association. They were famous sisters.

Mr. R. A. Waite.

Mr. Waite is credited with having sent more boys, that is influenced more boys, to go to College than any other man in North America. If this is true, the occasion was furnished him during the nine years spent as Superintendent of the Religious Work Department, Boys' Division, of the International Y.M.C.A. While engaged thus, he spent a winter in the campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement some seven or eight years ago. Later on he resigned from the public work, and took a pastorate in a Congregational Church in Lincoln, Nebraska, but he could not be confined to one place, and during the present year was induced to accept the position of Associate Superintendent of the Secondary Division (Teen Age) of the International Sunday School Association. Mr. Waite's father is a continent famous architect, with two monuments to his credit in Toronto, the Parliament Buildings of Ontario in Queen's Park, and the Canada Life Building, on King street.

Mr. J. S. Durham.

From a busy life as General Merchant, Greensburg, Kentucky, Mr. Durham was called by the Kentucky Sunday School Association for activities in connection with that Association's supervising the Visitation work. His success therein caused the International Sunday School Association to induce him nine years ago to give his entire time to them, during which time he has conducted Visitations reaching forty-seven millions of people. He is at present arranging a Visitation in the City of Toronto, with outreaches to Hamilton and Kitchener.

Rev. A. MacGillivray, D.D.

An interesting feature of the Peterborough Convention will be the reminiscences of Dr. MacGillivray, covering a period of fifty years of service in Sunday School work. Dr. MacGillivray began in his teens as a teacher of a little class, and has never been out of the service. Though he is far from being in appearance the old man that such a service would indicate, he is pastor and official head of one of the largest Sunday Schools in Canada, Bonar Presbyterian, Toronto. His home and early work were in Glengarry County. He was for a number of years pastor of St. John's Presbyterian Church in Brockville.

German Prisoners Have Escaped

Canadian Press Despatch:

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 25.—Ten German sailors, interned with several hundred others, escaped through a tunnel under the barracks. Orders have been sent out to bring them in "dead or alive."

Music & Drama

The old favourites, Guy Brothers Minstrels, whose coming to Peterboro each autumn is as regular as the falling of the leaves about the same time, were the attraction at the Grand last night, and were welcomed by a large audience.

George Guy, Chas. Guy, "Happy" Benway, Harry Prince and other well known performers, were with the company, while a few new faces were noticed around the circle. An innovation was the work of Miss Lillian Guy as interlocutor. The vocal numbers were not as good as usual, although "Happy" Benway scored heavily. Arnold and Hill contributed a splendid dancing act to the olio, and the Morales Brothers did some spectacular work on the flying swings.

The veteran Geo. Guy, introduced his old time bass solo with good effect, in the second part of the programme. The work of Guy Brothers' orchestra throughout was most pleasing.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

Editor of The Examiner:

In the Examiner of last Monday, an account is given of a visit of a deputation of the Labour party to Mr. G. N. Gordon, with reference to the party platform.

One item in their programme is of great importance to our city and its suburbs, viz., the "free and compulsory education" of our children. Mr. Gordon, it was stated, fully endorsed this point, as well as the rest of the subjects mentioned.

This movement on the part of the Labour party deserves the best thanks of every right minded person, for there are a large number of children, especially in our adjoining districts, who do not attend any kind of a day school, and their parents seem not to trouble themselves on that account.

This fact stands out very prominently as regards North Monaghan.

In the district enclosed by Lansdowne and North Monaghan roads, a number of young children are to be seen daily roaming about the streets during school hours, and it is known that some of them have not attended a day school during the past twelve months. This fact surely does not reflect credit on either the parents or the educational authorities of that district council.

To allow children to grow up into manhood as illiterates, will not help to make Canada a great and prosperous country. It is a crime on the part of both parents and the district council to allow such a state of affairs to exist. For one thing they condemn those children to pass the rest of their lives as labouring men and women, unfit to hold any position, where the very rudiments of arithmetic, not to mention anything else, is required.

Let those that be in power wake up to this fact. As a start, let them appoint a school attendance officer, with power to summon before our tribunals those parents who wilfully neglect their children as regards their education.

If it will be answered that North Monaghan children are not allowed to attend King Edward school and that May's school is too far for the youngest children to go, especialy in the winter months, let the district council arrange for a suitable building in the centre of that district to be used as a school during the winter season. This can be done. If they neglect to do their plain duty in this respect, let the ratepayers, and especially the parents, combine and bundle the present members of the council out of office at the next election, and put in their stead men who have the love of country and the good of children at heart. Let the council remember that if they wish to see the children grow up a respectable and prosperous trades people, and a credit to Canada, they must educate them.

Civilians Are Being Removed From Kronstadt

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 25.—The evacuation of the civil population of the naval base of Kronstadt has begun.

The removal of civilians from Kronstadt, which is the most important Russian naval base, probably is a military measure. The evacuation of Reval, another important port on the Gulf of Finland, was reported last week.

Major Davidson's Chaplain Work In France Appreciated

The many friends of Rev. Canon Davidson, of St. John's, will be pleased to learn that as Major Davidson, chaplain, he is doing his duty in his war zone work with the same fidelity and efficiency tha marked his life in Peterborough. The Examiner is able to publish the following letter from the officer-in-chief of the Canadian chaplain service in France:

Hon. Major J. C. Davidson,
No. 3 Canadian Stationary Hospital,

Dear Major Davidson,—Thank you very much for your report of work for the month of August.

I am very sorry to hear of your illness again and I sincerely hope that you will make a complete recovery. I am most anxious that you should be able to continue at No. 3 Stationary Hospital, for I do not know anyone who is doing better work than you in France. You have such a very clear idea of what a chaplain's work really is, and you make the fullest use of your opportunities to perform it. I know you have been a very great help to every soldier who has received your ministrations and attention, and my earnest wish is that you may be able to continue this good work.

With best wishes, believe me,
Your very sincerely,
A. H. McGreen,
Hon. Lt-Col. A.D.C.S. C.C.

KAISER NOT YET DECIDED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John Grandens.)

BERLIN, Via London, Oct. 25.—Kaiser Wilhelm has not yet made his decision as to the new Chancellorship.

The Berlin press to-day was filled with an exhaustive discussion of the whole cabinet crisis with varying guesses as to the outcome. The Kaiser, it was stated, is studying the situation in detail and does not desire to continue the friction between Chancellor Michaelis and the various political groups longer than necessary.

The newspaper Tagelische Rundschau to-day asserted that Chancellor Michaelis does not regard his resignation as required by the present conditions.

TEACHERS HOLDING THEIR ANNUAL CONVENTION

Interesting Papers Read at This Morning's Session in the Public Library—County Teachers Also Met.

TO-NIGHT'S ADDRESS

The teachers of the city of Peterborough met in convention in the lecture room of the Public Library at 9.30 this morning. The roll showed a full attendance. After the usual business was finished two papers were given. Miss L. C. Cadwell, in a very interesting and profitable paper on, "Nature Study in City Elementary Schools," showed that the place of this important branch was undoubtedly entitled to a place on school curriculum, and that teachers, when they realize its full value in the after life of pupils will rise more adequately to the presentation of it. The suggestion along methodical lines was unusually good, also the exhibit of actual work in nature study.

Miss H. Moffat, B.A., in a clever and forceful address on "The Place of Household Science in Elementary School Curriculum," showed that the home in many cases was not rising to its responsibilities. Since the prosperity of the home governs the rise and fall of nations, too much emphasis cannot be given to fit girls for the two great problems of home—cleaning and cooking. If these two basic principles of home life are lacking no better place can it be made right than in the youth of to-day through the medium of the school. By raising the standard of homes through a study of house hold science, the benefits are both economic and patriotic.

To-night Chancellor McCrimmon, of McMaster University, will give an address in the Collegiate Hall on "The British Empire."

The programme for to-morrow is as follows:

Programme.

Bread Machine Too Generous And Sometimes Short

Has Cost the Baker Quite a Sum of Money By Giving Over-weight Bread—The Public Has Benefitted

Magistrate Dumble this morning dismissed a complaint against Wm. Stock & Son of selling short-weight bread. In his defence Mr. H. W. Stock stated that the dividing machine which turns out the loaves from the dough, had been working irregularly and was actually making the loaves too large. A new machine costing $800, had been ordered, and had just arrived. This will be installed at once and will mean a saving to the company.

Police Sergeant Reid, who was recently appointed bread inspector, laid the charge. He stated that he examined five large loaves at N. Routley's store at the corner of Park and Brock streets, on Oct. 22nd, and had found them seven ounces short in the aggregate. Twelve large loaves at the Stock bakery were found to be all correct. Five loaves at Puttick's store were seven ounces short.

There was some question in Mr. Routley's evidence as to whether the bread weighed by Sergt. Reid, was Stock's, or not.

Mr. Stock's Evidence.

Mr. H. W. Stock said he had been in the baking business for 12 years. He employed 18 men and had a monthly pay rool of $500. Work begins a 8 p.m. and is finished at 6 a.m.

"A baking will average 13 or 14 batches during the night. Delivery is made the next morning. Bread loses in weight from the time it is made. From morning until 3 p.m. it will show a shrinkage due to evaporation. We allow 3 oz. on a 1½ lb. loaf for shrinkage. A machine divides the dough automatically and is tested very frequently. It puts out 48 loaves a minute. If a short loaf appears the dough is thrown back into the machine."

Mr. Stock stated that something had gone wrong with the machine that disturbed its accuracy. Expert mechanical help was called in to adjust it but it was injured to such an extent that further attention was required.

"It caused us to take special care to secure correct weighing. I check the results every morning. The right quantities are given to the machine, but it is turning out less loaves than it should. That would mean that the loaves are coming out larger than they should be. We ordered a new machine (a divider) that will cost $800, but it is not yet installed, owing to the fault of the manufacturer caused by labour shortage. One of our skilled men has spent much time in fruitless efforts to adjust the machine but without the desired results."

James Dutton, superintendent of the bakery, stated that some loaves from the machine had weighed as much as 3½ lbs. A batch of bread is 620 loaves from 7 bags of flour and other ingredients. "We recently put in dough to make 620 loaves and the batch amounted to only 580 loaves. The 40 missing loaves went into those turned out and some persons got that much more bread. We weighed that bread and found nearly every loaf over weight. Our batches at the present time are averaging 600 loaves instead of 620. The people are getting the lost bread in larger loaves.

"It is possible that the shortage in some loaves may be accounted for as a result of the machine's operation, which gives in most cases too large a loaf. Mr. Stock is the loser and he is doing his best to have the machine removed and a new one put in to save himself from loss and to prevent misunderstanding by the people who may occasionally get a loaf a trifle light."

Magistrate Dumble, in dismissing the case, said: "I adjudge that this complaint has arisen from the faultiness of the divider machine which is working untruly, and as Mr. Stock is the loser and is urgently trying to get in a new divider, which has just been delivered by the manufacturer, I discharge this complaint feeling confident that if there is any just cause of complaint it is the result of an accident and will be speedily adjusted."

38,000,000 MEN NOW BEARING ARMS IN WAR.

27,500,000 of This Number are on the Side of the Allies, According to War Dept. Figures.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—At least 38,000,000 men are bearing arms in the war—27,500,000 on the side of the Allies and 10,600,000 on the side of the Central Powers, according to latest War Department compilations from published reports in various countries. These figures do not include naval personnel strength, which would raise the total strength to several millions.

Against Germany's 7,000,000, Austria's 3,000,000, Turkey's 300,000, and Bulgaria's 300,000 are arrayed the following armed forces: Russia, 9,000,000; France, 6,000,000; Great Britain, 5,000,000; Italy 3,000,000; Japan, 1,400,000; United States, more than 1,000,000; China, 541,000; Roumania, 320,000; Serbia, 300,000; Belgium, 300,000; Greece, 300,000; Portugal, 200,000; Montenegro, 40,000; Siam, 36,000; Cuba, 11,000; and Liberia, 400.

Military experts do not regard these figures as entirely accurate, but believe they represent in round numbers the comparative strengths of the contending armies as published recently. The War Department has many confidential reports on the forces of the Allies and considerable data concerning enemy armies, but this information is not made public for military reasons.

Germany and Austria have made every effort to conceal the precise numbers of their armies, but careful estimates of Allied military intelligence departments have placed the total at about 10,000,000, with Germany's force more than double Austria's.

ART IN WARFARE.

Color Schemes Used to Deceive the Eyes of the Enemy.

Early in the great world war the young painters in France formed what they called the Bataillon de la Camoufle, a battalion whose duties consist of "making up" guns, autos, shelters and even whole landscapes to deceive the enemy's eyes—the aeroplanes. They impart to a munition depot the innocent appearance of a prairie. The 75's under their hands take on the semblance of old trees. Tree trunks and old carts are transfigured by these artists into formidable batteries on which the hostile fire may spend itself. They color the autos to resemble roads or fields.

The grand chief of the Camouffe is the celebrated decorator Forain, who earned his war cross at the front. Nor is this work without its dangers! The camouflaeur must repeatedly ascend in avions to judge the effect of his work or to decide on the necessary retouching to be done. He must sometimes advance ahead of the first lines during the night to take measurements which will permit him to imitate exactly a certain tree trunk or a part of a crumbled wall in No Man's Land, which must be copied, molded by clever sculptors and armored the same night to serve as shelters for observers.

IRON IN WATER.

The Merest Trace of the Metal Will Impart a Distinct Taint.

What would you consider one of the most powerful agents with which to flavor water? Would it be iron?

A half part per million of iron in water is detectable by taste, and more than four or five parts make a water unpalatable. In some mineral springs iron is the constituent which imparts a medicinal value to the water, but ordinarily it is undesirable.

More than 2.5 parts per million in water used for laundering makes a stain on clothes. Iron must be removed from water from which ice is made or a cloudy discolored product will result. An iron content of over two or three parts per million in water used in the manufacture of paper will stain the paper.

Iron is harmful in water used for steaming, for it is in equilibrium with acids which inside the boiler become dissociated, with the result that the free acids corrode the boiler plates, but the amount of iron carried in solution by most waters is so small that the damage it does to steam boilers generally amounts to little. The removal of iron from water is sometimes easy and sometimes very difficult.

A Little Bit o' Brass.

"It is just a little bit o' brass," laughed a St. Louis girl who keeps house, "but it is a useful little bit. I use it to scrape my dishes before I wash them and particularly my cooking dishes, pots and pans and such things. It can be kept clean so much more easily than one of those wire things or any other arrangement that I have had. It is just a plain, smooth, oblong piece of brass with a small hole in it, and it has smooth edges too. There is nothing to catch or hold any dirt. It does not cut like a knife nor scratch, but removes just what it is supposed to remove and leaves the rest. Moreover, it is not only useful, but decorative, too, hanging here over the sink by the window, where the sunshine makes it look like a little square of gold."

Foundation of Happy Marriage.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer says:

"It was Jane Welsh Carlyle who wrote these words after thirty years of married life:

"'I married for ambition. Carlyle has exceeded all that my wildest hopes ever imagined, and I am miserable.'

"Science has taught us a great many interesting things about race progress and eugenics, but the fundamental principle of eugenics seems to have discovered itself very early in the history of the race. Healthy children are usually those who are born of happy marriages."

PACKING GOLD IN KEGS.

Care Taken In Preparing the Money Metal For Shipment.

When a gold shipment is to be made by ship the necessary number of kegs are taken in a truck to the assay office where they are received at a door in the rear. The gold bars are then placed on a hand truck and rolled to the kegs. In the presence of the agents of the shippers and of the officials of the assay office the bars are packed in the kegs, and sawdust is placed around them to prevent abrasion. When the heads of the kegs have been placed over the packed bars a piece of red tape is stretched across and fastened between the chine and the edge of the head. The seal of the shipping house is then attached to the head and the bottom of each keg.

After sealing the kegs are rolled to the wagon and lifted on. It takes two men to handle each keg, as there are ten bars to a keg, with a total gold weight of about 190 pounds. It may be mentioned that $100,000 weighs in gold about 380 pounds, and $1,000,000 weighs 3,800 pounds. Some time ago one of the officials of an assay office compiled figures showing how much gold a man could actually handle. It is a singular thing that great difficulty is experienced in carrying gold for any distance. The weight seems to be more "dead" than that of other metals, although that may be an illusion.

For instance, the average man could carry 100 pounds of gold one mile without much discomfort. Its value would be about $26,000. A strong man could carry, say, 150 pounds a mile, reaching the end of his journey with just under $40,000. A very powerful man might carry 200 pounds, or nearly $53,000, a mile without exhaustion. Carrying gold is almost as difficult as getting it.

Courage In Elephants.

An elephant with a good mahout gives perhaps the best instance of disciplined courage—courage, that is, which persists in the face of knowledge and disinclination—to be seen in the animal world. They will submit day after day to have painful wounds dressed in obedience to their keeper and meet danger in obedience to orders, though their intelligence is sufficient to understand the peril and far too great for man to trick them into a belief that it is non-existent. No animal will face danger more readily at man's bidding—London Spectator.

True to His Promise.

"William, when we were married you promised to stop smoking."

"So I did, my dear. You will remember that I said to you, holding up three cigars I had in my pocket, 'As soon as I smoke these I'll quit.'"

"Well, you haven't kept your promise."

"Oh, yes, I have. You see those three identical cigars are still unsmoked. I have them in my desk."

A Curious Case.

Some years ago a woman in Brussels was aroused by church bells ringing in consequence of a fire. She had been asleep for nearly seventeen years. When she awoke she was in perfect health and remembered in detail events that had taken place before she fell off into her long nap.

Lengthening the Life of a Chain.

By twisting a hemp rope in and out of the links of a chain that runs over a pulley not only is the noise suppressed, but the life of the chain is lengthened 70 per cent.

MILITARY NEWS

Minister of Finance referred to the able assistance which he received from Mr. W. F. Nickle, of Kingston, who, at the request of the Minister, devoted a considerable part of last session to the matter of pensions legislation, and from Mr. J. K. L. Ross, Col. Labatt, Major Todd, of the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada, and their solicitor, Mr. Archibald, who have been most valuable counsellors in connection with the framing of the new regulations.

An Enniskillen young man presented himself to the Medical Board to-day with an order from the registrar to be examined. He stated that he had gone before the Board at Oshawa and had been placed in A category. He had applied for exemption on the ground that he was a farmer. Afterward he received instructions from the registrar to report at Peterborough for examination and the instructions were accompanied by the necessary transportation. The Local Board is puzzled as to the reason for sending the man here.

SOME OF THE ANTILLES' MEN.

High up on the list of men who were sent to death when a German torpedo sank the American transport Antilles are found Sergeant Otto Kleber, whose next of kin is a father, living in Berlin, and Sergeant Otto Miller, whose next of kin is his mother, living at Aldenburg. Natives of Germany, those men served with honour the country of their adophonour to them! The lives they lived and the deaths they died furnish a complete and convincing answer to the assumption of a trucuient Kaiserism that it has the support or the sympathy of all Americans of German birth. If it has the sympathy or the support of any, they are unworthy the name American.

Further down the list are found a Boyle, an O'Rourke, a Finnegan, a Devine, a Slattery---of Irish descent, but Americans tried and true. Brave in death as in life, as befits their inheritance. How despicable are those traitorous German-Irishmen, masquerading as Americans who are doing what they can do to stab such brave fellows in the back!—New York Herald.

Wood Cannot Be Purchased

Many Appeals to the Charity Department

A mother lying sick in the house, and no wood, is a condition that confronts one Peterborough home. The apparent embargo on the sale of wood is something that has reached alarming proportions. Every day letters are addressed to the Charity Department, complaining of the wood shortage and appealing for a cord or part of a cord of wood to be paid for on delivery.

The woman, who has a sick mother to care for, said she took the matter up with her regular wood and coal dealer, and he walked away and left her. She was satisfied to get half a cord of wood.

The city has forty cords of wood on hand, but this is not for sale. It was secured for the use of the Charity Department.

Snow in Cavan Too Deep For Plowing

Several inches of snow fell in Cavan last night and had left a thick white carpet over the farm lands that interfered with the early morning plowing. Mr. R. Howden, of Cavan, stated that in the western part of Monaghan the fall had been practically as heavy as in the adjoining township. The edge of the storm seemed to cross the "Gravel" road near Webber's farm.

Ontario Peas Quoted Yesterday

Grain Markets Hold Firm—The Cattle Markets

Oats and corn were the strong features in yesterday's grain markets. Cash oats are up another 1 cent per bushel on the C. W.'s. Short covering in the speculative markets sent December corn up 3 3-4c. over Tuesday's close. Apart from these short interests, the news from the corn centre was of a bearish character. Ontario peas were quoted yesterday for the first time for the new crop. No. 2's are quoted at $3.40 to $3.50, according to freights.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2, store; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.09 1-2, including 2 1-2 cent tax, in store Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 68 5-8; No. 3, 68 5-8; extra No. 1 feed, 65 5-8; No. 1 feed, 63 5-8, in store Fort William.

American corn — Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 64c to 65c, nominal; No. 3 white, 63c to 64c, nominal.

Barley—New, $1.16 to $1.18.

Ontario wheat—No. 2, winter, new, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, $3.40 to $3.50, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.75.

Manitoba flour—First, patents, in jute bags, $11.50; second patents, $11; strong bakers, $10.60.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, in bags, prompt shipment, $9.80 Montreal, $9.55 to $9.60 Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $42; bran, $35; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $12.50 to $13.50; No. 2, $11 to $11.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 42 cars, with 278 cattle, 14 calves, 1,406 hogs, and 997 sheep and lambs.

The market was dull and draggy yesterday, and at the close there were still several loads of fairly good butcher cattle unsold. The packers appear to be well supplied with high-priced beef for the present, for there is a decided easing up in the demand. For the cheaper grades, canners, cutters, and fat cows, there seems to be an almost unlimited demand. Although large numbers of these classes have been shipped in the past two weeks, the market still holds good and firm up to $69 and over for the choicest cows, and $5.25 to $6.50 for canners and cutters.

Lambs were easier yesterday, going off 50c, and the market weak at that.

Hogs were a shade firmer, some of the best lots selling at $17, fed and watered.

ENEMY PROPERTY TO BE SEIZED IS NOW PUT AT A BILLION

Great Stores of German-owned Commodities and Accumulated Deposits Await Confiscation—Large Sums Offered to Custodian Palmer in Letters From Debtors of Germans

TENDERS ARE POURING IN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.— One billion dollars is unofficially estimated to represent the German-owned money or other property subject to confiscation by this Government under the Trading with the Enemy Act. All available, officials point out, for investment in the next Liberty Loan.

Until A. Mitchell Palmer, as Custodian of the Enemy Property, has received returns from corporations and individuals, it will be impossible to determine the total value of the assets he is required to take over. Letters received by him to-day, however, indicate that the war chest will be enormously swelled. Agents of the Department of Justice, the Department of Commerce, and secret service operatives have been working on the problem for months and their investigation has uncovered immense values in cotton, steel, oil, and other materials held in storage in this country by German firms.

One letter which came to Mr. Palmer to-day indicated the possibilities: An almost unknown firm informed the custodian that it owed $900,000 to a German concern which it desired to place in his custody at once. Reports from Pittsburgh were that Pittsburgh's assets, representing deposits in banks by German citizens; royalties due to German-owned patents of steel processes, and bills due to German companies, would exceed $1,000,000. In banks in New York, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, and other cities it is estimated that hundreds of millions due to Germans are deposited.

Experts say the value of cotton and other commodities in storage in this country will exceed the original estimates, as most of the materials have advanced from 50 to 60 per cent. since they were invoiced, and may reach $800,000,000.

Investments by Germans.

One of the favourite channels of German investment in the United States are railroad securities and Western land. More than 75 per cent. of the stock of a prosperous Western road was held by Germans in Germany at the outbreak of the war. Years ago, when the boom in Western farm lands was at its height, German capital was invested heavily in such property. It has been reported from time to time that the Kaiser himself held land, both in the United States and Canada, but Government agents who have been investigating Western titles have found no evidence of the Emperor's reported holdings.

Since the war started few remittances have been made to Germany. Dividends from investments held there have gone unpaid, and estates bequeathed to Germans in Germany have remained unsettled. Deposits in banks by agents of German firms have reached a large total. All such property is, of course, subject to confiscation and the proceeds will all go into United States Government bonds.

BRAZILIAN STEAMER WAS TORPEDOED

RIO JANEIRO, Oct. 26.—Brazilian steamer Macau, formerly a German steamer, was torpedoed in the Bay of Biscay. Twenty-four men were rescued. The captain was made prisoner.

RUSSIAN OFFICERS SUICIDED WHEN HUNS WON BY TREACHERY

Traitors on Oesel and Moon Islands Signalled Information to Teuton Forces—Enemy Had Complete Plans

PETROGRAD, Oct. 26.—How the Germans were aided in the capture of Oesel and Moon Islands in the Gulf of Riga by sympathisers there is told by M. Vishnevsky, a commissioner sent to observe conditions there and who escaped in an open boat after the occupation. He describes the heroic efforts made by the officers to rally their men, and asserts that several of them, including General Martinoff, commander of the garrison, committed suicide when the troops surrendered.

That the Germans had knowledge of conditions on the islands is indicated by the fact that when Aviator Safonov brought down a German hydro-airplane the dead occupant was found to have complete plans not only of existing, but of proposed fortifications. On the plans places were marked for bombing. General Martinoff's scouts frequently observed lanterns flashing from the shore, and upon investigation found a deserted cabin with a ladder leading to the roof. Squares of canvas found lying on the ground were removed, but later were replaced by a mysterious hand.

In an effort to stem the surrender of large bodies of troops, Vishnevsky and others pretended to be sending signals to Russian ships bringing help. Instructions were issued by soldier committees, he says, that those wishing to surrender should gather under white flags. Commander Shishko, of the Reval Battalion of Death, it is related, handed his sword to a soldier, saying: "I never will return home. Those who can may save themselves or die as I." Whereupon he shot himself. The Germans gave two hours in which to surrender. The majority of the garrison gave up their arms within this time.

American Steamer Had Narrow Escape

Canadian Press Despatch:

FRENCH SEAPORT, Oct. 26.—American steamer arriving here reports an engagement with a German submarine, in which seven of the steamer's crew were wounded, two seriously. An American torpedo boat saved the ship from being sunk.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"I am so tired—so very tired, Firebrand. Let me sleep."

"Sleep! Have you not had time enough to sleep, since I have been away? Enough of this folly. I'm hungry for your arms. Come." He crushed her against him in a hard embrace.

"Let me alone," she cried, struggling from him.

A flush of anger rose in his face.

"What devil's tricks are you up to now? Come here!"

"No, I tell you. Let me be. I am tired. Go back to your men, and come to me again in the morning."

Her manner was new to him, and to the anger in his face was added a certain suspicion. His eyes narrowed, his face grew cold, crafty. "What nonsense is this?" he growled. "Are you trying to trick me, girl?"

She sensed his mounting suspicions, and began to plead with him.

"Why should I trick you, Firebrand?" she cried. "You say you love me. Will you not then do this little thing for me? I am tired, very tired, and ill, with a fever. Let me sleep, I beg of you, and come to me again in the morning. Ah—please—please," she pleaded, the tears wet upon her haggard cheeks.

"A fever! Tell me a likelier tale," he sneered, then came close to her. "God's blood! I can't make you out."

"It is not much to ask—just a few little hours——"

He swept the room with a quick look of suspicion.

"Have you a lover, you jade, who waits in the garden? By Heaven, you act like it."

"No—no—no." Her tears were coming fast now. There seemed so little that she could do.

"Well for you, if you have not—and for him. If any man has dared so much as look at you, I'll flay him alive." He poured out a drink of the rum. "I've not forgotten the Puritan, who spoke with you in the marketplace. Have you seen him, since I have been gone?"

"No." She lied blindly, fervently.

"What has become of him"

"His ship has sailed these many days."

"Lucky for him, by my soul." He glanced again about the room, and his wandering eyes suddenly fell upon an object that had not up to now attracted his attention. An expression of cold ferocity swept over his face. When next he spoke, it was in measured words, which he vainly tried to invest with a silken lightness. "And what have you been doing to amuse yourself, while I was away?" he asked.

The Prompt Answer.

YOU feel almost like shaking hands with a man when he comes to his telephone the moment the bell rings.

¶ If he answers by saying at once "Mr. Blank speaking" instead of using the time-wasting "Hello" or "Well" you are still further pleased for you have saved valuable time and perhaps avoided a whole series of unnecessary questions to find out to whom you are speaking.

¶ To always answer promptly and to announce yourself at once instead of saying "Hello" "Yes" or "Well" will go far toward keeping up the quality of your telephone service.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

"Good service * * * our true intent."

"I—there was nothing to do." She felt in some subtle way the difference in his manner, and tried to understand its cause.

"Nothing, say you?" He seized her quickly by the wrist, and in spite of her resistance, drew her toward one of the far corners of the room. Even now she did not realize what purpose possessed him. "By Heaven! I think you have many things to tell me, sweet mistress, concerning your conduct during my absence."

"What—what do you mean?" she whispered, with a sinking heart.

"First," he thundered, "how came this cutlass here?" As he spoke, he made a swift movement behind him, then swept beneath her straining eyes a gleaming blade.

It was Barton's. On the night of his entrance into the house, Ramona had brought the weapon in from the garden and hidden it in the chest. There it had remained, forgotten, until that very morning. She remembered now that she had taken it out herself, while inspecting her dresses, and stood it in the corner. She gave a quick cry, then recovered herself. "Lucia found it in the road," she gasped.

"And a man with it, I doubt not," Ormiston flung at her. "Where is he?"

"I know nothing of any man."

"And yet," he sneered, his face black with rage, "it is a stout blade." With elaborate care he inspected the weapon. "A seaman's cutlass, by my faith—such a one indeed as the young Puritan might have worn. Where is he?" The self-control which he had up to now exhibited left him. "Where is he, you jade?" he roared, glancing toward the bedroom door.

"I know not. He has gone."

Suspicion now fairly blazed in his eyes. He gripped the girl's wrist more tightly, twisting her arm until she cried out, and fell on her knees before him.

"Let me go," she pleaded.

"Not till I know the truth. Have you lain with any other man?"

"No—no—I swear it——"

"Are you telling me the truth?"

"Yes—before God!"

He whipped a dagger from his belt and held it before her eyes. The ivory hilt was fashioned in the shape of a crucifix. The pierced hands of the Son of God seemed helpless to aid her now.

"Swear it on this, you Popish cat," she heard Ormiston saying. His voice semed to come to her from a vast distance. Her senses reeled. "You'd not dare lie to that. Swear!"

She placed her hands upon the hilt of the dagger, scarcely realizing, in her terror, what she was doing, then slowly rose to her feet. The blood throbbed furiously in her temples—before her eyes she saw only the glittering blade, poised but a few inches from the fall of lace that lay about Ormiston's throat. With all the strength she could summon, she threw her weight upon the dagger's hilt and strove to drive it into his breast.

The effort was futile. The Firebrand's wrists, strong from sword play, his eye traind for just such emergencies, defeated her purpose. With a sudden turn of his forearm he twisted the weapon aside, at the same time crushing the girl's fingers in a mighty grasp. With a loud clatter the dagger fell upon the tiled floor.

"So. You'd show your claws, would you?" he cried, flinging her from him. "Wel'l soon see whether or not you are lying to me." In two steps he had gained the bedroom door and sought to open it. With its resistance, a realization of the truth swept over him. He uttered a fierce crackling laugh, that caused the girl to cry out in terror, then with the hilt of the cutlass began to beat in the panels of the door.

The wood splintered beneath his furious onslaughts. In a dozen seconds the door crashed inward, the shattered lock hanging from its side. With the cutlass before him, Ormiston leapt into the room.

CHAPTER XII.

Ramona De Lara saw Ormiston break his way into her bedroom, and at the sight, hope fled. Death for Barton, for herself, now seemed inevitable. She crawled along the floor until she reached the table, and raising herself to her feet, crept silently toward the bedroom door. Fear robbed her of strength; she was scarcely able to stand; only by supporting herself upon the edge of the table did she succeed in forcing her trembling figure forward.

For a moment she heard nothing. Then quite suddenly the silence was broken by a shrill cry. She could not distinguish the voice; whether it was Barton's, or that of his assailant she was unable to tell. Reason told her that it must be that of the former; the Puritan could have small hope of escape, unarmed as he was. Even now, she told herself, her lover must be dead. She clutched the side of the table, unable to move, and watched the grass-cloth curtain that had fallen across the splintered door.

The silence became very terrible; eternities seemed to pass, before the fabric of the curtain fluttered beneath the touch of a hand. She watched its folds, her eyes dark with fear. Would Ormiston come forth?

The curtain moved, then was thrust aside. To her astonishment, neither Barton nor the Firebrand appeared upon the threshold. Instead she saw the cringing figure of the hunchback creep silently into the room. The expression upon the boy's face was terrible to behold. His eyes glassy with hate and fear, were fixed upon the long curved knife he held in his hand. He paused, and with the fringed end of his sash, wiped the drops of blood from its blade.

A sudden strength came to the girl. She went toward the hunchback with new hope in her face.

'Which one?" she screamed, going up to him. "Which one?"

"The Firebrand," replied the boy dully, then with a cry of fear dashed toward the door leading to the garden. Before Ramona could speak again, he had thrown aside the bar and disappeared.

Ramona paid small attention to him. Greater matters concerned her now. Barton was saved. She stretched out her arms toward the doorway, a wonderful joy irradiating her face.

"John — John—come to me," she cried.

Nothing mattered to her now, save that Barton was safe. Even his knowledge of her degradation, if it might be called that, was of small importance, compared with the fact that he was safe—unhurt. She feared that within a short time the Portugee would return. There was opportunity, now, for Barton to leave the house. She forgot, for the moment, all that had occurred within the past half hour, forgot everything, indeed, except her love for him, her joy at his escape. She called to him, her arms outstretched, longing for the warmth of his embraces, ready to fall into his arms, to sob out her happiness upon his breast. She was very tired, very weak. The frightful experience through which she had just passed had called for every effort of which she was capable. She felt like a beaten child. She had done her best. All she asked for now was rest.

FORTY-FIVE FIGHTERS

FRENCHMEN FORCE FOUR HUNDRED FOES TO FLEE.

A Heroic Defence of a Salient to the North-West of Verdun Which Will Be Remembered Among the Outstanding Incidents of a War Filled With Gallant Adventures.

FORTY French cavalrymen were the heroes of one of the most brilliant feats of arms —which stands out by itself among innumerable stories of heroic deeds of this war—during the German attack on June 20 on the French positions around the Mort Homme, to the northwest of Verdun. These few men who were in charge of a sharp salient whose point stuck far into the German position, not only held out against half a battalion (about 400 men) of the famous German shock troops supported by flame projectors, grenadiers, and machine guns, as well as by one of the most intense artillery bombardments ever experienced, but beat them back, after inflicting heavy losses upon them.

The German attack, preceded by a bombardment in which more than 500 of their cannon rained shells on the French positions along a front of only 1,800 yards, was led by the model battalion of German shock troops headed by Captain Roehr himself, the inventor of the new system of selecting special troops to make sudden strong rushes on the opposing positions. These shock troops, while their comrades were attacking the other part of the French line, came forward with an impetuous rush on to the little salient held by the forty dragoons, since it was most important for the Germans to take that point if their attack was to be completely successful.

The dragoons comprised two sergeants, four corporals, and thirty-four privates. They could see the enemy approaching rapidly. Three squads of pioneers led the way, each equipped with a flame projector, throwing burning liquid before them as they advanced. Behind them in the intervals could be seen three squads of hand-grenade throwers and still further in the rear a wave of ordinary infantrymen, carrying, besides their rifles with fixed bayonets, spades for the purpose of organizing the French position after they had captured it. Other lines could be seen dimly in the distance carrying sandbags and munition supplies.

This overwhelming force did not affect the nerves of the dragoons, who belonged to the determined Breton race — their regiment, the Twenty-fourth, is recruited in Brittany—and had all participated in the cavalry fighting of the beginning of the war as well as in many a battle in the trenches. One of their sergeants took command. Their rifles spoke out with rapid fire and their portable machine gun worked unceasingly.

Soon they saw Germans falling everywhere in front, and the frontal attack on the salient wilted away. The Germans, however, were determined to take the salient, and they immediately organized a flank attack, but it was foreseen by the French sergeant, who placed two of his men kneeling on each traverse with three men below in the trench to supply them with grenades. Gradually the Germans advanced as the Frenchmen fell back wounded, but for each section of trench they were compelled to make a fresh fight until the Frenchmen had retired for a distance of 200 yards along the front trench.

It took three hours to make this progress, and by that time the dragoons had reached the opening to a communication trench leading to the rear. Here they decided to form a redoubt and make their last stand.

Just then the sergeant in charge of the dragoons noticed a relaxation in the German attack. He gathered all his remaining men together, made a dash forward, and in less than half an hour had reconquered the entire salient and had taken four prisoners. He then hastily wrote a report and sent it to the rear: "Quiet has been restored and nothing has been lost."

The roll call showed that only twenty of the dragoons had escaped wounds or death. They had accounted during the fight for two full companies of Germans, and had retained the salient which had been entrusted to their charge.

WAS BAZAINE A TRAITOR?

Surrender of Metz Was Never Fully Explained.

Francois Achille Bazaine was born near Paris in 1811. Determining in youth to seek the bubble reputation in the cannon's mouth, he entered the army. Being the scion of a wealthy family, he could have readily begun to carve out his career with an officer's sword, but he elected to begin with the musket of a private soldier and earn promotion by efficient service in the ranks. With such a spirit it was easy for him to win promotion, and almost before he knew it he was a general. He performed distinguished services in both the Crimean and Algerian wars, and when the unhappy Maximillian was establishing himself in Mexico, Bazaine, in command of the French troops, conquered and held that country for the ill-starred Austrian prince.

After the early disaster of Sedan in the Franco-Prussian war all France looked to Bazaine to save it from the oncoming Teutons. His name was upon every lip. The fate of a nation was in the palm of his hand.

While the eyes of his countrymen were upon him, Bazaine made a move that caused all France to stand agape. Retiring with his vast army into Metz, he made only a feeble resistance, which allowed the Germans to surround the city and bottle him up in a siege; and thereafter his defense of Metz showed a weakness that struck terror to the heart of France. Bazaine had with him 180,000 men, including 6,000 officers, 143 generals, three field marshals, and hundreds of pieces of heavy artillery, and the city was defended by a modern fortress that seemed impregnable. Yet on October 27, 1870, before making half a fight, Bazaine surrendered the entire city and this entire force to the Prussians.

He was at once branded as a traitor who had sold his country to the hated enemy. As evidence to the contrary, he declared that his army had been starving and unfit to fight and that he had made a report to the French Government to that effect; but there was no record of such a report.

The most charitable view that any Frenchman took of the catastrophe was that Bazaine was grossly incompetent. But this theory could not harmonize with his past record.

Brought before a court-martial on the charge of treason, Bazaine was convicted and sentenced to be shot, but his old colleague, Marshal MacMahon, when elected president of France, took pity on him, commuting his sentence to twenty years' imprisonment.

Bazaine now treated France to another mystery and another sensation. He was found missing from his cell, and the news was sent abroad that he had escaped through the assistance of his faithful Mexican wife, but the escape could not have been effected without the connivance of some one powerful in the Government. He fled to Spain and after there escaping assassination died suddenly in 1888.

His purpose in surrendering Metz will ever remain one of the secrets of European history.

Napoleon's Divorce.

Napoleon's divorce, a civil act of the empire, was pronounced before the grand council held in the Tuileries on December 15, 1809, and the next day the senate confirmed it. To remove all religious scruples, the court of the bishop of Paris met and pronounced the marriage with Josephine null, this action being taken on January 14, 1810. The civil marriage of Bonaparte and Maria Louisa of Austria, April 1, 1810, was witnessed by the college of cardinals, save only two who were too infirm to be brought to Paris. The attitude of the church was manifest at the religious marriage. Not a cardinal was present, although they said that their absence was an empty form due only to the circumstances that Pius VII. had not approved the divorce.

Germany Needs Leather.

Germany shows exactly one sign of weakening and no more, says Dr. Joseph S. Ames, professor of physics at Johns Hopkins university. He saw war activity for more than six weeks as a member of the National Research council sent by the Government to make scientific observations to enable the United States to render the most efficient possible service to her allies in the conduct of the war.

"That one sign of weakness," Dr. Ames added, "is shoe leather. I saw thousands of German prisoners while I was in France, and in none was there the slightest sign of want or privation except shoes. They all wore shoes that were in bad shape, and that, you know, is an important sign, for a badly shod army is a half-crippled army."

Potatoes Any Day.

News from London, received lately, was to the effect that the Food Controller of Great Britain has been able to modify the order which restricted the use of potatoes to one day a week in hotels, restaurants and clubs. Potatoes may now be served any day in the week instead of on Friday alone.

The new order was issued because supplies of new potatoes are increasing and also for the reason that their use will help conserve bread. It is intimated that at the meals at which potatoes will be permitted to be used, bread may be omitted or will be served in reduced quantities.

New potatoes are now selling in London at eight cents per pound.

MOTION PICTURES IN CHINA.

There Were Lively Times For the Man Who Introduced Them.

At the end of the Russo-Japanese war, says the Los Angeles Times, Mr. Brodsky, a native of Odessa, Russia came to San Francisco. After the great San Francisco fire he left the city with an old motion picture machine and forty or fifty reels of "junk" film. With that he sailed for the orient. The motion picture was unknown in China when he reached there with his paraphernalia, and he ran into many dangers in showing his wares. To the natives his camera and projecting machine was a "magic box." He had to pay his first audiences to enter his theater, which, by the way, was only a tent. In that way he finally won the crowds.

Matters were progressing well when Brodsky one day put on a wild west film in which a band of cowboys appeared on the screen, charging straight at the spectators and firing revolvers. The moment the audience saw those shooting cowboys bearing down upon them they rushed, panic stricken, from the tent theater, cutting their way out with knives.

After that the cautious natives were slow to come back. But finally Brodsky hit upon the plan of having a few Chinese come and examine the apparatus, pass their hands over the blank sheet that was the screen and assure themselves that there was nothing to hurt them.

Gradually he established picture theaters throughout the country until now there are eighty of them.

Once he was thrown into a Chinese jail, but finally made his escape after getting the whole populace into the jail to view his motion pictures. At another place he was to have been executed as a "devil," but he frightened the people and made them change their minds by telling them that he could easily put them on the screen and make them work there forever.

CANADA

Will Class One Provide The One Hundred Thousand Men?

It will be greatly to the advantage of Canada if the entire quota of 100,000 men to be raised under the Military Service Act can be secured from the first class; that is, from the men between the ages of 20 and 34 who were unmarried or widowers without children on July 6th, 1917.

This is almost self-evident for the following reasons:

it is admitted that, between the ages of 20 and 34, the average man is at the height of his physical strength and is most adaptable to the change of conditions from civilian life;

the military Service of unmarried men and widowers without children would occasion less distress than that of most others, since they are largely without dependents. Also, it would entail less financial burden for Canada, through separation allowances, etc.

Authorities estimate that, after all proper examinations have been allowed, Canada should be able to produce from the first class 100,000 men fit for service, so the drain upon the man power of the country will not be severe.

Members of Class One will be well advised to present themselves for examination immediately to the Medical Board in their district. Upon examination as to their physical fitness, they will be placed in one of the following categories:

Category A—if fit for service in overseas fighting units.
Category B—if fit for service overseas in Army Medical Corps, Forestry Battalion, etc.
Category C—if fit for service in Canada only.
Category E—if unfit for military service of any nature.

If not placed in category A, the applicant will know that he is not liable for immediate service, but will go to the Post Office and send in a claim for exemption with his Medical Certificate attached, when he will receive in due course a certificate of exemption until those in his medical category are summoned for service.

Where a man, who is placed in category A, feels that exemption should be allowed, an application form can be secured from the postmaster. This form, when filled in, will be forwarded by the postmaster to the registrar of the district, and the applicant will be informed by mail as to the time and place for the consideration of his application by the Exemption Board.

USING A MEDICINE DROPPER.

The More Slanting It Is Held the Bigger the Drops Will Be.

When using a medicine dropper it is important to use it correctly, especially if measuring out drops of some powerful medicine like strychnine, morphine or arsenic, for drops vary widely in their size.

Dr. R. P. Garrow of London recently reported to the Lancet the results of some experiments he had made with a medicine dropper and a simple solution. He measured the solution very carefully and then took it all up into a medicine dropper, from which he turned it, drop by drop, holding the dropper at different angles and counting the drops as they fell.

With the dropper held vertically (at an angle of 90 degrees with the horizontal) its contents made 100 drops. Held at an angle of 50 degrees its contents made eighty-two drops; at 20 degrees they made sixty-eight drops, at 10 degrees they made sixty drops, and held horizontal they made only forty-eight drops.

In other words, the drops become progressively larger as the dropper is moved from the vertical position. A drop from a dropper held at an angle of 50 degrees is one-quarter larger than normal; thus, if the nurse has to give sixteen drops and holds the dropper slanting she is really giving twenty. And the more slanting the dropper the bigger the drops.

Physical Examinations.

There is a side to the whole problem of physical examination which is very important. I am interested in physical examinations, not to shut men out of work, but to use them more intelligently and to give them a proper chance. Oftentimes employers and the men affected do not know that something has gone wrong with an employee. There was one concern that did not care two straws about physical examinations and would not pay any attention to the question. One day an elevator man took up a party of investors who were going to a board meeting in the establishment. He was seized with heart disease right between the floors, but fortunately the elevator stopped itself by the rarest good fortune. The executives of the plant now agree that physical examinations are no idle luxury. Men owe it to themselves, the company owes it to itself, and the company owes it to its employees to have such examinations.—Meyer Bloomfield in Industrial Management.

May Be the Oldest Book.

In an ancient Samaritan synagogue at Shechem a double roll of parchment is guarded jealously and is zealously preserved. It was to Shechem that Abraham came in his first visit to Canaan. Near Shechem Jacob sank his famous well, and the returning Israelites heard here for the last time the voice of Joshua. Shechem was the first residence of the kings of Israel and was a city of refuge. Here at Jacob's well Jesus met the woman of Samaria. Here the great Justin Martyr was born. After the division of Israel into two kingdoms Shechem became the religious center of the northern kingdom, and Jeroboam's self appointed faith degenerated into the Samaritan worship of our Lord's day, which is perpetuated in the old synagogue which holds this scroll. This double roll of parchment, possibly the oldest in the world, contains the first five books of the Old Testament and may be as old as the days of Jeremiah.

Joy of Pockets.

The pocket has to be lacked before it is properly appreciated, the London Chronicle says. This writer had taken his pockets as a matter of course until one evening he attended a fancy dress ball in costume which, he discovered when too late to remedy the defect, was absolutely pocketless. The question at once arose what to do with pocket handkerchief, money, cloakroom ticket, and so on. The handkerchief, of course, went up his sleeve, but it took some minutes to devise receptacles for coins and other necessaries in the lining of the cap, the heels of the shoes and the cuff of the coat. All night long, however, he felt lost through having no place to thrust his hands into. Since then he finds himself frequently putting his hands into his pockets to experience the sheer joy of knowing that they are there.

Care of Harness Leather.

Harness leather cannot be neglected without injury that lessens its durability. It should be washed and oiled frequently. The washing should be done in tepid water with a neutral soap and a sponge or stiff brush. After rinsing in clean tepid water the harness is hung up to dram a little while before oiling.

For driving harness neatsfoot or castor oil is best, but for heavy harness there may be some tallow in the oil. The applications should be light for driving and liberal for heavy harness. The oil, warm to the hand, is rubbed thoroughly into the leather while it is still wet from the washing. Excess oil which the leather is unable to take up should be removed with a clean, dry cloth

A Legend of Agincourt.

For many centuries we English have plumed ourselves upon the victory of Agincourt. But the French have an account of the affair not so much to our credit. It was arranged, according to this fable, by the two leaders that only the nobles on each side were to fight. King Henry V. then artfully ennobled his whole army and hence got the best of the enemy. Shakespeare unwittingly gives a little countenance to the legend when he makes the king declare in his address to the soldiers, "Be ye ne'er so vile, this day shall gentle your condition."

Boys and Books. They will mix all right if the boys are kept mentally alert and physically active with nourishing, easily digested foods. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the ideal food for youngsters to study on or to play on because it contains the life of the whole wheat grain in a digestible form. The kiddies like it with milk or cream, with sliced bananas or other fruits.

FALLS ONLY TO RISE.

An Experiment With a Sort of Perpetual Motion Effect.

A novel experiment in the demonstration of perpetual motion is to be performed simply. A glass beaker about six inches high and four inches in diameter is filled with water to the height of about four and a half inches, and two and one-half to three ounces of commercial aniline are added, which will sink to the bottom of the vessel.

The temperature of the beaker and its contents is now raised to 170 or 175 degrees F. by means of a burner, when it will be observed that the aniline will rise to the surface of the water, from which it will hang in a mass of curved outline. Almost immediately the suspended aniline commences to alter in shape, and gradually a large drop an inch or more in diameter detaches itself from the mass and falls through the water.

And now, the detached drop having fallen to the bottom of the beaker, comes the surprising part of the experiment. The fallen drop is seen gradually to rise to the surface, where it joins the mass from which it previously broke away. At once another drop commences to form and, having become detached, falls and rises in the same manner as the previous drop.

So long as the temperature of the water is maintained at 170 degrees or over this procedure continues.

The Chinese "Five Kings."

"The Five Kings" is the name of the sacred book in which is incorporated the religion of the Chinese as well as a great number of other peoples of the orient. The doctrine is a complex system of moral, social, political and religious teaching built up by Confucius on the ancient Chinese traditions, and, although its author lived more than five centuries before the birth of Christ, it is still perpetuated as the state religion of the Chinese down to the present day. Confucianism is a religion without positive revelation, with a minimum of dogmatic teaching, whose popular worship is centered in offerings to the dead, in which the notion of duty is extended beyond the sphere of morals proper so as to embrace almost every detail of daily life.

FROM PRIVATE TO ACTING-MAJOR

ACTING-MAJOR W. B. WATSON, M.C.

IN the supplement to the "London Gazette," dated August 16th, containing a list of awards to officers and men for gallantry and devotion to duty in the field, the following appears:

"Sec. Lt. (A. Capt.) Douglas Barker Watson, Midd'x R.—When Acting Adjutant he performed most valuable services to his headquarters, crossing a ridge three times in daylight through heavy machine-gun and rifle fire to obtain exact information as to the situation and dispositions of his battalion. He successfully accomplished his task under very difficult circumstances."

The gallant officer, who is only 31 years of age, was born on the 30th March, 1896, and educated at King Alfred's School, Wantage. He joined the services of the Freight Dept. of the Canadian Pacific Ry., Charing Cross, in December, 1913, and when war broke out he enlisted as a private in the 10th Batt Middlesex Regiment. He was gazetted Sec.-Lt. on the 18th Sept. of the same year, was mentioned in despatches amongst others by Gen. A. J. Murray, C. in C., Egyptian Expeditionary Force on the 18th March, promoted to be Acting Captain whilst commanding a company, on April 10th, and in the "Gazette" on May 25th it was stated: "Capt. D. B. Watson, M.C., to be Acting Major, whilst Major on Headquarters of the Battalion."

War Record of C. P. R. Men.

In spite of the fact that day and night the trains and steamers of that great Imperial organization, the Canadian Pacific Railway, have been occupied in the transportation of soldiers and war materials, and that the huge workshops of the company have been turning out vast supplies of munitions of war instead of engines and rolling stock, no fewer than 8,000 men in the service of the company have gone to the front. In every theatre of war they are to be found—in France, Italy, Russia, the Balkans, Mesopotamia, Africa. Of these 8,000 men (apart from 100 who are serving in the Navy) 1,309 have been killed or wounded, among the killed being Capt. the Hon. A. T. Shaughnessy, son of Lord Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R.

The C. P. R. and Dominion Express staffs in Great Britain before the war numbered 213, of whom 179 were of military age, and of those 179 no fewer than 158 have joined the colors. Among those who have paid the supreme sacrifice have been Lt. A. E. Voysey, Chief Assistant to the European Manager, and Lt. W. B. McArthur, M.C.

The honors won by officials and employees of the company make a long list. Lt.-Col. C. W. P. Ramsay has been made C.M.G. The D.S.O. has been awarded to Lt.-Col. G. S. Cantlie, general superintendent of car service; Lt.-Col. F. A. Gascoigne, superintendent of car service, Montreal; and Maj. J. A. Hesketh, assistant engineer, Winnipeg.

The Military Cross has been gained by Temp. Lt. C. F. Casey (killed) Lt. J. A. Hamilton (killed), Lt. E. Irvine, Regt.-Sgt.-Maj. J. Jeffery, Maj. W. M. Kirkpatrick, Lt. W. B. McArthur (killed), Lt. W. H. McMurray, Lt. J. K. Matheson, Co.-Sgt.-Maj. H. Neighbour, Lt. A. M. Robertson, Sgt.-Maj. D. Stuart, Capt. L. B. Unwin, Lt. W. B. Watson, and Lt.-Col. F. A. Wilkins.

The following have been awarded the D.C.M.: Cpl. A. P. Hancock, Pte. R. Jobling, Pte. R. H. Jones, Sgt. J. R. Langford, Cpl. W. N. Legg, Sgt. D. MacRae, Co.Sgt.-Maj. H. Neighbour, Sec. Cpl. J. F. Newton, Gnr. S. Strickland, Pte. B. A. Stiles.

The Military Medal has been won by Pte. A. Anderson, Sgt. R. J. Campbell, Pte. T. Campbell, Act.-Cpl. D. S. Charleson, Pte. T. C. Christie, Cpl. A. W. Courtney, Gnr. J. R. Coutts, Gnr. S. L. Young. Stf.-Sgt. C. A. Hewett has been awarded the Meritorious Medal.

Summarizing, we find the total honors work out as follows: C.M.G., 1; D.S.O., 3; Military Cross, 14; D.C.M., 9; Military Medal, 38; Meritorious Medal, 1. It should also be mentioned that the European manager of the C. P. R., Lt.-Col. G. McLaren Brown, has been appointed an assistant director (unpaid) at the War Office.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Eye of the Submarine.

Without the periscope the submarine would be a blinded fighter. Its most deadly work is done when it is so far submerged that only a foot or two of the periscope's tip can be seen. The periscope is a long vertical tube of small diameter with prisms at either end and the necessary lenses. It rises eighteen feet above the deck, and below, where the other end pierces the hull, is the eyepiece for the observer. It can be turned in any direction, and when a merchantman trying to run the blockade or an enemy ship comes within its field the submarine is suddenly transformed into a formidable and stealthy sea tiger. The periscope becomes its eyes and the dials, compasses and other instruments of the fire control its brain. The engines that carry it to effective range are its swift, tireless legs, and the destructive charge of 250 pounds of guncotton in the unleashed torpedo is the death dealing jaws and rending claws of the great cat that has seen its prey and steals up on it with the skill of a tiger stalking a buffalo. No tiger is more merciless.—Frank E. Evans in St. Nicholas.

Keep the Weeds Down.

Attack the weeds as soon as they appear in the garden. It is less work to keep a garden clean from the beginning than it is after the weeds have made a good start. Weeds are gross feeders and rob the garden plants of food and moisture they require.

Dandelions, plantain and dock can best be removed from the lawn by cutting them off below the crown. Fill up the holes with earth. Cut the weeds every two weeks and all will soon disappear.

KAISER ALWAYS CRUEL

DESCRIPTION OF HIS CHARACTER A GENERATION AGO.

Harold Frederick, a Writer Who Died in 1898, Foretold That the German Emperor Would Become Known as an Attila Born a Thousand Years or More After His Time.

HAROLD FREDERICK is an American author who ought to be far better known than he is, for when he died untimely in 1898 he left behind him at least two or three books that certainly will survive. His name is now recalled because someone in looking over an old magazine or newspaper came across a study of Emperor William, made in 1888 when Emperor Frederick lay on his deathbed and when the Crown Prince (the present Kaiser) was about to step into his shoes. In view of what we know now of the war lord the article is indeed a remarkable one, especially for its prophetic power. Thirty years ago Harold Frederick, who was European correspondent for the New York Times, saw the Kaiser as all the world sees him to-day. He foresaw the extreme probability of the man drenching the world in blood, for he read aright the character of the Hohenzollern.

In those days the Kaiser must have been a fine-looking man. Frederick thus describes him: "Picture to yourself a young man in his 30th year, six feet in height, straight as an ash sapling, with finely formed, slender limbs, narrow hips, swelling chest, and square, broad shoulders, with a smallish head on a long, full-throated neck, held proudly upright, and an oval face, with aquiline effect of profile, clear-cut, strong chin, bended nose, prominent through not high cheek-bones, and good, open forehead. * * * The type suggests the notion of a perfectly-bred sleuth-hound, under whose smooth, delicately soft coat lie the muscles of steel, and in whose mouth—sinister legacy of nature—is the inherent taste of human blood. Not that his face is sullen or savage in its expression. Its habitual cast in repose is calm, self-possessed, somewhat meditative, without wrinkles either on the brow or at the ends of the mouth. The eyes, too, are grave, intent, without being severe. One shudders as one pats the mild, contemplative head of the bloodhound solely because of the stories that have been told of the terrible ferocity which lurks under his sleek and gentle exterior. In the same way you look into the face of this young heir of the Hohenzollerns and remember with wondering reservations the malignant tales which have been told of his inner nature by those who knew it best. Apparently all the omen—at least all the English women—who have had to do with the bringing up of Prince William hold him in horror and detestation. I have had numerous proofs of this, although I have never been able to fasten upon any specific reasons for it. Their dislike for him is based on a general conception of his character. This view is that he is utterly cold, entirely selfish, wantonly cruel; a youth man without conscience or compassion, or any softening virtues whatever. That he has great abilities they all admit, but they stop there. Heart, he has none upon their reckoning. And I am bound to say that if you look into his face with this preconceived notion of the young man's character you can find plenty of signs which seem to substantiate it.

This is rather tough on the bloodhound, which is not, popular belief to the contrary notwithstanding, a savage animal, but, on the contrary, one of the mildest of dogs. Nevertheless, Frederick gives us a picture which time has shown to be a true one.

Prophetic indeed were these words of Frederick's:

"It seems very probable that some future Taine a century hence will write to show that William II. of Prussia and the German Empire was a mysterious, belated survival of the ante-medieval Goths and Vandals—an Attila born a thousand and more years after his time." He pointed out that although the Kaiser had an English princess for his mother he was virtually all Prussian, because the Guelphs would have to go back almost to Shakespeare's time to find a strain of any blood in their veins that was not Teutonic. Similarly with the Russians, and the great-grandmother of the Kaiser was a daughter of Czar Paul. The Romanoffs have hardly any Tartar blood in them, because of the practice of the males for ten generations back of marrying German women.

In Berlin, Harold Frederick had the feeling of a civilian left alone in an army. Even then the country had been thoroughly militarized, although Bismarck, having got what he wanted by war, was always talking about the blessings of peace. He wrote, "What this militarism means is that the army here in Germany will utterly swamp whatever ordinary pacific instincts there are in the Empire the moment a young fighting Kaiser draws his sword and cries out, 'Who will follow me?'" One of the most horrible things about the crime of the Kaiser is that he was no longer a young fighting Kaiser" when he drew his sword upon mankind. He was an old man, a grim father. Every lust save the blood lust must have died out in him. It may be that he is like the man-eating tiger, indifferent to the taste of human flesh as long as his teeth and claws are equal to the task of pulling down other denizens of the jungle, but turning in his mangy old age into a man-eater.

Scores the Fatherland.

Prof. Max F. Meyer of the University of Missouri has issued a letter protesting against the anti-conscription propaganda of the so-called "People's Council of America for Democracy and Peace" of New York, in reply to a circular requesting a contribution from him.

Professor Meyer is a naturalized American, was born in Germany and spent 19 years in German schools as a student and a teacher. His letter says:

"If Germany wins this war, fifty years hence its government will rule the American people. I do not want my American children to be put under the yoke which I escaped by coming to America. My hope is that the German government will be overthrown and ... the German nation, my relatives and friends, will enter an international organization for peace and justice. But the German Government, this fearful danger to our future, can be overthrown only by raising armies, not by sitting around the council table of the 'People's Council of America' and work for the repeal of the conscription laws."

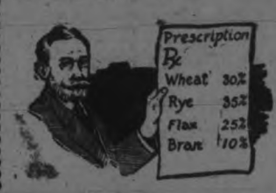
A Nourishing, Laxative Food for Growing Children



It solves mother's food problem. Roman Meal is much more nourishing than wheat or oats used alone, and is twice as nourishing as corn; it is so thoroughly and easily digestible that even a baby of eight months or over thrives upon it. It keeps the liver active, prevents indigestion and relieves constipation.

Dr. Jackson's

is nothing but a simple, absolutely drugless combination of entire berries of wheat (30%), whole berries of rye (35%), flaxseed rendered tasteless and odorless by electricity (25%), and 10% wheat bran. That's all. This simple mixture is porous because it is granulated; thus letting the digestive juices reach every particle and preventing indigestion.

Flaxseed is the most nourishing seed known. In Roman Meal it prevents the irritating effect of bran on the lining of the bowel, and lubricates the digestive tract. It is laxative and keeps the skin clear.

The bran in Roman Meal provides the natural waste without which the muscles of the digestive tract positively will not act. The digestive system was fashioned for the express purpose of dealing with coarse, waste-containing food. Roman Meal is such a food; it relieves constipation, or money refunded. Ask your doctor.

You notice that entire berries of wheat and rye are used—important. Modern cereal foods are light in color because they are mostly starches, which so often ferment and cause trouble. Roman Meal retains the dark parts of the grains because they build up muscle, brain, nerves, organs and blood. These dark parts also contain the salines which keep the blood non-acid. They contain the flavor, too—the sweet, nutty flavor of the grains!

Roman Meal is an ideal food for children; it takes the place of drugs, keeping little folks healthy and strong. What delightful porridge it makes; when you follow directions it is delicious, but when you stir it while cooking you spoil it. Do not stir except while mixing meal and water. It also makes all kinds of delicious baked products. At all grocers.

FIRST AMERICAN TRAITOR.

Benjamin Church Played That Role During the Revolution.

Benjamin Church, a graduate of Harvard and a member of a distinguished New England family, was the first American traitor. Church became eminent as a surgeon and as a writer of verse and was one of the leading Whigs in the years just preceding the Revolution. At one time he was a member of the Massachusetts provincial congress and became a member of the famous Boston committee of safety.

The committee's plans were consistently revealed to General Gage, governor of the province, but the source of the leak was not discovered until after the Revolution was fairly under way. At the time of the actual break between the colonies and England Church was assigned to an important colonial hospital. In September, 1775, a letter from Church to a British army officer, containing secrets of the colonist army, was intercepted. Church had intrusted the letter, written in code, to a woman, to be conveyed to one of General Gage's staff officers. The woman confessed her share in the treasonable move and implicated Church.

The traitor was taken before a council presided over by Washington, and he there practically admitted his guilt. Congress, acting on the suggestion of the trial council, ordered Church kept in close confinement in the Cambridge jail, "without the use of pen or paper, and that no person be allowed to converse with him except in the presence and hearing of colonial officers until further orders from this or a future congress."

Church's health failed rapidly, and he was permitted to undergo banishment to the West Indies. He sailed in a merchant vessel in May, 1778, and neither the ship nor Church ever was heard of again.

CANADIAN PACIFIC OBSERVATION CARS IN AUSTRIA, 1913

NOW SAID TO BE USED AS HOSPITAL CARS

THE information given in recent Washington revelations that the Canadian Pacific Railway was singled out by the German Government last year out of all the railways on this continent for sabotage which was intended to interfere with its traffic, but which met with no success owing to the care with which the Canadian Pacific Railway track and bridges are protected, shows that the Germans have not yet forgiven the Canadian Pacific for its enterprise in Austria prior to the war.

It will be remembered that in 1913 the C. P. R. operated an Observation Car System on the Austrian State Railways by initiating a direct steamship line to the Port of Trieste. The Observation Car scheme had the object of attracting the attention to Canada of the five hundred thousand tourists who flocked each year to Austrian Tyrol, and at the same time of providing facilities of travel in Austria to American tourists such as they were used to in their own country. The Austrian experts appointed to investigate the unprofitable operations of the State Railways discovered that a very large proportion of the freight and passenger traffic for America originating in Southeastern Austria and Southern Russia was being carried by short haul to the German frontier towards the ports of Hamburg and Bremen, instead of through Austria to the natural port of Trieste. They further discovered that the German steamship lines controlled the so-called Austrian steamship lines, and had allotted to the Port of Trieste only four per cent of the total exports from this part of Europe. When, therefore, a non-German line such as the Canadian Pacific was called in to break up this monopoly and start a direct line of steamers to Trieste, there was great agitation in Berlin. In fact it so much disturbed the Prussian State Railways, who at that time were exploiting the Austrians in their own interests, that they brought pressure through their War Office upon the Austrian Government to close the C. P. R. Office in Vienna and cancel its concessions. No doubt the gallant actions of the Canadians in the field of battle have also helped the Prussian to remember and try to vent their spite on anything connected with Canada. The Observation Cars are now said to be doing service as hospital cars in Austrian service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Amateur Detective

A Young Woman's Efforts to Find a Missing Girl.

By RUTH GRAHAM

"Another schoolgirl disappeared," said Grace Bartow, laying down the morning paper. "Helen Bowers left home to go to the high school one morning nearly three weeks ago and has never been heard from since. Why is it that we have so many detective stories unraveling imaginary mysteries and yet no one ever solves real ones?"

"Why don't you try your hand at this case, Grace?" asked her sister, Amelia. "Take it up independently of the police and investigate it yourself. You complain of having nothing to interest you. By endeavoring to find out what has become of this missing girl you will be relieved of ennui and may do a great deal of good."

Miss Bartow, a young woman twenty-three years old, possessing an income sufficient for her support, well educated, intensely practical, was set to thinking by her sister's words. She was not a person who would enter upon a work to abandon it at the first discouragement. Consequently she conned over in her mind the rebuffs she would be obliged to encounter. One of the principal of these would come from the police, who are not disposed to brook any amateur trespassing on their legitimate domain. On the other hand, the family of the missing girl might be thankful for her effort. It required two whole days for Miss Bartow to weigh these considerations, at the end of which she decided to begin work on the case of the missing girl and never cease her efforts so long as there was a clew to follow.

Her first visit was to police headquarters. She found Inspector Blakeman, a middle aged man, sitting behind a rosewood desk which was covered with papers.

"I have called," she said, "to ask if I can be of any assistance to the police in their efforts to discover the whereabouts of Helen Bowers, who disappeared recently and has never been seen or heard of since. I have decided to interest myself in the case. I shall work independently of the police, but before beginning I desire to know if you will give me such information as you may possess concerning the mystery."

"That we cannot do. We work upon our clews in our own way. They are known only to ourselves. Any giving away of them would be likely to defeat our success. A secret once parted with is henceforth no secret."

"You are perfectly right about it," said Miss Bartow. "I did not expect that you would trust me with what information you may possess. But I prefer that you should know that I am working on the case. I presume you have no objection."

"The law allows any one to work on the case, and you are perfectly free to do so. I can only say that the more amateur detective work that is injected into hunting for crime the less chance there is for us experienced investigators to succeed."

Having thus delivered himself, the inspector signified that the interview was ended and turned again to his papers. Miss Bartow withdrew.

She had kept the address of the family of the missing girl as given in the newspapers, and her next visit was there. She found the girl's mother bowed down with grief.

"Mrs. Bowers," said Grace, "I have determined to try to solve the mystery of your daughter's disappearance. I do so simply for the sake of doing good. Tell me about your daughter."

The woman gave a description of the missing girl. She was fifteen years old, considered pretty and was of excellent character. She had no lover so far as the mother knew.

"Have you any suspicions as to what has become of her?" asked Grace.

"I know what has become of her up to a certain point. One of her schoolmates saw a woman speak to her on the street the morning she disappeared."

"Have you stated this to the police?"

"I have not only stated it to them, but have begged them to investigate this woman, who is known to us, since my daughter was seen to go with her into a candy shop she keeps."

"What have the police done about it?"

"They tell me that they have gone through the house containing the candy shop and interrogated the woman, who admits she took a girl answering Helen's description to her shop on the morning Helen disappeared to sell her some candy. She makes a peculiar kind which girls are very fond of and sells it very cheap. She sometimes solicits custom of children and accosted Helen, who went with her to her shop and bought some candy. A young man followed them into the shop, bought some more candy, which he gave to Helen and they left the shop together."

"What do the police say about this?"

"They say that the woman in question bears an excellent reputation; that hundreds of young girls every year go off with young men willingly or under deception and are never heard of again. Their theory is that Helen went away with the young man who joined her in the store."

Grace Bartow pondered awhile on this statement, then asked:

"Is there any evidence of your daughter having left the candy store with a man except that of the candy seller?"

"No."

"Is there any other evidence of her having left the store at all?"

"No."

"That means for me that this part of the story is of no moment whatever. We must look for the girl's abductor, for I believe from what I already know that she has been abducted by the person with whom she was last seen. The story that this woman solicits customers for her candy on the street is not probable. If the police pretend to believe it they only pretend; they know better. Be of good heart, my good woman. I think I see an outlet to the matter. I shall do some investigating, and in the meanwhile say nothing of this visit. We can keep a secret as well as the police."

Miss Bartow suspected the police of collusion with the candy woman. What object they had in screening her she did not know. She had heard that the police of the city were notoriously corrupt, and it was known to most persons that they were bribed for permitting houses to be used for gambling and other illegal purposes.

She reconnoitered the candy shop. It was a small place with a very poor stock. She asked a frowsy girl behind the counter for a certain kind of candy of which the proprietor made a specialty and was handed something of which she bought a small quantity. Meanwhile her eyes were open. She noticed that the shop was on the ground floor and there were three stories above. There was no way to reach the upper stories except through the candy store.

Miss Bartow's mind was concentrated on what those upper stories were occupied for. How could she find out? If she called on the police for information, in case the missing girl were there and the police were protecting the candy woman the girl would be removed, after which quite likely the house would be openly investigated.

Miss Bartow faced a problem. Before going further in her detective work she must learn what was in those upper stories. The matter seemed simple enough. Indeed, it was too simple to be used in a detective story. But it stumped Miss Bartow. She was obliged to call in a man to assist her.

Tom Armstrong was an intimate friend of Miss Bartow. Indeed, he would have liked to be more than a friend and might have been had he not been considered too much of a man about town. Grace knew very well that he was far more competent to ferret out anything in the way of wicked vice than she was. One of his sins was a disposition to gamble. He would likely know or be able to find out whether a certain house was used for gambling or, indeed, for any illegal purpose.

Grace wrote Tom an invitation to call upon her. He responded with alacrity, thinking that she had relented toward him. Grace told the story of her detective work and asked him to find out for her what the rooms above the candy store were used for without his investigations being known. Tom said he would do his best. When he reported he gave no detailed account of his proceedings, but he gave the information Grace needed. He said that the premises paid premiums to the support of a police insurance fund.

Miss Bartow's next move was to gain access without warning to those in the candy store building. For this she was no more fitted than to learn the contents. She was obliged to call again on the man whom she considered too wild for a husband. Tom Armstrong promised to help her.

It was not long after this that one evening a party of young men rolling along the street, supposed to have been drinking, turned into the candy store and, after making purchases, walked deliberately into a back room and, despite the efforts of the girl behind the counter, stumbled upon a staircase. They found bedrooms, one of which was locked. Bursting open the door, there on a bed lay a girl, who, frightened at their approach, shrank away from them.

"Who are you?" asked one of the men.

"Helen Bowers."

It was Tom Armstrong who asked the question, and the moment the reply was given he wrapped a blanket around the girl, took her in his arms and, guarded by his companions, carried her down the stairs and out to an auto standing near. It was like carrying a football guarded by interferers to goal. He had scarcely left the candy shop before several policemen, summoned by the girl in the candy shop, dashed up to the door.

"There!" said the girl, pointing to the auto, which was just turning a corner.

The police were too late. Having no conveyance, they lost their prey.

Miss Grace Bartow was sitting in the living room of her home when there was a sharp ring at the bell. She opened the door herself, and Tom Armstrong, followed by his friends, carried Helen Bowers into the house and laid her on a sofa, for she was too weak to stand.

Tom received a pressure of the hand that made his heart leap. A telephone message was at once sent to Mrs. Bowers that her daughter had been rescued, and there was a joyful meeting.

The police were not charged with knowing that the missing girl was in the house above the candy store. They were receiving money for protecting the place from prosecution for illegal purposes and thought it best to believe the candy woman's story.

"Grace," said Tom Armstrong later, "have you got any more work requiring one who knows the ropes?"

"Will you reform?"

"Certainly, as soon as married."

"Then I think you had better be married."

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. WM. GREEN, 332 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy.

If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Are You Tied Up Indoors?

If so, your whole system naturally gets tied up too.

A lazy liver and constipated bowels are bad things, dangerous things.

Exercise as much as you can—but keep your liver and bowels up to the mark all the time.

There's Profit In Growing Herbs.

"Particularly pleasant to grow are herbs," says Grace Tabor in the Woman's Home Companion, "and by a little study of their very special market they may be easily turned into pin money. Every butcher who makes his own sausage is a potential customer and the large packing houses, of course, use large quantities. Chemists, perfumers and pickle factories also require them. Solicit trade if this line is what you think you would like, offering a sample of your wares, just as any manufacturer shows samples of his goods."

Sovereigns In Bolivia.

Bolivia has a strange connection with Great Britain in the fact that the English sovereign is the standard gold coin. This is minted from local gold at the capital of the country, La Paz, along with the Peruvian half sovereign, which also is legal tender. Although Bolivia is as yet quite a "new" country and has not had time to adopt a coinage of her own, she has found an opportunity of establishing some monopolies on alcohol, spirituous liquors and tobacco, rendering the prohibition of them at any time an easy matter.—London Chronicle.

What Can Be Done In One Day.

"Every day is such a usual occurrence that its true significance does not come home to us," says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion. "We get so used to our days that we are blind to their universal possibilities.

"In the beginning one-sixth of the whole world was made in a day, yet how many of us feel that we can do one-sixth, or even one-hundredth, of all the things we ought to do in one day?

"Within one day the battle of Waterloo and the battle of the Marne were won. How about all the days between? A man can change the fortune of his entire life in a day."

Utility.

"They're going to build a sausage factory on the golf course."

"What for?"

"To make use of the links, I presume."

Its Nature.

"My dog can scent a storm hours off."

"Then his nose must be something of a storm scenter."

Sneezing In Persia.

The well known superstition that to sneeze once is a bad omen seriously interferes with many of the duties and pleasures of the Persian. When he is so unfortunate as to sneeze once he quickly says, "Sebar amad" (a time for waiting has come), and for at least two hours thereafter he cannot be persuaded to take medicine, start on a journey or begin any new or important work. A missionary surgeon who has more than once had to postpone an operation because he or the patient sneezed once says: "I have now become an adept at producing double sneezes."

A Beginning.

Two college freshmen of the male persuasion were looking at a counter of magazines which had the usual pretty girl covers.

"There's a rather good one," remarked one.

His companion cast an appraising eye upon the golden haired, blue eyed little thing on the cover.

"Yes," he drawled, "but she has an incipient face."

Value Trebled.

Spiteful.

Self Reminder.

French And British Are Again On The Offensive

Allies Strike Another Hard Blow on Flanders Front ---Satisfactory Progress is Made in New Drive, the French Capturing a Village and Hundreds of Prisoners---Both Paris and London Announce Gains.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By The Associated Press.)

BRITISH FRONT IN BELGIUM, October 26.—Field Marshal Haig's forces this morning made two separate attacks on the German positions north and east of Ypres. The first was from a point near Saint Jansbeck westward through the southern fringe of the Houthulst Ridge to the region of Nieuwemolen. The other assault was on both sides of the Ypres-Menin highway along the Cheluvelt Ridge in the direction of the town of that name. The British troops, as well as the French, who also attacked on the left, made excellent headway, pushing forward on a wide front. A group of enemy guns on the high ground southeast of Cheluvelt, consituting one of the main defenses, was comparatively quiet. This probably was due to the British heavy bombardment last night. Many explosions were seen in the region of these batteries during the night. Again one of the greatest barrages yet seen was employed by the attackers. The preliminary bombardment was made more effective by the recent moving forward of the guns over the marshy ground. A brisk wind had dried the ground wonderfully.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 26.—The village of Draeibank, Papegoed Wood, and a number of fortified farms were captured by the French in an attack launched this morning on the Flanders front, the War Office reports. Hundreds of prisoners were taken.

The statement follows: At 5:45 o'clock this morning attacks were launched by the French and British armies north, northeast and east of Ypres. The Allied troops are reported to be making satisfactory progress. Rain fell heavily during the latter part of the night and is still continuing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 26.—The French and British troops are attacking to-day in the Ypres region, the War Office announces.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 26.—Russian forces on the Werder coast of Bethonia yesterday repulsed a German detachment, the Russian War Office announced to-day. Part of the German naval squadron, including some Dreadnoughts, the statement adds, is anchored in Kuivast Bay on the eastern side of Moon Island in the Gulf of Riga.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBOROUGH

His Majesty the King, the British Parliament and People, have sent out an urgent call to Canada for assistance to the British Red Cross.

The need is greater, the demand more insistent, than ever before. Toronto has just given $850,000.00, and other cities in proportion. Our own City Council has wisely and generously granted $5,000.00 as a start. Last year a similar grant was supplemented by private subscription to nearly $9,000.00. This year I am asked to urge our good people to make it at least $10,000.00. Will we do it? We can if we will.

No personal canvas will be made, but private subscriptions are urgently asked and sorely needed. Please send them to Mr. Peter Campbell, Treasurer of the local fund, who will be pleased to acknowledge all such, large and small, both personally and through the local press.

COUNTY TEACHERS HOLD THEIR ANNUAL CONVENTION

Helpful and Instructive Papers Were Read Yesterday at the Two Sessions Held Yesterday in the Normal School.

ATTENDANCE WAS LARGE

The annual convention of the teachers in Peterborough County was held yesterday in the Assembly Hall of the Normal school. The first session opened at 9.30 a.m., with Miss Mae Edgar as president.

A few business items were dealt with before the regular programme commenced.

Miss S. Hamilton and Mr. Hamblin gave very excellent reports of the O. E.A. convention held in Toronto at Easter.

Miss McRae dealt very helpfully with the difficulties experienced by the teachers in teaching Art. She advised doing a few things well and giving the child a thorough grounding for the Art that followed in Collegiate work.

On Thursday afternoon the President, Miss Edgar, gave a very inspiring paper on 'Ideals.' She defined the ideal teacher as one who con put herself completely aside, who is a pleasant companion, a just judge, and who is enthusiastic, patient and perseveringing.

This was followed by a very interesting and instructive address by Mr. Ingall, B.A., on 'the play period in rural schools. The listlessness of children at recess had aroused his interest and sympathy. He defined play as a desire for activity and expressed his opinion that th cultivation of play in rural sections would help the "back to the land" movement. He advised that rural schools should be used as play centres for the community. He said that so much calisthenics tends to kill free play spirit, gave Germany as an example and contrasted with its stern drill the wholesome outdoor sports of the British Isles, which had developed the endurance so noticeable in our soldiers. Play has four outstanding values. Firstly, its physical value is apparent in its working off of surplus energy and giving relief from fatigue. Secondly, its social value. The mingling with others tends to social efficiency. Thirdly, pedagogically. The children are more delighted to learn. Lastly, play should supplement the studies.

He discussed the three kinds of play: (1) Aimless play, (2) Free play; (3) Supervised play, and closed with earnest advice to the teachers to encourage play among their pupils.

This was followed by papers on 'School Gardens' by Misses Hamilton and Klink.

Miss Hamilton advised all teachers to take the summer course at Guelph. A very humorous description of difficulties encountered in the work was given. The crowning event of her garden work was the participation of thirty-five people of a pot of soup made from vegetables grown by the pupils.

Miss Klink gave an interesting and helpful paper on the merits of teaching agriculture. She referred to the extent to which it figures on the rural school curriculum in the western schools. She declared that the day of teaching the three "R's" had passed away and has changed to the three "H's"—the hand, the head and the heart.

Mr. G. E. Broderick, Public School Inspector, gave a helpful talk on Composition and urged the teachers to test work orally and to give the pupils suitable selections.

THIS MORNING'S SESSION.

Candidates examined	28
Placed in A Category	14
Placed in B Category	3
Placed in E Category	4

There were not quite as many men reporting for examination at the Armouries this morning as usual, but at that enough have registered to keep the Board busy for the balance of the week.

Exactly two-thirds of those examined to-day went into A category, fourteen out of twenty-one being marked fit for the trenches. Only four were rejected. There were a number of city men among those examined, although the majority were from outside points.

The Cobourg Heavy Battery, Cobourg, Ont., is recruiting men for Heavy Artillery.

Placed in A Category	32
Placed in B Category	2
Placed in E Category	19

The Medical Board at the Armouries are keeping up their steady gait, and yesterday saw fifty-three candidates examined, of which thirty-two were placed in A category. This is about the same percentage as usual. Two other candidates were pronounced fit for non-combatant service overseas, and nineteen were rejected outright.

Twenty-three were examined in the morning, seventeen going in category A and seven being rejected.

In the afternoon just half of the candidates who went before the Board were assigned to A category. There were twenty examined, with the results as follow:

Category A	10
Category B	2
Category E	8

The ten who were examined at night split fifty-fifty between the trench class and the totally rejected. The figures were:

GERMANS WORRYING

Are Complaining in Advance of Allied "Brutality" in Planning Reprisal Air Raids on German Cities —Hun Officials Trying to Allay Apprehension

MORE GERMAN BLUFF

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John Grandens.)

BERLIN, Via London, Oct. 26.— If the Allies, and England in particular, hope by brutality in bombing unfortified German cities to bring Germany to her knees, that hope is in vain, according to the belief expressed in the highest German official quarters today.

The United Press was told on the highest authority that the Entente should not forget that there are numerous French cities in easy reach of German bombing air fleets, if the allies, including America, carry out any programme of attack on open German towns:

This same authoritative source declared:

"The British press tries to comfort the British population with assurances that at the beginning of the winter cessation of the Flanders battle, English air fleets, aided by numerous new English, American and Italian planes, will bombard fortified and unfortified German cities.

"We know the allies are incapable of an increased air offensive. Our enemies hope the lack of raw material will force us to our knees. That hope is fruitless. We have solved the problem of substitutes so well that the English are considering whether they should not imitate some of these substitutes.

"Our raids on London are justified. Lloyd George in June, 1915, declared that London had become a second Woolwich. (Note—Woolwich is one of England's great arsenals and munition plants.)

Hitherto, whereas our enemies have incessantly bombed open towns, such as Karlsruhe, Frankfort Au Main, Baden, Freiburg and Tuebingen, the effect of such brutalities on the population has been the opposite of that intended. It has strengthened the public's determination to hold on."

AN ASTOUNDING SPECTACLE.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A Germany that orders repeated "baby killing" aerial raids over England and France, and pursues a murder policy on the sea, no less than on the land, now complaining, in advance, of allied "brutality," is the astounding spectacle presented in the Berlin despatch to-day.

Officials expressed intense interest in the authoritative interview sent by the United States staff correspondent in Berlin. It was regarded as a strenuous effort of the Kaiser's war machine to allay apprehension caused by England's recent announcement of a reprisal policy which would demand "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" off Germany for her aerial assassinations.

BRITISH CAVALRY IN ACTION

Horsemen Get Their Chance in To-day's Big Flanders Drive

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Wm. Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Oct. 26.—Fifty-five minutes after the British forces went over the top early to-day in a concerted Anglo-French drive, German pill boxes, 2,000 yards distant, succumbed to the fury of their attack.

Half an hour later the same fighting British were swarming in desperate battle around Poidhook Chateau.

In the fighting at Cheluvelt to-day the British horsemen were fighting astride for the first time in months. Haig flung his cavalry into the fray and they fought successfully. They were also reported in action around Passchaendaele.

The 2,000 yard initial gain was to the west of Passchendaele. From there the line of the attack apparently extended to as far north as Houthulst forest, where, at the time this is written, British forces have made good progress. To the south, there was fighting as far down the line as Cheluvelt.

FRANK JENNE Says:

I am showing in my window to-day some beautiful new silk cravats, Swiss silks that just reached me the day before. In my other window you will see a new trench coat. "Come to me."

Germany Has Suffered Her Greatest Defeat Of The Year

Demoralized by Trip - Hammer Blows of General Petain's Forces Huns Are Abandoning Their Guns to Retreat Across the Ailette Valley and the Aisne and Oise Canal.

ENEMY LOSSES HEAVY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Oct. 26. — With every hour to-day there grew evidence that Gen. Petain's stroke on the Aisne had inflicted on Germany her greatest defeat of 1917.

Demoralized by the trip hammer blows of the great French war machine, the Germans to-day were abandoning their guns in an effort to retreat across the marshy Aillette Valley and the Aisne and Oise canal. Fighting with the desperation of men who know they are beaten, the enemy gave way for the French wedge trail to-day it has been jammed more than three miles into the pivotal base of the German line curving around the western extremity of the Chemin Des Dames.

The total capture of men has reached more than nine thousand. More than a hundred guns have been taken so far. Several hundred trench mortars and machine guns are not included in this count.

TERRIFIC ENEMY LOSSES.

Judging from prisoners' stories, and an estimate of the mangled heaps of German dead, the German losses in Tuesday's drive and Thursday's acceleration may be conservatively estimated at the equivalent to three whole German divisions, approximately 45,000 men.

In proportion to the size of the battle front, seven miles, this is the heaviest loss which Germany has ever sustained in a single series of military operations since the disastrous German retreat last spring.

Not only that, but the French victory is a cumulative one. The Poilus now dominate the entire Aillette Valley. Their hold on the observatories here practically renders untenable the German lines along the northern edge of the bloody Chemin Des Dames all the way toward Craonne, far to the east.

To-day the battle thundered on, the enemy apparently seeking to make a stand on new lines opposite to the heights of Aillette.

The new advanced French line today was an average of three and tenth miles beyond Monday's positions, over a total front of practically seven miles. Consolidation of these lines to-day swept more and more German positions in the Poilus' hands. France has already re-occupied territory between the Monkey Mountain and Pargny capturing the villages of Pinon, Pargny and Filain.

What made the Aisne victory all the more demoralizing to the German forces was the fact that on this particular ridge Hindenburg changed his favourite tactics. It had been his scheme heretofore to refuse battle and elastically to fall back to prepared new positions. Dwindling man power impelled the German High Command to husband all forces of men and not to fight and lose men where a retreat of a few hundred yards or possibly more, might save troops.

The importance of the Aisne ridge however, led Hindenburg to rush up his best troops and accept the battle offered by the French with all the power at his command. The French were victorious.

Australia's Trans continental Railway.
The completion of the new line mark s an important event in the history of the commonwealth. The section just completed is 1,060 miles long and the rail distance across the island con tinent is 3,467 miles.

A SPECTACULAR FIRE IN PLANT OF EXPLOSIVE COMPANY

Neighbourhood of Vaudreuil Rocked For an Hour This Morning by the Tremendous Explosives From the Burning Building

NO LOSS OF LIFE

Canadian Press Despatch:

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING.

Food Controller Hanna is having a hard row to hoe—a difficult task, in dealing with the food supply situation in a way to secure the best results, and cause the minimum of friction, and even hardship. The problem seems to be to save certain articles of food for export, and to encourage economy in the use of other foods. These objects in their attainment touch a wide range of detail and interests, and it is to be expected that the Food Controller may make mistakes in dealing with some phases of his many-sided problem.

He appears to have made one of these mistakes. In effect, he is throwing some of the responsibility for complaints of the high cost of living upon the suffering housewives themselves. He is, in effect, telling them that they are suffering from the enjoyment of too much cleanliness, expressed in the form of package food and has, therefore, issued an order prohibiting the sale of foods in packages, reserving for himself the right to modify his prohibition in respect of some articles, which, it is hoped, he will extensively exercise.

The only possible advantage to the consumer comes from the fractionally lessened cost to the consumer of the food, represented by the removal of the cost of the containing article—carton, box or tin; and the disadvantages from prohibition of package goods are many. In recent years the pratcice of providing certain food articles in packages has become universal, and it has much to commend it. We are compelled to wrap bread for sanitary reasons, and for the sake of cleanliness. The inconsiderable trifle of expense added by this requirement is fully offset by the knowledge of the buyer that the bread is clean and sanitary, as far as the precaution of wrapping it is concerned.

There are more advantages than one in package foods. We are assured of cleanliness and sanitary conditions, a matter of the greatest importance, especially as compared that would attend distribution of food in bulk in some unambitious grocery store where the customer cannot look for cleanliness in connection with the sale of goods in bulk.

The customer knows that no matter how untidy and unsanitary the premises or how grimy the service, that food in packages is absolutely clean, an assurance he could not have from bulk handling.

And assured cleanliness and sanitary conditions are worth paying for, especially when the extra payment for the container represents a large employment to many workers, men and women, in their preparation. In Peterborough alone the prohibition of package food would throw hundreds of girls and women out of employment.

Housewives spend money and much muscle in keeping their houses clean and sanitary. Is this money and work wasted? It would be cheaper and easier to live in dirt, except when we have to pay in doctors' bills, in pain and illness, the penalty of filthy, unsanitary homes.

The argument for selling food in packages consists, in part, in the fact that cleanliness and quality are guaranteed, both in the putting up of the article, and the subsequent handling. The manufacturer's reputation, and his profits, too, are at stake. Then the change of system in the putting up of food will create large disorganizations of elaborate and expensive establishment—mean loss of employment of the younger bread winners of families, and the saving in cost will be largely offset by disadvantages.

We all remember with something like a shudder, the foreign but easily accounted for cylindrical substances that were to be found in oatmeal in bulk, and freedom from this little horror is well worth the tiny fraction of saving that will come from making oatmeal porridge from other than sealed, and safe, and clean, and mouseless packages.

It has taken years to educate the people to the fact that as a rule the sealed packet means cleanliness and quality combined; and that foods thus put up have a reputation that can be depended upon. Vast establishments, employing many hands directly, and large contributory employment outside, will be hampered or driven out of business, and thousands will be thrown out of employment. If the saving sought were in proportion to the disadvantages, as it is not, then the decree against package foods might be justified.

One of the elements in producing the high price of milk is bottling it—selling it in sealed packages. But people are content, they prefer milk at a little higher price when they are assured of a clenliness that did not go with the old sloppy way of delivery.

Hon. Mr. Hanna's intentions are good. His object equally so; but too much cannot be said of his prohibition of package food.

The saving does not compare with the trade disturbance that must ensue, and the subjection of the people to an inconvenience, destruction of assurance of cleanliness and quality.

The Ontario Government has changed its policy. It has taken to fishing—for fish, not votes—in Lake Nipissing, in order to increase and cheapen food supplies.

ABOLITION OF PATRONAGE.

The prominnece given in the press of the statement that the Union Government has abolished patronage, seems to indicate the belief that the government thereby has done a good thing, as it has done, as it was expected to do. The Union Government was formed to help Canada do her duty better in the way of war winning. If this was to be done, the most obvious thing to do was to remove the influence that more than any other one thing destroyed the effectiveness of Canada's war administration and made a change of government necessary.

If the Union Government means what it should mean, all party, all partizan and all personal advantages are subordinated to the one work of effectively helping Canada do its share of war winning. The Union Government could do no better thing to attract approval of honest and patriotic Canadians, and increase the hostility of the place seeking and graft elements of our population, than it has done by the abolition of "patronage." If some inspired and omniscient auditor could go over the public and secret records of our war administration during the last three years, there would be revealed an astonishing waste of money, to which would be added a tale of public trust destroyed, public patrioitsm chilled, and general war-waging efficiency destroyed.

The Union Government of Canada does well to abolish patronage. If it carries this out rigidly and makes appointments and spends public money only to get value without rake-off, and efficient service; if the Union Government guides Canada in the course of war-winning without fear, favour or affection—except for right and justice, it will help bring back conditions of the "brave days of old," of which Macauley sings—

Then none was for a party;
Then al lwere for the state;
Then the great man helped the poor,
And the poor men loved the great.

The allies are to give the Germans no rest this winter. The Teutons will have to hustle instead of hibernate.

A SLICE OF BREAD.

The Result of Wasting Only One a Day In Every Home.

A single slice of bread seems an unimportant thing. In many households one or more slices of bread daily are thrown away and not used for human food. Sometimes stale quarter or half loaves are thrown out.

Yet one good sized slice of bread, such as a child likes to cut—weighs an ounce. It contains almost three-fourths of an ounce of flour.

If every one of the country's 20,000,000 homes wastes on the average only one slice of bread a day the country is throwing away daily over 14,000,000 ounces of flour—over 875,000 pounds, or enough flour for over a million one-pound loaves a day. For a full year at this rate there would be a waste of over 319,000,000 pounds of flour—1,500,000 barrels of flour—enough to make 365,000,000 loaves.

As it takes four and one-half bushels of wheat to make a barrel of ordinary flour, this waste would represent the flour from over 7,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Fourteen and nine-tenths bushels of wheat on the average are raised per acre. It would take the fruit of some 470,000 acres just to provide a single slice of bread to be wasted daily in every home.

To produce this much flour calls for an army of farmers, railway men and flour mill people. To get the flour to the consumer calls for many freight cars and the use of many tons of coal.

But, some one says, a full slice of bread is not wasted in every home. Very well. Make it a daily slice for every four or even ten or every thirty homes, make a weekly or monthly slice in every home or make the wasted slice thinner. The waste of flour involved is still appalling, altogether too great to be tolerated when wheat is scarce.

Any waste of bread is inexcusable when there are so many ways of using stale bread to cook delicious dishes.

A Link With Primitive Times.

All ceremonial maces at court, in parliament, of learned societies and municipal bodies, field marshals' batons, gold and silver sticks, etc., are descended from the heavy fighting sticks and clubs of primitive savages. The chiefs always had the best carved clubs, which were the symbols of prowess and authority. The Australian boomerang and the Irish shillalah are both maces.—London Standard.

Birds Weigh Themselves.

An ingenious naturalist has been making the tomtits record their weight. In order to obtain the food which he places for them they have to alight upon what appears to be a twig, but is in reality the beam of a tiny scale. As they rest upon it so they register their weight, which averages about one-third of an ounce per bird—forty-eight tomtits to the pound.

LIFTING HEAVY WEIGHTS.

How to Work Without Straining the Muscles of the Back.

During housecleaning season it is not uncommon to hear many complaints of backache. Oftentimes the muscles of the back have actually been strained from lifting or lugging at heavy rugs, etc., and there is reason for the pain and discomfort manifested. Fortunately there is a way to lift heavy weights without straining the muscles of the back. "A well known metallurgical company," says Popular Mechanics, "has recently issued instructions showing the right and wrong way to lift heavy objects, such as ingots and castings.

"The way which is condemned and which many workmen thoughtlessly follow consists in grasping the load with both hands while stooping over and scarcely bending the legs at all. Lifting in this posture throws most of the weight on the lower part of the back, where the muscles are weakest, and may produce a severe strain or rupture.

"The proper way is to grasp the load after squatting down close to it, so that the knees are drawn well up against the body. Lifting in this manner throws the weight on the thighs and shoulders, which are strong and best suited to the severe stress that comes in raising the body to an erect posture."

Colony Convicts.

Virginia was the only colony which ever received convicts, and very few were sent there, and most of those sent were political prisoners. The aristocratic element predominated. In 1676 parliament forbade the transportation of convicts to English colonies in America.

C. G. E. Engineer Seriously Injured

Mr. P. Allison Sustained a Fractured Skull

Mr. Philip L. Allison, engineer at the C. G. E., was seriously injured last night at 5.30 at the works. He had climbed up to attend to an electric motor 15 feet above the ground, when in some way he lost his hold and dropped to the cement floor.

Dr. Gallivan was called immediately and Allison was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where it was found that he had fractured his skull and broken several ribs. Although he has regained consciousness, he is in so serious a condition that a consultation has been called this afternoon to ascertain the extent of his injuries.

HUMAN TANKS TO FACE MACHINE GUNS.—Though modern science has invented terrible weapons, there has been a tendency to use the ancient appliances in a new form. For instance, various experiments have been tried with different kinds of body armour, and this photo shows how the Italian soldiers go forward to attack against the the Austrian machine guns.

The

Nordheimer Piano

The important Point to consider when you select a piano is not how it looks and sounds today, but how it will look and sound ten or twenty years from now, and what it will cost in tuning bills in the meantime.

Almost any piano will look well and sound well when it is new. That is what makes the selection difficult.

How can an inexperienced person choose wisely? Sometimes—but not always—by the reputation of the maker. ALWAYS by the reputation of the seller. There are some piano houses that will not sell an instrument that is not good all through.

This house is one of them. See the Local Representative.

"Peterboro' The Electric City"

Article Appeared in a Recent Issue of the "Onward" a Sunday School Paper For Young People—Many of the Features of the City Enumerated

Last week's issue of the "Onward," a Sunday School paper for young people, contains an interesting article, written by the Rev. R G. Peever, former pastor of George Street Methodist Church, now of London, Ont., under the heading of Canadian Cities, entitled "Peterborough, the Electric City." Included with the article is a picture of the Lift Locks, the Quaker Oats Company's plant before it was destroyed by fire, and a view of the city from the tower of George Street Methodist Church. The article reads as follows:

Peterborough, on the Otonabee River, is a city of some twenty-three thousand inhabitants, some seventy-five miles from Toronto, and thirty miles inland from Port Hope on the Lake Ontario shore, with excellent G. T. R. and C. P. R. connections to all points, north, south, east, and west. It lies in the centre of a rich farming country, and is picturesque because of its lovely surrounding hills, from which there drops down the rapid and winding Otonabee River, as it drains the vast Stoney Lake region of the north, and, assisted by the quiet Trent River Canal, bearing the water onward towards lovely Rice Lake, and thence by the Trent River to Trenton and Lake Ontario.

Peterborough is a hand-made city. It is not a borough of hasty growth, but the result of long, steady, and patient toil on the part of those who hewed its site out of the magnificent hardwood forests that covered the corner of one township. It did not take its name, as many think, from old Peterborough, the cathedral city of the English Midlands, but was intended to hand down to posterity the name of one who was really its founder, Hon. Peter Robinson, of most excellent memory.

The circumstances are worth remembering. The close of the Napoleonic Wars brought to Canada many settlers, for the disbanding of regiments of the line freed from military service thousands of men. These were encouraged to go out to the "colonies," and gifts of lands bestowed upon them to facilitate settlement. This was in the early twenties of the last century. The voyage across the ocean was long and tedious, and so was the march from the sea coast to the site of the future city. In many cases, those who participated in the venture brought with them only their hearts and hopes. They subsisted on the bounty of the Province while settling on the land, and devising means to resume personal occupation.

These were the days of the "Robinson" immigration, consisting of two thousand souls, Irish by lineage, habits, and association. The descendants of these people to-day are residents of the farms and of the city. Their names are reproduced in all walks of life. Their energies are factors in all activities, for the old stock never fails.

For many years the growth of the city was steady and sure; in 1850 it had a population of 2,750 souls; but with the expansion of the lumber and timber business, the increase of railroads, the building of the Trent Canal as a short cut between Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario, the development of the abundant water power, there came also many splendid industries, and large and quick additions in population and prosperity. According to the census there are now 23,000 people in Peterborough.

To-day there is hardly a city in Canada that can show the same uniformity of excellence in its stores and business plants, while a very large proportion of the homes of its citizens are owned by the occupants. As to the future, I believe Peterborough will be one of the outstanding cities of the Dominion in beauty, splendid prosperity, and industrial enterprise. Its central situation as a distributing point to a great area of wealthy country, its magnificent water power, and its natural beauty of surroundings, easily warrant this certain anticipation.

We ask what are some of the imposing features of this city, and in answer are shown its splendid educational institutions, which include a Provincial Normal School, a Collegiate Institute, and twelve capacious and well-equipped public and separate schools. The public library would grace any city. About fifteen churches, some of them magnificent, with Salvation Army Temple, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., afford a glad welcome to the thousands of our worshipping people; while two well-equipped hospitals, two homes for the aged, and two homes for dependent children, show that the sick, the poor and the needy are not forgotten. The city has several public playgrounds and many fine parks, through which wind attractive driveways and walks, and the beauty of which is enhanced by the streams which flow through them. Its public buildings, such as the armouries, the post office, the customs and inland revenue offices, are in keeping with the progress of the city.

Another striking feature that is the envy of many municipalities not so favourably situated, is the fact that it revels in hydro-electric power. In nine miles of river above Peterborough there are ten dams, and there is a drop of one hundred and forty-one feet in the flow of the water. Water-powers on the Otonabee River, which flow from the upper inland lakes, have been developed and others are being put to use as fast as called for. Thirty thousand horsepower of hydro-electric energy can be supplied. This, together with the fact that the extensive works of the Canadian General Electric Company are located there, has given Peterborough the name of the "Electric City."

On the line of the canal, almost within the city limits, is the famous hydraulic lift lock, in which the height of the lift is sixty-eight feet. It is constructed of concrete, with steel chambers to contain the boat or barge to be raised or lowered, and is said to be the largest monolithic mass of concrete in Canada, containing over 28,000 cubic yards. The actual time taken to raise a steamboat from the lower to upper reach is one and one-half minutes, and by hydraulic pressure this is done as easily as one would lift his hand.

Peterborough is justly proud of the way in which its sons have answered the call for service in the Empire's defence. In addition to contributing large numbers to units in the way of artillery, pioneers, transportation, etc., the city helped to send out the men of the first, second, and third contingents. Not content with this, she has raised (in connection with the rural district adjoining) the 93rd Battalion, said to be one of the finest corps that have been sent across the water. She is now hard at work raising another battalion, the 247th, and when this is brought up to strength, Peterborough will have gained the proud distinction of sending to the aid of the Motherland nearly 4,500 men. Compared with her population, the record will stand comparison with that of any other point in Canada, and the percentage will be equalled by very few. Her givings to patriotic funds total over $400,000. She has given her sons, her money, and of her might. Her citizens have a fine public spirit, a sense of responsibility, and the will to achieve. All effort is put forward united.

This brief sketch would be incomplete if we failed to make reference to the progress of Methodism in the city. The four fine Methodist churches of Peterborough all exemplify progress. George Street (the mother church), a massive pile, framed on the lines of the Metropolitan Church of Toronto; Trinity, the city's very newest and most commodious of Methodist erections; St. James, just expanded and completed, a church in some respects ahead of its locality, but not at all too progressive for the interests to be served; and Mark Sreet, beloved by the attendants and the people of East City, all proclaim the spirit of Methodism. From out the ranks of Peterborough Methodism, with her 2,000 families, her 2,000 Sunday School scholars, her 2,100 church members, have gone forth in days that are past many sons to take a part in the noble work of the ministry, and to bear to near and to more distant lands the messages enshrined in our church devotion and practice. Many of her splendid laymen, nursed at the breast of early Methodism, have taken first place as citizens of the land, and I merely mention the names of Cox, Stratton, Woods, Flavelle, Rutherford, and Dumble, men who have taken up the burden of good will to others, and given a helping hand to the masses.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

(Pike County, Ill., Republican)

Ladies wore bustles.
Operations were rare.
Nobody had seen a silo.
Nobody swatted the fly.
Nobody had appendicitis.
Nobody sprayed orchards.
Nobody wore white shoes.
Cream was 5 cents a pint.
Cantaloupes were muskmelons.
Milk shake was a favourite drink.
Advertisers did not tell the truth.
You never heard of a "tin Lizzie."
Doctors wanted to see your tongue.
The hired-girl drew one-fifty a week.
Farmers came to town for their mail.
Nobody "listened-in" on a telephone.
Nobody cared for the price of gasoline.
Folks said pneumatic tires were a joke.
The butcher "threw in" a chunk of liver.
Strawstacks were burned instead of baled.
People thought English sparrows were "birds."
There were no sane Fourths, nor electric meters.
Jules Verne was the only convert to the submarine.
Publishing a country newspaper was not a business.
You stuck tubes in your ears to hear a phonograph, and it cost a dime.

Couldn't Work For Fourteen Weeks Restored to Health by Tanlac

"I have actually gained twenty-five pounds and firmly believe if I had gotten Tanlac six months ago I would have been saved the awful suffering I had to endure, besides the hundreds of dollars I paid out for other medicines that did me no good." This remarkable statement was made by Nelson Sloat, a stationary fireman, employed by Goldie-McCulloch, and living at 75 State street, Galt, Ont., recently.

"When I began taking Tanlac," continued Mr. Sloat, "I was suffering with rheumatism and stomach trouble which had just about put me out of commission. My stomach went back on me something less than a year ago, I would bloat up with gas after eating and suffer for hours. I also had a terrible hurting in the pit of my stomach. Then rheumatism set in on me and I got in an awful fix. I ached all over and the pain in my hands was so intense I couldn't close my fingers. Part of the time I was flat on my back, was so nervous and miserable I couldn't sleep or rest and fell off until I weighed only one hundred and thirty-five pounds. The time I lost from work and the money I spent trying to get relief would amount to hundreds of dollars, but I kept getting worse.

"The day I started on Tanlac I hadn't been able to hit a lick of work in fourteen weeks, but Tanlac soon rested. My rheumatic trouble has left me entirely and my fingers are as nimble as they ever were. In fact, my aches and pains are all gone and I'm feeling about as well as if I hadn't been sick a day. I simply feel like a different man and can truthfully say Tanlac is what brought me out."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Limited; in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

NO INTENTION OF RETIRING

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Oct. 26.—"I have no idea of retiring," said Hon. W. A. Charlton to-day when shown a report in the morning paper stating that it was assumed that Mr. Charlton, in announcing his support of the Union Government, had "decided to retire from the turmoil of political life."

Mr. Charlton has represented Norfolk in the Commons since 1911, and it is understood he has assurances of widespread support for the coming election.

E SAVING IS POSSIBLE BY USE OF OLEOMARGARINE

Bit as Nutritious as Butter, Says Dr. Hastings alers Say Government Should Have Strict Control

e 14th of November any housewife will be able to oleomargarine, which the ays is as nutritious as but- r 34 cents per pound, thus saving of about 20 cents

rgarine is every bit as nu- butter," says Dr. Hast- less you procure the very est grade of butter, which 53 cents per pound, you an inferior article made at 45 or 46 cents. Now, first-class oleomargarine, nd cleanly manufactured, the difference come in? the price. You get just is a substitute for 15 or 16 nd less. Of course, grade s a little more palatable, y cleaner. Again, oleo- has the advantage of ger and does not become utter often does if kept." we get the first grade e it may relieve the but- n somewhat," said the e Produce Co. to-day. "I informed there are three this oleomargarine being d. The only place where nent has complete control of the manufacture is in Britain, and if United States manufacturers are allowed to place dairy or creamery butter wrappers on this stuff and fool the Canadian public, I fail to see where the advantage comes in. Of course, if it is handled properly by the manufacturer it will certainly control to a certain degree the price of butter. However, to see this thing through properly the Government should have complete control of the manufacture. Personally, I would rather sell butter, because you know then that the public are getting a straight deal."

The manager of the Robert Simpson butter department said it will bring a certain amount of competition against butter. Retail stores he says, are paying 48 to 50 cents a pound to creameries for butter and there is little or no occasion for it. The butter is being exported in large quantities by the farmers, and the Canadian people are made to suffer. Butter will still go higher, probably 60 cents before long, and if there is no substitute all we can do is grin and bear it. Everything depends on how the public take to it. I believe in certain homes it may be used for cooking purposes, but will not be eaten on the tables.

"A Daughter Of The Gods" Is A Wonder Picture

Magnificent Film Spectacle Featuring Annette Kellerman is at the Grand

A wonder picture indeed is the spectacular Fox film story, "A Daughter of the Gods," which was seen at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon and evening, and which will be shown again to-night and twice to-morrow. Magnificent photography, intensity of interest, thousands of people in action in some of the scenes, witches, fairies, mermaids, gnomes, and other creatures of fairy lore, above all Annette Kellerman, "the perfect woman" and swimmer extraordinary, combine to make "A Daughter of the Gods" a magnificent spectacle that must be seen to be appreciated. The picture, it is said, took many months to complete, as one can well believe after seeing it. A whole city had to be built, only to be destroyed during the action of the picture in a most spectacular fashion. The photography is perfect, some of the seascapes being more beautiful than anything hitherto seen on the screen. Annette Kellerman is given plenty of opportunities to display her skill as a swimmer and diver. In one scene she dives into the sea from the top of a 125-foot tower. In another she is seen tied hand and foot and battling for life in a rough sea, which is apparently about to dash her to pieces on the rocks. In still another she entertains the people of Gnomeland by a delightful exhibition of fancy diving amid most picturesque surroundings. Incidentally, her costumes are such as to demonstrate that she has considerable justification for her title "The Perfect Woman."

In some of the scenes thousands of people take part. This is particularly true of the battle episode, which is a most wonderful feature of the picture. "A Daugher of the Gods" is well worth a trip to the Grand to-night or at either performance to-morrow. The orchestral score is splendidly handled by the Grand Opera House orchestra.

LAUDER STIRS BIG AUDIENCE.

Sings a War Song Among New Numbers on His Reappearance Here.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Harry Lauder resumed his conquering way last night at the Lexington Theatre, beginning a presumably farewell American tour which will carry him over most of the country. An audience which packed the auditorium to the walls vociferously applauded his songs and then cheered itself hoarse when Lauder paid tribute to the men in France and told something of his experiences on the other side. Seldom, in fact, has a New York audience been so aroused, and their enthusiasm was an eloquent tribute to the powers of Lauder, who moved them to alternate laughter and tears.

The Lauder songs, of course, are more than songs. They are character studies, and their rendition last night Lauder proved once more that he is the best of all solo entertainers. The best of his new numbers is a swinging war song "The Lads Who Fought and Won," and there also is an entertaining number called "I'm Going to Marry 'Arry on the Fifth of January." The only one of his old songs which he gave last night was "The Wee Hoose Among the Heather," rendered after loud and repeated demands from the audience. "It is nae more a song; it's a hymn," was Lauder's introductory phrase.

The finale of the evening's entertainment was a presentation of colours to the New York Scottish Regiment.

IRELAND A REPUBLIC

Canadian Press Despatch:

DUBLIN, Oct. 26.— The Sinn Fein conference reporting 250,000 members at its session, last night decided that the members of the organization should be trained in use of arms. Conference promised that the Provisional government of Ireland would be established without delay and adopted a provisional constitution aimed at securing international recognition of Ireland as an independent republic.

Editor of the Examiner.

Peterborough, 26th Oct., 1917.

Dear Sir,—II read Mr. Wearing's letter in your last night's issue, and also articles under the headings "Incomprehensible profits beyond the dreams of avarice," and "The Premier says it is not his fault."

I do not agree with Mr. Wearing that the new Government should be supported, because it is not truly representative, and it would seem that this patched-up affair, which is called a Union Government, is designed to keep most of the late Government in power, which, to use his own phrase, had a "ghastly record." Besides, a Union Government could have been formed two years ago and deserved the title of the Win-the-War Government without any question whatever.

It would seem; judging by the Premier's letter to Mr. Burnham, that labour should be represented; and the Premier and Mr. Lloyd-George have publicly stated that "the soul of the nation is the working class," coupled with the farmer; that they supply the soldiers, make munitions, clothing, grow the food, and all other necessary war work. The Examiner says that seven-eighths of the Army is made up of the working classes, and the question which arises is, What representation have they in Parliament?

It would seem that the old parties should be given a rest, and one that represents the soldier, sailor, farmer —the "soul of the nation," in fact—given a chance. This can only be doe by electing one of the new Labour Party's candidates; and what could be better than for Peterborough to lead the way? That, at least, is the wish of AMERICAN DOCTORS AT YPRES.

Did Splendid Work under Heavy Shellfire, for Haig's Wounded.

British Front in France and Belgium.—American surgical teams have again been doing magnificent work in advanced casualty clearing stations since the latest offensive began, a number of surgeons and helpers being under heavy shellfire at times.

At one station, out in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Menin road, several surgeons and assistants have been laboring steadily since Thursday morning. Those who have seen them at the operating table, while the shells that they have never seen a demonstration of greater coolness than was shown by these men who wielded the knife to save life during those nerve-racking times.

Those who are acquainted with the ordinary hospital operating room and know how much care is taken to prevent noise and interruption can well realize what it means to carry on a delicate operation while great shells are exploding close at hand.

Another American surgical team has been working in a German prisoner camp; where the wounded captives are taken. There are still others scattered about at various points.

How Alderman Dobbin Overcomes The Difficulty Of Getting Nut Coal

Buys the Egg Size and Breaks It Up at Home—Ald. Weir Indicates a Factor That May Curtail Shipments of Small Sizes to Canada This Year.

As chairman of the Council committee that manages the municipal coal depot, Ald. Dobbin could doubtless have filled his bins for the winter's requirements. The way was open to him but he did not take advantage of his position, and to-day he is among the citizens who are without nut coal for range fires. However, he has solved the problem to his own satisfaction and has advised others to go and do likewise.

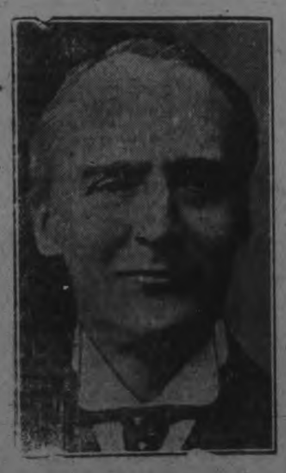
While the supply of nut coal is short, in the egg size it is more plentiful. Ald. Dobbin ordered some of this grade, and with an iron pounder breaks up the "eggs" until they have been reduced to the size of nut and pea coal. He dumps a quantity of the egg coal into a stout box and attacks it with an iron pounder. The operation is not laborious, and furthermore the quality is superior to the nut coal received from the mines. Ald. Dobbin pointed out that in the smaller sizes pieces of slate, which have comparatively little fuel value, are scarcely noticeable though they may form a considerable percentage of a car load, but in the egg size the coal has been more carefully picked over and is practically all of the best quality. This is an evident advantage that may compensate the home labour of reduction. While the plan demands a certain amount of exercise in pounding the eggs it is preferable to having no nut coal at all, and should serve some of the citizens until the retailers receive the expected shipments of the smaller sizes.

Is This a Factor?

Ald. Weir remarked yesterday that the United States Fuel Controller may have included steam coal in his considerations when he issued a recent regulation regarding the Canadian allowance. If Dr. Garfield has acted on that basis, Mr. Weir, who is a member of the fuel firm of Weir and McCarthy, believes that this may seriously affect the supply of nut and egg coal received here this winter and cause trouble to house holders. Practically all the users of steam coal in Peterborough are prepared for the winter's siege. One manufacturing company, Ald. Weir was informed, had enough steam coal to feed its fires until January, 1919. Practically every manufacturing concern in the city is well supplied, and in other cities doubtless the same condition prevails. Ald. Weir stated that if these quantities of steam coal were to be included in the Canadian allowance from the United States this year there would necessarily be a proportionate curtailment in the receipts of the smaller sizes. If this is the situation it is felt that, in the interests of householders the facts should be presented to Dr. Garfield.

To Prevent Hoarding.

The reported announcement to-day that Mr. Magrath, Canada's coal controller, will prevent the hoarding of coal by householders next year is a proposal that Mr. R. Hicks has frequently advocated. He pointed out that it would not be difficult for retail dealers to keep an accurate account of the coal delivered to the homes in Peterborough and if a maximum amount were allowed for each home the dealers could refuse orders in excess of that quantity. There will be no action on this basis until next spring, when it is promised to become effective.



Rt. Hon. Henry E. Duke, Chief Secretary for Ireland, who told the British Commons that in February last the Government had deported prisoners from Germany because Germany was again offering a helping hand to the Sinn Feiners.

Tributes To The Late Mrs. McKee

The service for the late Mrs. Gladstone McKee, held last night at the Mark street parsonage, was attended by all the Methodist clergy of the city, and Rev. Mr. Lewis, formerly pastor of the Mark street church, also practically all the parishoners of Bridgenorth, where Mrs. McKee was so dearly loved during her life in that village. The clergy who spoke of the deceased, paid a warm tribute to the memory of Mrs. McKee. The remains were sent to-day to Smithfield for interment.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON'S SESSION OF THE CITY TEACHERS' CONVENTION

The afternoon session of the Peterborough City Teachers' Convention met in the Public Library Assembly Room, at 2 o'clock, Thursday afternoon.

The session opened with a report of the delegates to the Ontario Educational Association. This consisted of a clear, comprehensive and profitable collection of facts as gathered from various speakers at the O. E. A.

Miss E. Thomas and Mr. L. J. Colling took charge of this portion of the programme in a very effective and interesting manner.

This report was followed by a paper on Composition given by Miss M G. Oakley, B.A., Paed.

To not teach Composition in a proper manner would be our best to discard the best interests of education and rob the pupil of opportunities self expression, which plays so important a part in the life of a child. Language is an art and Composition is the means to cultivate it.

Our aim should be to abolish self-consciousness, and to aid pupils in free, clear and comprehensive speech. The weight of this responsibility falls upon the primary teacher, whose duty it is to form the foundation for more advanced education.

A most helpful outline in method for development of this free expression on the part of pupils was then given.

Teachers having heard this address could not but feel additional responsibility and in efficiency this subject, which plays so important part in the educational life of those in their care.

Mr. J. M. Roszel then delivered a forceful and eloquent address on the topic "The War and the School". He showed the wonderful opportunities the teachers of to-day have for building up true greatness in the nation of to-morrow. A plan of study was suggested which gave due credit to the place of the British Navy and to Britain, and her Colonies, as being the obstacle in the way to prevent Germany domineering the world, and forever destroying the Liberty, Democracy and Internationalism which must stand if lasting peace be found. Due prominence was given to the events, which have built up imperishable honour of Canadian troops.

Children must be educated to a life of service, and the life of service must be one of sacrifice. They must see that the cause of the Allies is just; that of stern necessity they fight for world freedom; they must be taught to hate war and its desolation, to love to live, each for all and all for each.

Thus may be laid the foundation of a lasting peace.

ADDRESS BY CHANCELLOR McCRIMMON WAS ENJOYED

Eloquent and instructive was the address that was delivered last evening by Chancellor McCrimmon in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. For upwards of an hour the speaker held the unwavering interest of a capacity gathering as he developed some of the outstanding features of the British Empire. His remarks were punctuated by frequent applause, and towards the close the gifted speaker favoured the auditors with several poetic gems that served to emphasize the subject in hand.

Chancellor McCrimmon, upon being introduced by Mr. Malcolm N. Clarke, principal of the King Edward School, said that he considered it an honour to speak under the auspices of the Teachers' Institute. The whole of his active life had been spent in teaching, from the rural school at the cross-roads to post-graduate work in the University. No other profession, except possibly the ministry, exercises such an influence on the community—a fact that is not fully appreciated by the public.

A Large Subject.

"The British Empire is rather a large subject," said the speaker. "It is not with any spirit of red-eyed jingoism that I approach this subject, but rather to deal with some of the responsibilities that fall upon us as British subjects. There are fifty-two million square miles of territory on the globe, and of this amount twelve or fourteen million square miles, or one-quarter of the earth's surface, is under British rule. This territory is distributed over every continent. The greater part of this territorial expansion has been brought about since the death of Elizabeth in 1603. By the spirit of adventure, colonization, and various other methods this territory has accumulated to the British flag. It is about nine times the size of the German Empire.

Repopulation.

Turning to the question of population, we have on the earth's surface seventeen hundred thousand million people. One-half of this number is in two empires. In the British Empire there are four hundred and thirty-four million people, and in China there are about the same number. We have sixty million of a white population to govern and educate into political understanding and national economy three hundred and seventy million non-white people. We have five times the population of the German Empire. Some of the products of this great Empire consist of one-quarter of the world's best coal supply and one-eighth of the world's supply of steel. 'That is pretty fair for a decadent Empire, as the Kaiser called it,'" observed Chancellor McCrimmon.

"One-third of the world's commerce is in the hands of the British Empire, and before the war Great Britain's commerce was two and one-half times as large as that of Germany. Calculating this commerce on a per capita basis, this amounts to one hundred and twenty-five dollars for every man, woman, and child, while that of Germany amounts to sixty-seven dollars per capita.

"'That is a pretty fair showing for a decrepit and decadent old Empire, and Great Britain went to war because she was afraid of her commerce,' according to the philosophy of the Kaiser," jocularly added the speaker.

Question of Defence.

Another phase of the situation is represented by the question of defence. In this regard Britain requires and maintains a large dominating Fleet with which to preserve communication with the integral parts of the Empire. All over this vast Empire have been developed strategic points as represented by coaling stations, harbours, and other means of communication. Of course, the whole world was in danger of the German fleet, but the German fleet never came out," said the Chancellor. "Of recent years it has been impossible to stand off in splendid isolation as Great Britain did for many years, and that is where the question of alliances creep into the foreign policy. Britain has always adhered to the open door policy. In the matter of Government, we have the Imperial Government for the British Isles and self-government for the Colonies. In both forms of government we have political and democratic freedom. To substitute this for the present confining and autocratic government of Germany would be a tragedy on civilization."

After the War.

In conclusion, the speaker touched on a number of problems that are likely to arise after the war, including the question of admitting the Hindus in view of their part in the present conflict, and also the question of local defence. "It is wonderful when you think of the heritage that has been handed down to us," said Chancellor McCrimmon.

Rev. Mr. Pogue moved a hearty vote of thanks for the eloquent address delivered by Chancellor McCrimmon. This was seconded by Mr. Vincent Eastwood, and unanimously endorsed by the gathering.

Should Have A Unionist Convention

This Is Necessary in Order to Successfully and Fairly Meet the Views of Both Parties

Discussing the meeting to be held on Tuesday evening next for the object of selecting a win-the-war candidate who will represent the Win-the-War League, one prominent citizen to-day said:

"To successfully and fairly meet the views of both parties in this all-important matter the executive committees of both parties should get together and agree upon a Unionist Convention. A meeting of this kind should be attended by duly accredited elected representatives of both political parties. Two representatives of no particular party who for years have benefited from Government contracts, should not take it upon themselves to decide the destiny of all others in a political sense. Moreover, they will not attempt to do so if they desire the co-operation and approval of all parties. Both Liberals and Conservatives should join in a convention after the executives of both parties have decided to call a "Win-the-War" Convention."

Two Brothers Wounded, Now Third Is Missing

Pte. J. C. Armstrong Formerly of 93rd is Reported by Ottawa To-day

Mr. Albert Armstrong, Douro Road, has received official word from Ottawa that his son, Pte. John Clayton Armstrong, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded and missing since August 15th. This is the first official word Mr. Armstrong has had of his son, although he had unofficially heard that he was wounded. Since then his father had been unable to get any further news.

Pte. J. C. Armstrong was one of three brothers who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion. They were transferred in a draft to the 10th Battalion. Last May Pte. Wilbert Armstrong was wounded, and in August the other brother, Pte. Peter Armstrong, was hit and the two are in hospital in England. Now the third brother has been reported missing.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

WEST-ENDS WIN TWO FROM EUREKAS.

Last night in a five-pin League fixture, played on the Water Street Alleys, the West-Ends won two of the three games from the Eurekas. The games were evenly contested, the West-Ends winning the first game by 10 pins. The second game ended in a tie, and an extra frame had to be rolled, the Eurekas finally winning out. The third game was an easy win for the West-Ends. Sullivan, for the West-Ends, had high three game, with 452 for a total; while I. Gordon topped the Eureka pin-spillers with a 430 total. The scores were as follow:

To-night: Eko Club vs. Frontenacs.

Benny Leonard in U. S. Uniform.—Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, is in Uncle Sam's service, who will teach the soldier boys the art of self defence in one of the training camps. Benny has already received his appointment as a boxing director, but he has not yet received his assignment. The photo shows him in his uniform.

The boxing directors are being selected with great care; only the best men are being appointed to train the soldiers. Last night in New York Leonard beat Jack Britton, ex-welter-weight champion, the most skillful boxer in the ring. Britton has fought many of the best fighters of his weight in the business, and has never been knocked out. Usually, like Leonard, Britton escapes unmarked, but he was cut up a bit last night.

WET OR WASHED EGGS.

They Spoil Easily and Cause an Enormous and Needless Loss.

Eggs are needlessly spoiled every year by washing and wetting. Approximately 5,016,000 dozen eggs spoil every year because some one has let clean eggs get wet or has washed dirty eggs before sending them to market, according to the specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Careful investigation of large quantities of stored eggs show that from 17 to 22 per cent of washed eggs become worthless in storage, whereas only 4 to 8 per cent of dirty eggs stored unwashed spoil. The explanation is simple.

Water removes from the shell of the egg a gelatinous covering which helps keep air and germs out of the inside of the egg. Once the covering is removed by washing or rain which gets to eggs in the nest, germs and mold have ready access to the contents and spoil the eggs.

The enormous loss in storage eggs largely can be prevented if producers and egg handlers, especially during March, April and May, refrain from washing eggs destined for the storage markets and take pains to reduce the number of dirty eggs by providing plenty of clean, sheltered nests for their hens.

In view of this great loss of valuable food the department urges country storekeepers and hucksters not to accept washed eggs for shipment in case lots. Shiny eggs, especially in the early spring, probably have been washed. All washed eggs purchased should be sold locally for immediate consumption.

CREDIT AS CAPTAL.

Use It, Invest It, but Do Not Impair Nor Squander It.

A prominent member of the financial district, who has had many ups and downs—financially—who has been independently rich on several different occasions and who has as frequently been in the place where he did not know where next month's rent might come from, states unequivocally that "credit is a man's best capital."

He says that credit is something that may be invested and used to great advantage in business, but should not be squandered, lived on or worn away. "A man's credit may outlast a dozen fortunes and enable him to succeed on another attempt," he avers, and states further that he has recently written something to the effect that it is useless and foolish to advise men to keep out of debt. Useless, because men who are not so constituted cannot keep out of debt, and foolish because the great majority of men cannot do business without credit.

"To use one's credit in business may be a wise and profitable investment, but to live on credit and thus wear it away is always dangerous. A man should live on what he earns and invest his credit only after careful investigation, and when his best judgment convinces him that it will be safe and likely to yield a profit."

The author of the foregoing is now in circumstances of affluence after having lost nigh well on to a dozen fortunes. He attributes his final success to the fact that he never abused his credit.

Pay, Pray and Peg Away.

In a Long Island village there used to be and still is a group of people who thought a good deal of each other in spite of what they said, which was frequently of an unsympathetic nature. The group existed under various self imposed names and had a semihumorous motto, which ran, "Pay, pray and peg away."

All the members of this little association are still alive, kicking and good natured.

It seems a good idea to suggest that their motto be made public and urged for more general adoption.

A Pie Without Flour or Lard.

Two and one-half cupfuls cold boiled rice, one-half cupful sugar, one-half cupful milk, one egg, one teaspoonful butter, a pinch of salt, grated nutmeg or flavoring to taste, fruit. Brush a pie plate with butter and spread the rice even on the plate. Beat half the sugar, the egg, milk, salt and flavoring together and pour over the rice. Cover top with halves of canned peaches or stewed dried peaches and sprinkle the rest of sugar over the fruit. Put in moderate oven and bake thirty-five minutes.

Any fruit can be used, either fresh, canned or dried stewed fruit.—Mrs. Anna B. Scott in Philadelphia North American.

He Liked It.

Jock Russell was a farm servant. One day when Mrs. Brown, the farmer's wife, went into the milk house she found Jock down on his knees before a milk pan, skimming the cream off with his finger and putting it in his mouth.

"Oh, Jock, Jock," she exclaimed, "I don't like that!"

"Ah, wumman," replied Jock, "ye dinna ken whit's guid for ye."—Pearson's Weekly.

They Get Busy.

"I suppose a great many ask for information who have no idea of taking a train?"

"Yes," said the weary official. "When some people spy a free bureau of information there's a strong temptation to stock up."

Literature.

"Dasher your favorite author? Why, he doesn't average one short story a year."

"That's why he's my favorite author."

It is better to say, "This one thing I do" than to say, "These forty things I fabble in."

NAPS BETWEEN EDITIONS.

They Have a Nice, Easy Going Way on Newspapers In Japan.

Eleven o'clock at night in an American morning paper is the rush hour. Typewriters click frantically, and copy boys haven't a minute to sit down and digest the baseball scores. It's the time of night when the editors are widest awake.

I chose that time, therefore, to visit the office of the Nichi Nichi, in Tokyo, says Archie Bell in the World Outlook. I wanted to find things moving at their height. The Nichi Nichi is a big morning daily, popular with the masses.

Presenting myself at the sidewalk entrance of the big building in which it is published, I roused a couple of sleeping porters, who allowed me to pass. Every one I encountered in the anterooms was asleep, with the exception of some office boys, who were preparing tea. It was like walking through the palace of the Sleeping Beauty, where every one had been sent to sleep in the midst of his task.

I was taken to the office of the telegraph editor. Fortunately, he was awake.

"The first edition has gone to press, so virtually every one has gone to sleep," he said to me, "but we will take a look around."

And what he said was true. We went to editorial sanctums, one after another, and when we didn't nearly stumble over an editor asleep on the floor we found him stretched out asleep on his desk.

Japanese editors do not believe in keeping awake at night when waiting for the late news to come in. If they do not publish it today or tomorrow they may be able to get it in the next day. What is the use of killing an article because something of greater importance arrives later in the evening? The newer stuff will make good "copy" for another day.

TALE OF A MIGHTY WARSHIP.

And the Wreck of Her Armor Plated Turret and Twelve Inch Gun.

Captain Haddock, who succeeded Captain Smith of the Titanic as commodore of the White Star line, was made commander of Great Britain's dummy fleet. The dummy fleet was an auxiliary that had an important duty in the North sea in the early days of the great world war.

The fleet consisted of converted merchantmen. In most cases the conversion was superficial. The vessels included liners, tramps and fast channel steamers. Papier mache made an important substitution for armor plate and armament which helped the deception. Guns of all kinds were mounted, the big ones, however, being more awe inspiring at a distance than effective as weapons.

With this armament the dummy fleet kept up a steady patrol and at a distance deceived many a German observer into reporting the presence of warships.

Admiral Haddock's flagship looked an imposing vessel in her "low visibility gray," with twelve inch guns fore and aft. Naval discipline in the dummy fleet was an innovation that had not worked into the souls of the erstwhile merchant mariners; otherwise this story might have had a sadder sequel in a court martial.

One of the tars was having his "time off." The air was good, the sea was calm, and he sought to beguile the hours with a comfortable smoke on the promenade deck (she was a converted liner). He sat on the stern rail dangling his legs. His teeth lost the grip on his pipe. The pipe fell. The tar made a wild grasp into space. He, too, fell and crashed through the armor plated turret and smashed one of the twelve inch guns.

A Cheerful Mind.

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." The correctness of this latter statement is seen in the fact that it is much easier for a person to recover from an attack of illness if he is cheerful and hopeful than when he is either indifferent as to his recovery or despairs of it. This is also altogether aside from the strength of purpose which often helps one to throw off an illness by sheer force of will.

Just as the bodily health is improved by cheerfulness so the mental condition is equally benefited by it.

Enlarged Veins.

A physician says that continuous drinking of alcoholic beverages is a common cause of the distension of minute blood vessels, particularly about the face and nose. These blood vessels are influenced each time alcohol in any quantity is taken into the system, and finally the elasticity of the walls is destroyed, and the veins become permanently enlarged, and "red nose" and "red face" result.

Cold Rice.

Cold rice should never be thrown away—even the smallest quantity can be used. It can be added to any soup. A good omelet can be made from a mixture of minced meat and rice added to the eggs. It can be used in a dessert in the form of a plain rice pudding or a rice custard. Left over meat can be chopped and mixed with cold rice, then moistened with gravy and put in a baking dish. Cover with breadcrumbs and bake.

Beyond Repair.

"What happened to you down the road?"

"I ruined a tire on a nonrefillable bottle."

"One of those bottles with a patent stopper?"

"No; just the ordinary kind, broken into about fifty pieces."

A Long Reach.

"I thought I put that vase out of baby's reach."

"Well, he yelled for it," explained dad. "What his arms won't reach his lungs will."

CONTRARY ORIENTALS.

They Have a Habit of Doing All Things the Other Way.

Every European who has lived long in the east will, I think, bear me out, says Earl Cromer in the Quarterly Review, when I say that in the most trivial acts of life the easterner somehow or other manages always to do or say exactly opposite to what would be done or said by the westerner.

I was one day looking out of the window of the viceroy's house at Barrackpore and noticed that a native policeman was walking up and down the terrace. His attention was attracted by a piece of paper which fluttered to his feet. He stopped and eyed it intently. I conceive that under similar circumstances a policeman of any western nation, even if he had been barefooted and his toes had not, from the constant use of boots, lost their prehensile qualities, would, had he wished to possess himself of that bit of paper, have stooped to pick it up. But the Bengali policeman kicked off the wooden shoe from his right foot, seized the bit of paper between his two first toes, brought up his foot to the level of the knee and, without stopping, conveyed the paper from his toes to his fingers behind his back.

A friend of mine who was a very acute observer of eastern ways told me that on one occasion, in order to test the intelligence of an Egyptian, he asked him to indicate his left ear. The most uneducated member of any European nation, supposing he understood the difference between right and left, would certainly have seized the lobe of his left ear with his left hand. The Egyptian, however, passed his right hand over the top of his head and with that hand took hold of the top of his left ear.

The American Peril.

At Weihuei, Hunan province, an amusing incident occurred during a campaign against houseflies. Following the lecture, in which the dangers of the fly had been emphasized, some Chinese ladies were being shown the health exhibit. One of the pictures showed a common housefly magnified many times. On seeing it one of the ladies exclaimed: "Is that the kind of flies they have over in America? No wonder Dr. Peter talks about the danger. If we had such big flies here in China we would have to be careful of them too."

Fourteen Inch Guns.

The making of fourteen inch guns is a stupendous operation, requiring batteries of open hearth furnaces to produce the material, a great casting plant and presses and heating furnaces of the largest size, running into millions in value. The tube of a fourteen inch navy rifle is about sixty-two feet long, and a ninety ton ingot, five feet in diameter, is required.

Wide Awake Eskimos.

The Eskimos are rapidly learning the value of money. The day has long gone by when they would give a polar bearskin or a bale of foxskins for a fishhook. They now know the value of their furs and bring them to the best markets.

A String to Them.

Mrs. Flatbush—What became of that string of pearls your husband was going to give you? Mrs. Bensonhurst—Oh, he had hold of the string.

The Win-the-War League Is Out For Win-the-War Candidates

Public Meeting to Be Held in Victoria Hall on Tuesday Evening Next, Oct. 30th

There are to be no more party candidates to be recognized by either the Union Government, or the Win-the-War League. At a meeting held in Toronto yesterday attended by a hundred delegates, the decision of the gathering was to put both Liberals and Conservatives "in the discard," and to recognize as candidates for election only those "pledged to support the Union Government.'"

The platform, or ten commandments, adopted by the League, may be summarized as follows:

(1) The fullest possible participation by Canada in the war.

(2) The military service act of 1917 and its continued enforcement.

(3) The encouragement of shipbuilding and the training of crews

(4) Conscription by taation of wealth and especially of war profits.

(5) Regulation when practicable of prices of food and necessities.

(6) Prohibition of the use of grain in the manufacture of alcoholic beverages.

(7) The curtailment or prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of luxuries.

(8) The mobilization, regulation and requisition, when necessary, by the government of industries, utilities, resources and of the personal services of men and women for adding to Canadian war effectiveness.

(9) The promotion of Canadian unity and the elimination of party politics.

(10) The election of candidates pledged to support the Union government.

In pursauance of the closing paragraph the Peterborough delegates are taking action.

The following Peterborough members of the Ontario Committee of the Win-the-War League were present at the meeting. Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. (Dr.) Neal and Messrs J. A. Aylmer and R. B. Rogers.

They are presently chiefly concerned with the part of the League's platform in selecting a candidate (or candidates) pledged to support the Union Government in a vigorous prosecution of the war and of all measures contributory to that end.

Public Meeting Called.

In acordance with the poilcy of the Toronto gathering on Wednesday, public meetings will be held in every constituency to consider the selection of a candidate pledged to support the Union Government.

Such a meeting in Peterborough has been called for Tuesday evening next to be held in Victoria Hall—the old Bradburn Opera House.

The meeting will be adressed by by distinguished speakers from Hamilton and Toronto.

All who want to help Canada win the war are urged to be present to cooperate in the adoption of measures with that end in view.

WEDDING BELLS

PENNEFATHER—HAYES.

The wedding of Nanno Mary, eldest daughter of Judge Hayes, to Lieut. Edgar Pennefather, of Ottawa took place this morning at 11 o'clock at the Church of Our Lady, Rev. Fr. Doyle offiffiiciating. A number o guests from out of town were present with other guests, while the church was filled with many spectators, who witnessed the beautiful ceremony.

The bridesmaids were Miss Pauline Hayes, sister of the bride, Miss Phyllis Hayes, Toronto, and Miss Georgia Stevenson, Peterborough. — Guelph Mercury.

HASSARD—POPE.

The Church of the Redeemer, Bloor Street and Avenue Road, was the scene last evening of a quiet wedding between Alice Mary Pope, daughter of Mrs. W. A. Pope, of Toronto, and Francis Gordon Hassard, of the Dominion Life Assurance Co., son of Mrs. Hassard and the late Rev. Richard Hassard, formerly of Peterborough, the Rev. Charles T. James officiating. The bride was given away by Mr. Robert H. Elliott and was attended by her sister, Miss Marguerite Pope. The groomsman was Mr. G. Alexander Phare.

The bride's costume was of burgundy broadcloth, trimmed with seal, with black velvet hat and corsage bouquet of ophelia roses. The bridesmaid wore brown broadcloth, with brown velvet picture hat, and a corsage bouquet of pink roses.

The groom's present to the bride consisted of a diamond and sapphire ring, while the bridesmaid and the groomsman were the recipients of a cameo ring and stick pin., Mr. Otto Jams presided at the organ.

Mr. and Mrs. Hassard left later for a brief honeymoon, and on their return will reside at 11 Iglewood Drive, Moore Park.—Toronto Star.

Mrs. J. Knox Is Again Elected President Of The Kitchener League

The annual meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League was held at the Y. M. C. A. on Monday night. Mrs. Knox was re-elected president. Mrs. J. Kimberley treasurer; Mrs. Pritchard, recording secretary; Miss G. Mowat, financial-secretary. The financial report showed a balance of $72 with expenditure during the year of $1,382.38. This made a total of $2,103.38, handled including the balance from the preceding year.

In view of the enterprise of all the churches in preparing Christmas boxes for the men overseas, the Kitchener League decided upon a departure from their usual pre-Christmas activity. Their presents to the men this year will be confined to socks, and knitters are requested to make special effort during the next two weeks as it is proposed to forward the shipment about the middle of November. Supplies of yarn may be obtained from Mrs. Knox, 481 Gilmour street, or from Miss Mowat, at the Peterborough Creamery.

Of This Number Only 10 Have Reported For Service

There are still no signs of any increased rush of draftees to register under the Military Service Act. Inquiry at the Peterborough post office at 11 o'clock to-day revealed the fact that only 203 men have registered so far. Exactly 193 of those have claimed exemption, and only ten have reported for service. There has not been any one report for duty for several days.

The percentage of Category A men registering is not as great as it was at first, the majority of those who are claiming exemption now being men who have been placed in B, C or E category.

Twenty Thousand Dollars WANTED

Quite a sum when one man has to put up the money, but when the opportunity is given to more than twenty thousand people in this city to make up the amount see what an easy problem it is if each does his share.

Twenty Thousand Dollars

Yes, that is it and is wanted badly—because the boys who have gone from Peterborough to fight the great fight for liberty and permanent peace are daily subjecting themselves to the peril of sickness, wounds, and death itself. When you consider what your subscription to the Canadian Red Cross Society will make possible for the Peterboro Branch to do for the Peterboro Boys Overseas you will not hesitate to give to the limit of your means.

The committee in charge of the canvass will see you on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thurs day next. Yesterday we advised you to be liberal in your subscriptions to-day after further thought we would suggest that you even become extravagant in your giving to this fund as the money is badly needed to do all the work required.

In Memory of French Soldiers.

It is believed that with the close of the war the entire line of trenches in France, extending from Alsace to the Belgian border, may be converted into a sort of national sacred forest as a permanent tribute to the memory of the French "poilus" who died there defending their native soil. A proposition to this effect has been prepared by the general council of the Department of the Meuse and will be submitted to not only France but the entire world, which would always have the opportunity of visiting the line of trenches, over six hundred kilometres in length, on which the French threw back the tide of German invasion at the battle of the Marne.

Using Stags' Horns.

One of the industries of China is the raising of stags for their horns, the horns being cut while soft each year and used in the manufacture of medicine.

Fierce Flame May Result From Unskilled Handling Of Ireland

Conciliation to Sinn Feiners Has Been Stretched to Point of Weakness —Situation May Quickly Arise Worse Than Last Rebellion—Yet Convention Makes Splendid Progress

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Premier Lloyd-George's announcement that the Government intends to prevent further incitement towards the organization of a rebellion in Ireland threatens to bring to an immediate head the Republican campaign here.

The convention has made remarkable progress towards settlement. Responsible men, Nationalists, Ulsterites, Catholics and Protestants, brought together daily, have discovered unsuspected points of agreement. Great difficulties yet remain to be surmounted, but actual progress exceeds even my optimistic forecast after attending the opening convention.

The country is more prosperous than ever before. Ireland is reaping immense gains from high agricultural prices and not bearing her full share of the military burden.

Dublin Castle rule is erratic; sometimes feeble, sometimes over-stern. Its every mistake is seized upon by organized sedition. Since Thomas Ashe's death the Sinn Feiners have swept the entire country outside of Ulster. Every released Sinn Feiner is regarded as a national hero and organizer of rebellion. Independent observers, particularly Americans returned from Ireland, express themselves amazed at the freedom granted to sedition. It would be folly to disguise the fact that a situation may quickly yarise more grave than that of Easter, 1916. DeValera is an able, resolute military leader. He was responsible for the blood shed in part of the Dublin fighting, when his troops, hidden behind houses, ambuscaded and shot down the Sherwood Foresters.

No definite information is available, but many rumours are afloat about attempts on the part of German submarines to land arms recently on the west coast of Ireland. British Government despite blunders like Ashe's treatment in prison are stretching conciliation to the point of weakness and shutting their eyes as long as possible to extreme incitements to rebellion. A situation is now reached where more definite action is necessary. Maladroit or unskilled mere repression may kindle a fierce flame.

Large bodies of Catholic clergy, particularly the younger clergy in the Maladroit or unskilled mere repres- The Archbishop of Dublin took part in Ashe's funeral. The women urged the men on.

The Fall Weather Hard On Little Ones

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Worries of a Housewife.

Women are given to worry more than are men. When anything threatens to worry a man, he finds solace in the little brown jug. But women cannot look adversity in the face with such calm abandon. They are not built that way. As near as I can make out, it is a difference in temperament. Woman is more highly organized than man. Her nervous system is much better developed. If you notice a look of worry on your wife's face and ask, "Well! What's up to-day?" she sighs and says, "Oh, dear, dear! Everything's up. We're getting old and shabby and the house is becoming dreadfully dilapidated, and now to cap the climax I've broken my mop stick!"

John Wesley's Portrait.

The portrait of John Wesley is now in the possession of an art collector in Philadelphia. This picture is one of the finest that came from the brush of the famous George Romney. In this connection it is interesting to note that for the portrait, measuring thirty inches by twenty-four inches, and its frame, the artist charged but £40.

Singing insects are among the natural curiosities of Japan. The most prized of these is a black-bettle named "susumushi," which means "insect bell." The sound that emits resembles that of a little silver bell.

The first crossing of the Andes made by aeronauts was accomplished by two men from Argentina. Their balloon started from Santiago, Chile, and four hours later landed near Mendoza, Argentina.

WOULD YOU WIN SUCCESS?

Then Play the Game of Safety First, and Play It Well.

All the world loves a winner when the contest has been fairly played The local baseball team receives far greater enthusiasm and support when it is winning than when it is repeatedly losing. We praise the accomplishment of a difficult feat. Each one of us hails the skill and tenacity of purpose that puts over any great achievement. Things requiring the clear head, the watchful eye, the skillful hand and the bulldog grip of determination get our hearty commendation.

Said Abraham Lincoln, "I don't think much of the man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday." No truer words could be written of the safety first game. If you would be a winner, each day must find you wiser, keener and more alert than the day before. It is a contest in which we match our determination to have no suffering from accidents to ourselves and fellow men against little acts of thoughtlessness and carelessness that bring these results.

Nor is this game ever ended. Each new day calls for a better score. New conditions surround us, and all of our faculties, the best that is in us, are challenged to increased effort. To have our work really well done it must be safely done, and none of us wants any less than the best.

For your own sake, for the sake of the family at home, the wife and children, the mother or sister, play the game, and play it well. Play it with the interest, the spirit, the enthusiasm, that will make you win. It will take all your skill and ability to play it right.

Yesterday is gone—forget it.
Tomorrow is yet to come—plan for it.
Today is here—use it.

CLEANING UP ROUGH STOCK BEFORE WINTER

Cattle Not Required For Winter Feeding Shipped In Large Numbers

The feature of this week's trading in the local cattle markets has been the ready absorption of heavy receipts of common and medium quality stock. The farmers' annual fall clearing out of all the rough stock on the farms not required for winter feeding has been going on apace and uninterruptedly for the past couple of weeks. The result has been heavy shipments into the local markets of large numbers of these rough and poorly finished cattle. The proportion of the total receipts of fairly good to choice butcher cattle was comparatively small. It might have been expected that under such conditions there would be a congestion of the common stuff, with a slump in prices in this class, while for the better qualities there would be a keen demand at accelerated prices. Almost exactly contrary has been the case. The commoner quality cattle have sold readily at practicelly steady prices, cows in particular holding good and firm, while the choicer quality butcher cattle have met a slow demand, with prices barely holding their own, and good heavy steers, 1,150 to 1,200 lbs., finding no demand, and prices going off in some cases 25c. to 40c. This was the condition up to the end of this week, when the whole market became dull and draggy, packers seeming to be well provided for all present needs.

Stockers and feeders kept fairly steady for choice stock, but eased off a little on the common.

Sheep and lambs held up well under heavy receipts, but declined about 50c. at the end of this week.

The hog market was generally weak and unsettled, packers succeeding in getting prices down about 75c.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

The curtain before the doorway quivered again, and a moment later Barton's trembling hand swept it aside. He, too, had gone through an experience no less bitter than her own. Behind the locked door, hearing all that had passed in the room outside, restrained only by the pleadings of the hunchback from rushing madly to her assistance, he had seen the woman who represented to him all that was good and sweet and loveable descend to the level of a courtesan, the plaything of a drunken brute, her beauty, that had to him been so sacred, exhibited for the amusement of a crowd of coarse ruffians. Raised as he had been, Ramona was now, in his eyes, a fallen woman, a creature of the Evil One himself, to be looked upon with loathing and contempt. She had lied to him, deceived him, made a mockery the teachings of his people, his race, the teachingsof his people, his race, nor did he indeed know anything of those circumstances which might have served to temper the bitterness of his judgment. His love had been dealt a terrible blow; he staggered as he came into the room, as much from the mental shock that had come to him, as from his physical weakness. Standing there in the doorway, supporting himself by its frame, he gazed at the girl with eyes that fairly blazed their anger and contempt.

She, poor child, asking only comfort in her suffering, unable longer to defend herself, saw those burning eyes fixed upon her, and stopped helpless in her progress toward the door. A sigh of utter weariness came from her lips. She shrank backward before his gaze, as though from a cruel blow. Her arms, till now outstretched, fell helpless at her side. Cringing, pitiful, utterly exhausted, she crouched against the opposite wall of the room, her lips moving vaguely, making no sound. Then at last, very weakly, the words came.

"John—John," she moaned. "Hear me."

For a time he still gazed at her, like herself unable to speak. Presently he, too, found words, bitter, cruel words, that stung and burnt like the lashes of a whip.

"Thou saerlet woman!" he cried, very low, his voice vibrant with contempt. Then, without saying more, he turned and went toward the garden.

"Ah—no—no—no!" she screamed, her arms raised once more to him. He did not so much as turn his head. Across the room he staggered, and through the door, without a word. Almost before she was able to realize it, he had gone.

At first she could not believe it. The thing seemed unreal, impossible. He had loved her; was love so easily to be thrown aside? She felt that no matter what he had done, she would not have deserted him at such a time. At last the emptiness of the room forced upon her the knowledge that she was alone. The thought came to her with terrific force—alone, indeed, save for the dead man lying so silent within the bedroom.

"Jesu," she whispered to herself, very softly and distinctly, in the manner of one quite mad. Then she slid slowly down the wall to the floor, babbling childish and incoherent words. She had endured to the limit of her strength; it was not premitted her to endure more.

The light of the dawn streamed through the open doorway, filling the room with a pale and ghostly light. The candles guttered and smoked in their sockets, their light dimmed by the brightness without. A noisy chatter of birds spoke of the coming day—her wedding day, Ramona thought, and burst into hysterical laughter.

CHAPTER XIII.

Portuguese Joe had sworn by countless saints, the which he held in no great reverence, that Ramona should some day belong to him. The way in which the girl had continually defied him had served only to whet his appetite for her. Once he had broached the subject to Ormiston, offering a goodly store of gold in return, but the latter had refused point-blank, in a way that made the Portugee fearful of ever again mentioning the matter. He feared Ormiston too greatly to wish to come under the ban of his displeasure.

His desire to possess the girl, however, was in no wise lessened by this refusal; he had within him the power to wait. Ormiston tolerated him, because he was a cruel and relentless fighter, a clever hand at the wheel, and at times, when the mood seized him, an amusing companion. He did not trust him, it is true, but that was of small moment, since the Portugee neither gave trust, nor asked it.

During the weeks that followed the departure of the buccaneers from Port Royal, thoughts of Ramona, her youth, her beauty, her fresh innocence, filled all the Portugee's waking hours. He desired above all things to possess her, and as he walked the decks, or lay for long hours in his hammock, numberless plans for the accomplishing of his desires formed themselves in his fertile brain. They one and all, however, possessed a fatal weakness. Ramona, he very well knew, would not consent to accompany him willingly. He was by no means averse to abducting her by force, but he saw no way in which this could be safely done, while Ormiston was on hand to prevent it.

His only hope, he realized, lay in spiriting the girl away during one of those rare intervals when Ormiston was engaged in the town; it would be a risky business, but he determined to attempt it at the very first opportunity that might present itself.

The cruise proved to be a brief one. The Spanish fleet, bulking its way, ten strong, through the early morning shadows, had been met and surrounded in the Windward Passage. A quick and decisive engagement, followed by a pursuit of three of the galleons, brought the day to a close. Morgan, determined that none of the booty should escape him, kept after the fleeing vessels with the bulk of his force, leaving the captured ships, in charge of prize crews, to await his return.

The galleons were swift; the pursuit consumed the better part of a week, and was in the end unsuccessful. At its close, the buccaneers returned, and proceeded to repair their shattered yards and rigging, and divide the captured booty. This was followed by one of those prolonged debauches that invariably marked the finale of a successful expedition. In the end, their leaders were forced to broach over the rail the unconsumed casks of liquor and wine, and order the fleet back to Port Royal.

They had been away three weeks to a day. Within half an hour of their arrival, Portuguese Joe came to the conclusion that fate had at last concluded to play into his hands. While Ormiston and the others of his party were drinking in the Turk's Head, celebrating their safe return, the Portuguese, being separated from them by reason of a design of his own, went in search of Ann Devereux. He well knew that the latter would not fail to keep herself fully informed concerning Ramona and her affairs; some vague suspicion that the wounded Puritan might not after all have escaped to the town on the night of their departure flitted through his brain. He determined to find out what had occurred during their absence. There was a possibility that the fates might provide a weapon against the girl ready to his hand.

It was long past midnight. The town was for the most part asleep. Ormiston's vessel, by reason of superior sailing qualities, had been the first of the buccaneering ships to arrive. The Portugee felt reasonably certain that Mistress Devereux was not yet aware of their return, else she would have been in the tavern with the others of her ilk. Nor was he wrong in his conjecture.

It required a deal of knocking before the woman appeared at an upper window of her house and demanded the reason for the disturbance. When she heard the Portugee's voice, however, her own lost its querulous tone. Bidding him wait, she hastily threw on her clothes and joined him in the street. It was evident that she was in a state of high excitement.

"When did you return, Portugee" she demanded in haste.

"Bupt now, sweet mistress. What news, during our absence?"

The woman's face drew into hard lines.

"The Firebrand has been given a fine pair of horns," she sneered. "His sweet dove has not lacked consolation."

"What mean you?"

"The Puritan, fool. He has not left her side, since the night you sailed. They say he was wounded, but is now well."

"Are you certain of this?"

"Certain enough, by our Lady! Did I not go there this very night, and watch them from behind the bushes? They sat in the garden. With my own eyes I saw her in the fellow's arms."

The Portugee gave a great whistle. This was news indeed. The woman had already started off down the street.

"Where now, Mistress Devereux?" he asked.

"To the taverns. I have business afoot."

The Employer's Course

The Proclamation issued under the Military Service Act calls Class One men—bachelors and widowers without children (not otherwise excepted) who were 20 years old on the 13th Oct., 1917, and whose 34th birthday did not occur before Jan. 1st, 1917.

The claim for exemption may be made by the man himself, by his employer or by a near relative. So far as practicable, not more than one claim should be made in respect of any man. For reasons stated in the next paragraph, the claim is often best made by the employer.

When Employer Should Make Claim for Exemption

Where claim for exemption is based on the assumption that it is in the national interest that the man should instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he is habitually engaged, it is usually preferable that the claim be made by the EMPLOYER, inasmuch as the decision of the claim will involve, amongst other things, a consideration of the nature of the business, the number of men employed, etc.

Medical Examination

It will simplify the employer's problem if all Class One men in his employ present themselves for Medical Examination at the nearest Medical Board Centre.

Upon examination they will be placed in Medical Categories—A, B, C, or E. Class One men placed in Categories B, C, or E satisfy immediate requirements if they attach the medical report they will receive to their claim for exemption.

Where an employer claims exemption for an employee on the ground that it is expedient in the national interest that the man should continue in the work in which he is habitually engaged, he should attach to the claim for exemption a statement and a schedule as follows:—

The Employer's Statement

Total number of employees, grouping them according to their respective occupations and qualifications, and stating the number in each group. Indicate the possibility or otherwise of replacing the labor of Class One men with the labor of those not in the statutory class called up, or of women; also the extent to which the withdrawal of men in the statutory class would affect the business, the reason for considering that the carrying on of the business is in the national interest, and such other facts and circumstances as may appear to be relevant.

The Employer's Schedule

This should state the names, ages and occupations of all Class One men employed, noting against each name whether or not claim for exemption is being made, and whether in the employer's opinion, exemption if granted, should be conditional on the man's continuing his present occupation, or whether it would suffice if exemption were granted for one, two or more months, as the case may be.

Forms for Exemption

These forms may be obtained on request from any Postmaster who will transmit the forms, when filled in, to the Registrar.

Issued by the Military Service Council.

You don't like the cheap tea you are using. Do you?

Before the war so increased the cost of living, many people used to drink better tea than they are now using.

Perhaps, this is true in your case?

Of course, you are not drinking poor tea because you like it, but because you think it necessary to save money.

But are you really saving anything?

Cheap, common teas only make about 150 cups to the pound. You are lucky if you can stretch them out to 185 or 200.

On the other hand, Red Rose Tea easily makes 250 cups. It goes further because of its fine quality, consisting chiefly of Assam teas, the richest and strongest in the world.

You may almost doubt if so many cups of tea can be made from a pound of even such good tea as Red Rose, but you can readily prove the economy of Red Rose without waiting for a package to be used up. Just use a few leaves less of Red Rose for a brewing than you use of common tea—the result we are sure will please and surprise you.

Airplanes Saved France.

"Had it not been for the French air service," says Burton J. Hendrick in the World's Work, "France would have been destroyed in the first few weeks of the war. For years the French general staff had expected an attack through Belgium—the strategic railroads which the Germans were so painstakingly building up to the Belgian frontier could convey no other meaning. Yet the Frenchmen still believed that the main onslaught would come across the French frontier, and had made their plans for their greatest resistance in this region. France entered this war with only about one hundred army airplanes, but Germany, which had foreseen the part this new instrument was to play, had a much larger equipment. Yet, a few days after the Belgian invasion began, French aviators, flying near the Belgian-German frontier, saw a sight that immediately caused a change in the French operations. The Germans were crossing the frontier in enormous numbers—and the fact became apparent that in this section the main attack was to come. This news, flashed to General Joffre, caused that sudden alteration in his plans that made possible the successful battles of early September. Had it not been for this operation, the French army would have concentrated for the Germans in force on the Alsace-Lorraine frontier, and the whole territory, from Belgium to Paris and Calais, would have been left open to the German onslaught. That is, the war would have ended according to the calculations which had been so carefully made in Geramny."

Size of Circus Rings.

Railway tickets are the same size all over Britain and the Continent and America, viz., 2¼ in. by 1¼ in., and have been so for the last fifty years. This surely indicates a world-wide tendency to standardize.

Every builder's ladder is built to scale ,and the fireman's ladder is on the scale of the seaman's run up the ratlines, not the bricklayer's trudge up the wooden rungs. Buf perhaps the greatest triumph of standardizing is that of the circus. There are big and little circuses in the world, but the ring is always of the same diameter, for the bareback rider has discovered the exact angle at which he can square the circle. No matter whether it be a ring cut in the turf or a luxuriously-appointed theatre, the circus ring never varies a foot. —Tit-Bits.

Windmills in Holland.

It was at one time stated that there were in Holland at least 9,900 large windmills, of which the sails ranged from 80 to 100 feet long. At that time their yearly cost was reported to be nearly $10,000,000. The mills are used for many purposes—for sawing timber, beating hemp, grinding, but their principal use has always been to jump water from the lowlands into the canals, to protect the little country from being inundated.

WHY Does Your Head Ache?

Headaches, sick or other kinds, don't happen to people whose livers are busy and whose bowels are as regular as a clock.

Thousands of folks who used to have headaches say this is the way they removed the cause:

THE DANDIES OF RUSSIA.

The Georgians Are as Imperious as They Are Handsome.

The Georgians are the dandies of Russia. The despatch from Moscow, reporting the opening of the great council in that city, said that, among the varied costumes worn by the members of this assembly, the Georgians were "robed in cloth of gold." This style of dress is thoroughly characteristic of the tastes and habits of this little but ancient people. Those who have strayed over into the picturesque mountainous region between the Black and Caspian seas, which is their present as it was their ancient home, and have observed them going about their daily occupations, can have no doubt that the Georgians in this Moscow meeting were perfectly fitted for so gorgeous a dress.

They are an exceedingly handsome race, both men and women. A "Georgian beauty" is a proverbial saying in the Near East, and the men very generally are a full match for the women. They are of good height, sinewy and lithe, and with the free and springy step of the true mountaineer. They do not appear to grow old so readily as the Scottish Highlanders, and they have the same proud and independent bearing. Very many of the Georgians are princes—such princes as they have in Russia and in Germany, not of royal blood, but specially made for some distinguished action or quality—and many of these titles go far back to almost forgotten days. They have an alphabet of their own, and a literature which, like the ancient Persian, is of no mean quality.

But their predominant racial quality is the joy of living. They appear never to grow round-shouldered, and they are great hunters. They can fight well, too, when they see the need of it, and a good many of them are always in training for that or any other kind of outdoor work. Probably some of them loaf a good deal, too, but they do it with an air of authority that gives a certain dignity to this fairly universal practice. Their dress is gay and becoming, and their bearing goes with such clothes.

We venture to say that the sharper Kerensky spoke, in his Moscow address, the straighter the Georgians looked him in the eye. That's the kind of men they are, and as handsome as they are imperious.

Store Summer Heat.

In a striking article on the contrast between the weather in Europe and in America, Camille Flammarion expresses the opinion that for the future humanity will utilize the heat waves of summer to obtain warmth in winter. He says:

"That the earth is topsy-turvey is undoubted by nobody. While on August 2, 1916, the thermometer registered the maximum heat for the year, on the same date in 1917 it was almost cold, the temperature being less than half. It is disconcerting to know that while this side of the Atlantic is suffering from chilliness, people are dying in America from heat.

"This height of wild irregularity and striking contrast show these abnormal temperatures are due to terrestrial and oceanic atmospheric currents, and not to the direct influence of any particular activity of the sun, for in that case the whole globe would be equally affected.

"Statisticians, therefore, are mistaken in drawing conclusions based on thermometric comparisons taken in a limited region of the earth.

"It is to be supposed, of course, that under the great heat prevailing in the New World oceans of vapors are drawn up with avidity by the blazing sun rays and then driven across the Atlantic by the westerly winds. Before reaching the old continent the vapors are cooled by the action of other currents, especially the northerly ones, and become condensed into clouds and fall in rain.

"This atmospheric ocean is infinitely more turbulent and enigmatic in its various manifestations than the liquid immensity covering three-quarters of the globe, and in the future humanity will utilize nature's forces that are constantly rising round us, and the vast riches and lost resources in the stifling heat waves will be collected and stored for our descendants."

Roosevelt to Blame.

The Kaiser and the Crown Prince were sipping a cordial, says Everybody's. "Father, who started the war?" quoth the Crown Prince, pulling on his cigarette. "Why, we've proved it on England, France, and Belgium, to say nothing of Russia," sharply answered the Kaiser. "Yes, I know," said the prince, "but who was really responsible?" "Well," his father answered, "if you must know, it was like this. You remember when Roosevelt came back from Africa? I gave him a good time. I showed him all around and I took him out and together we reviewed the army. When we got back to the palace, Teddy clapped me on the back and said: 'Bill, you can lick the world!' and, like a damned fool, I believed him."

Some French Wit.

Aphorisms were not wanting in the speech which M. Clemenceau pronounced, recently, in the Senate. Parliaments, he said, at one point, I believe to be the greatest organ ever invented for making political mistakes. But they have the advantage of lending themselves to correction as soon as the country desires reform. Parliamentarianism, with all its faults, and they are legion, has great qualities. It is more easily improved upon than monarchism. He had hoped, he said, further on, that France and England would have been able to master Germany in the biggest victory that the world had ever known. But the situation was thus: all organization and no honor, and all honor and not sufficient organization.

DUBLIN, Oct. 26.—At to-day's session Professor Edward De Valera, member of Parliament for East Clare, who was referred to in the House of Commons recently as having been inciting rebellion in Ireland, was elected president of the conference after Count Plunkett and Arthur Griffith, who were also nominated, had withdrawn. In announcing that Prof. de Valera had been elected unanimously, Mr. Griffith said the Sinn Feiners now had at their head a statesman as well as a soldier.

NEW EDISON

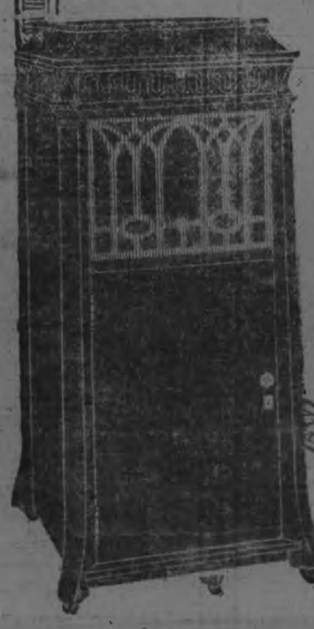
FACE THIS FACT!

The NEW EDISON is not a talking machine

ASK yourself this question—Would a talking machine artist dare to sing in direct comparison with a talking machine record in public?

Even if the artist had the hardihood to try it, no talking machine manufacturer would dare submit his machine to the ridicule of such a test.

At the right are three world-famous artists. They are shown singing in direct comparison with Mr. Edison's Re-Creation of their voices on The NEW EDISON.



The newspaper critics of more than five hundred leading American and Canadian newspapers who heard these tests confessed, in the columns of their own papers, their inability to distinguish between the Artist's voice and Mr. Edison's Re-Creation.

Over 100,000 people who attended these tests will tell you that The New Edison really re-creates music.

It is not merely that we say The New Edison is not a Talking Machine—it has been proven.

CALLED ARCH TRAITOR

NOTORIOUS RUSSIAN PROTESTS THAT HE IS INNOCENT.

Vladimir A. Soukhomlinoff Held High Offices in the Slav Empire, but Used His Power to Assist the Enemies of His Country—An Unusual Case of Treachery.

VLADMIR A. SOUKHOMLINOFF, no longer a general, for he was publicly degraded, is now awaiting trial for high treason in Russia, if, indeed, the trial is not now under way. The former Minister of War protests his innocence, but enough evidence has already appeared to damn him in the eyes of loyal Russians. He protests also that he believes in the innocence of his wife, who has been publicly accused of being his go-between in his dealings with Germany. She disappeared immediately upon his arrest, and may be now in Germany or Austria, where she will be treated with all the consideration due a lady of high rank and a first-class spy. Soukhomlinoff is a member of an old Russian family of nobility. It is not suggested that there is German blood in his veins. The theory advanced for his treachery is that he was bought up. Yet even this theory does not wholly satisfy. A man in his position could have made millions in "honest" graft while still playing fairly by the army. Insanity would seem to be the most reasonable excuse for him.

Soukhomlinoff was born in 1848, and at the age of 13 entered the Alexandrovsky-Bretesky Corps of Cadets, at 18 became a Life-Guardsman of the Czar, and at the age of 23 entered the Academy of the General Staff. In 1876 he saw service against the Turks, and in the War of Liberation is said to have displayed fine soldierly qualities which won him several medals. He was next made Administrator of the Nicholas Academy, and at the early age of 38 he became governor of the cavalry school for officers. In 1898 he was made lieutenant-general, and the following year went to Kiev as chief of staff, and when Dragomiroff retired Soukhomlinoff succeeded him as commander-in-chief of the Kiev military districts. In this most responsible office he is said to have manifested great administrative ability, and when in 1909 he was appointed Minister of War it must have appeared to the outsider that he had fairly won his way to this reward.

There is something grimly humorous, in the light of recent events, to read now what was written about Soukhomlinoff in the spring of 1915 by A. A. Knaap, a name which has a Teutonic look, by the way. Mr. Knaap wrote a little book about Soukhomlinoff, and it was translated into English by V. D. Doumbadze. It represented him as a military genius, and a man of passionate devotion to the cause of the Allies, a hater of red tape, a man who neither smoked nor drank, and the keynote to whose character was a simple piety. As a writer in the Boston Transcript, Mr. James Walter Smith suggests it would be interesting now to learn who financed the publication of this work, for at the very time that Soukhomlinoff was being lauded as the very savior of his land he was deep in the plot to defeat the Russian armies, and was holding up supplies from the armies of the Grand Duke Nicholas and Brussiloff. Was Mr. A. A. Knaap simply a fool, or did he write his book for the purpose of creating a sort of camouflage to conceal the operations of Soukhomlinoff?

There is some evidence that the latter end was in view, for throughout the book the former Minister is spoken of as a man who had to fight countless enemies. He is represented as a bluff soldier, who was impatient with the delays of the chancelleries, intolerant of mere routine, and one who set the interest of the army above everything else. "He rises at 7 o'clock," says M. Knaap, "and at once goes into his study to look over correspondence. At 9 o'clock he dresses, drinks a glass of milk, and if there is no urgent work goes out for a half-hour's walk. From 10 to 1 and from 2 to 3 he is busy with reports, audiences, sittings in the Imperial Duma, in the Imperial Council, the Cabinet of Ministers, in the Military Council or with work in his own study. His free time, from 3 to 7.30, Vladimir Alexandrovitch consecrates to the perusal of the written reports sent to him from various departments, the details of which he examines minutely and carefully. At 8 o'clock he dines, and from half-past 8 to 9 or 10 he looks through the reports which he daily submits to his Imperial Majesty."

If this account is accurate it must have been at some unearthly hour of the night that he got in his licks for the Kaiser. At any rate, his tremendous activities in the daytime might well tend to convince the Kaiser that he was an indefatigable worker. The truth seems to be that Soukhomlinoff got very close to the Czar, and that he kept others from getting near. Any protest about the shortage of ammunition could not reach the Czar without going through the War Office channel, and here was the arch-conspirator to intercept it. The Grand Duke Nicholas, by virtue of his rank and relationship to Nicholas Romanoff, might get the Imperial ear, and it may be that he did so with the unfortunate result of being removed from supreme command in the army. It would be easy for Soukhomlinoff to blame the results of his own treachery upon the supposed incompetence of generals in the field. If he was in the employ of Germany the Kaiser had certainly the most valuable man in Russia for his purposes.

DANGEROUS SOUVENIRS.

Souvenir hunting in abandoned German dugouts—a favorite occupation of the entente soldiers on the western front when time permits—is not as safe a pastime now as it was at first. The wily Huns have resorted to all kinds of tricks to make the visit almost as dangerous to the intruder as when they still remained there, as vividly told by Lewis R. Freeman in an article in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, of which the following is a sample:

"Something of the direction his [the German's] latest effort has taken was revealed by a Tommy who was exhibiting to me some of the treasures he had gathered in cleaning up a recently occupied German dugout. One of these, carefully preserved between the leaves of a magazine, was the photograph of what was evidently a German girl, punctured with not less than a dozen bullet holes.

"'Did you take it from a German soldier?' I asked.

"'No, sir,' was the reply; 'only from the wall of a dugout.'

"But how did she come to get so shot to pieces?' I asked; adding banteringly, 'I have never heard that the British soldier makes war on women.'

"'But this 'Un lydy was makin' war on us, sir,' he answered with a grin; 'or leastways one of 'er friends three or four dugouts down the line tried to strafe us ,and we had orders to strafe back.'

"Then he went on to explain that the Tommies had always vied with each other in collecting photographs from the walls of the captured dugouts as souvenirs, a circumstance which the Germans, who appeared to have got wind of it in some way, endeavored to take advantage of by running a wire from the back of some of these mural decorations to mines concealed beneath the floor. The Tommies had already learned to avoid stepping on the loose ends of boards, and to refrain from rocking 'tortoises' and picking up inconsequential odds and ends from the floor; but the 'mined' photograph was something new, and before the ruse was discovered several 'cleaning-up' parties were made to pay rather heavily for the desire of certain of their members to add another ''Un frawline' to their picture galleries. Photo collecting languished for some little time after the 'designing' nature of some of these abandoned Gretchens and Hildas had been disclosed, and it is still the custom to give any picture with a suspicious bulge behind it—if there is room to do it in safety—a few propitiatory shots before seeking closer acquaintance."

Maddening Professions.

In view of the great increase of insanity during recent years, it is interesting to note the various classes of employment which are, more or less, productive of madness.

A French scientist has recently been investigating this question, and his researches go to show that, apart from the terrible nerve strain of this war, the military and naval professions are the very worst a man can enter if he wishes to go sane to the grave. Out of every 100,000 who enter the army and navy 199 become confirmed lunatics.

The liberal professions come in as a good second to the army and navy, the list being headed by lawyers, and somewhat more distinctly by the clergy, doctors of medicine, men of letters, and civil servants. The number of people in these professions who become occupants of lunatic asylums is 177 to each 100,000.

The professional men are run very close by domestic servants and day-laborers, of whom 165 out of each 100,000 are sent to the asylum. There is a big falling-off before we arrive at the next group, which is that of mechanics, only 66 of whom go mad in each 100,000.

And, curious to relate, and contrary to all general belief, the group which is most highly favorable to sanity is that of commercial men, which sends only 42 per 100,000 (or 1 in every 2,380) of its ranks to confinement.—Tit-Bits.

Your Neighbour's Children Cry for Food!

WHO is your neighbour, if not Belgium, who held back the Hun when the issue was at stake? If you think you have done all you can for Belgium, remember the daily food ration there is a bowl of soup and a slice of bread. The grown up folks accept this gratefully. But how can the little children be made to understand? Their growing bodies demand more, and there is an appalling increase in children's diseases due to malnutrition! These cases demand immediate attention or death will follow. As far as funds will permit, children broken by slow starvation are taken to Holland for special care and feeding. They cannot be given more than six weeks treatment because about 15,000 more children are waiting for this much. If more is to be done it must be through generous response to the appeal made for the Belgian Children's Health Fund.

Funds are badly needed too for the Belgian Orphans' Fund. A contribution of $3.70 feeds, clothes and educates a friendless waif for a month. As you plan your three meals a-day, think of their needs.

Your contributions will go entire through the Belgian Minister of the Interior (in Le Havre, France) to Dutch authorities, who administer the relief work under the approval of the British and Dutch Governments, and Mr. Hoover's Committee.

It's Like Summer Inside—Because

Behind the blizzard, summer-like comfort radiates throughout this home—because it is heated with a King Hot Water Boiler. Every room in the home is warm regardless of size or in what part of the house it may be located. Whether you live in a cottage or a mansion, on a farm or in a city, the problem of keeping a house comfortably warm at all times is solved only in one way—by Hot Water Heating.

REAP VAST PROFITS.

German Capitalists Have Not Suffered in the War.

How industrial capital in Germany is increasing and shareholders are receiving new and valuable stocks and holdings through the war may be seen from some recent reports of big corporations. The Gluckauf Explosive Works in Hamburg have just declared a dividend of 100 per cent. The Crown Prince Metal Industry Company in Ohligs has increased its capital from 6,500,000 to 13,000,000 marks and on this double capital has paid a dividend of 40 per cent. out of last year's profits. The dividend for 1915 was 15 per cent. The Union of Chemical Industries in Mayence is increasing its capital from 900,000 to 4,500,000 marks. For the new shares the old shareholders will pay only 50 per cent., the other half will be paid out of a special reserve fund of the corporation.

But even such statements as these fail to give a true and complete account of the business of the corporations. Surpluses are concealed, usually they can only be partially seen in the balance sheets, and the balances are silent as to how greatly property values have increased. Large sums are taken out of current income and spent on new buildings. In this way new plants are created out of profits, with a view to the future, when peace reigns. Everywhere reserve and extra reserve funds are being built up. The public are left in uncertainty as to the total of these funds, and in order that the balance sheet should not show the amount of secret profits, repayments, reserves, and war taxes are put down under "creditors"—as debts. No information is given either as to the ownership of shares, the amount of bank balances, and the value of stocks. And so the yearly reports prevent any proper judgment being formed as to the profits earned and the growth in value of the corporations' property. Frequently it happens that new shares are issued at lower price than the current stock exchange quotations, or are distributed amongst the shareholders without any payment.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

George Starkweather's Mission

A Story of Secret Service In the World's War.

By F. A. MITCHEL

George Starkweather was dressing for dinner at his hotel in Rome when a stranger entered his room and closed the door behind him. Starkweather looked at him, indignant at this cool trespassing.

"Why do you enter my room without knocking?" he asked sternly.

"Because I do not wish to be seen entering your room. I chose a moment when there was no one in the corridor, and it was essential that I should lose no time. Signor, you are wanted at the Quirinal palace."

"I—at the palace?"

"Yes, signor, and I am ordered to take you there without your going being known. As soon as you have finished your toilet go down and out. You will find a cab standing by the sidewalk. Enter it and tell the cabman to drive you to the Plaza de Venetia. He will take you to the palace."

"But why this mystery?"

"There are spies watching the movements of every one who has any communication with the government. That is all I can tell you now. You will soon know the rest. May I trouble you to look out into the corridor and advise me when it is empty?"

Starkweather did as requested and presently reported that the coast was clear. The stranger went out, and George finished dressing. While doing so he was wondering what this summons to the king's palace meant. He was an American traveler who had gone to Italy some six months after the breaking out of the world's war to see for himself how things were going. He knew no one in Rome except an American lady who had married an Italian who now held a portfolio in the cabinet. But he could not see why this acquaintance should cause him to be summoned by the king.

When Starkweather had finished his toilet—he put on ordinary clothes instead of evening dress—he went to the dining room, partook of one course of the table d'hote, then went out and got into a cab which he found waiting for him. He saw there the man who had entered his room unbidden.

"You have been a long while, signor," said the stranger, "in finishing your toilet. You do not seem to hesitate to keep his majesty waiting."

"If the king calls for me," replied George, "when I am about to dine either he or my stomach must wait. Since I am an American citizen, not a subject of the king of Italy, I do not feel compelled to sacrifice my stomach to royalty."

When they reached the gates of the palace grounds they passed in through lines of guards and alighted at a side entrance of the building. Starkweather was conducted to a room in which sat the king and his prime minister. At his entrance both rose and greeted the American in a friendly manner.

"Mr. Starkweather," said the prime minister in fair English, "Signor Baroni, whose wife is a countrywoman of yours, has suggested you as one fitted to carry a message from his majesty to France. Would you be willing to oblige us by doing so?"

"I am at a loss to know why I am selected for such a purpose," replied Starkweather.

"You are an American, thus far a neutral in this war. Therefore you will not be so likely suspected of bearing a message from the Italian government. For you must know that the central powers are watching us keenly to know what we are going to do and, if we enter the war on the side of the allies, to know it at the earliest possible moment. Were we to send an Italian or one known to be in our confidence it is quite likely that the message would be stolen from him before he had crossed the border. We hope by using an American who has not been previously known to us to throw the spies off the track.

"If we are neutral the allies can move a million men they now hold to oppose us against the central powers. There is a dispatch notifying the French premier that Italy will remain neutral. It must be delivered with the utmost dispatch, and the central powers must not know of our policy.

"You are to carry the dispatch to Edward Bruson, who is waiting for the king's decision in Lucerne. He will instruct you as to the best means of reaching Paris."

It was suggested to Starkweather that the cab in which he had come to the palace would be watched on its return, and he was advised not to use it further. It was dismissed, and that night the messenger left the palace by a private exit, entered his hotel by a rear door and, having thrown what articles he needed for his journey into a lightweight suit case, left the house in the gray of the morning when no one was about, proceeded to the railway station on the Esquiline hill and took a train leaving for Milan.

It did not seem to the American that after such precautions any one except those who had dispatched him could know that he was on a mission, probably the most important to France, to the world, that had ever left the Italian capital. He did not know the power of the spy system of the central powers, which in this case was operated by the Austrians. The man who had taken him to the palace was shadowed, and Starkweather's movements from the moment he left his hotel to go there were known to those who were intrusted to report to Vienna every movement of the Italian government.

Starkweather reached Lugano, a resort for tourists at the foot of the southern slope of the Alps, before being obliged to halt. At Lugano he was obliged to stay over till the following morning. He asked the landlord of his hotel how he could kill an evening and was told that the kursaal, or casino, was open, though since the war it was not much frequented. He went there and found a small orchestra, refreshments and a number of patrons. Seating himself at one of the tables, he called for a liter of wine and a cigar. He had listened to several pieces from the orchestra when a couple entered and took a seat at a neighboring table.

The man looked like a German or an Austrian; the woman was dark complexioned and appeared to be French. At any rate, she spoke French to the man, whose accent was Teutonic. She seemed very ill at ease.

Presently the man arose from the table and went to the cashier's desk. He had no sooner left the woman than she leaned toward Starkweather and said:

"Monsieur, are you French?"

"No, madame; I am an American."

"I am French and am trying to get to France. This man is trying to head me off. For heaven's sake, help me!"

The woman's companion at this moment turned and, seeing her thus speaking to Starkweather, glared at him, returned at once to her, and together they left the kursaal.

An American gentleman is nothing if not a defender of woman. Starkweather longed to assist this one, but did not know how to go about it. Besides, he considered the responsibility he had assumed in bearing the king of Italy's message quite enough for him to attend to without getting into trouble with a Teuton who was tyrannizing over a lady. He therefore resisted an impulse to follow the couple and endeavor to afford the poor woman another chance to communicate with him. He sat where he was till he had finished his cigar and his wine, then returned to his hotel and went to bed.

The next morning at the railway station one of the uniformed attendants who carry hand baggage for travelers snatched at Starkweather's suit case and wrenched it from his hand. The American, who was something of an athlete, sent the man sprawling with his fist. A crowd was collecting when Starkweather jumped on the train, which was moving out. He had not carried his dispatch in the case, but the incident warned him that wherever it was it was in danger. Looking out of the coach window, he saw the man he had knocked down running after the train. But he had been bruised, and the train had achieved a good headway, so he was unable to catch it.

As soon as Starkweather had become composed after his fracas he looked about him, and there sitting in a seat at the other end of the compartment was the woman who had appealed to him at the kursaal the previous evening. She smiled at him, and he took a seat beside her. She told him that she had succeeded in eluding her persecutor and had reached the station and boarded the train.

During the day the train sped through a valley in which dashed a stream. Early in the afternoon the famous St. Gothard tunnel was reached, to pass through which some fifteen minutes are consumed. Starkweather conversed with the lady, who informed him that she was on secret service for the French government. When the tunnel was reached Starkweather was surprised to notice that the lamp in the top of the car was not lighted. Why it was not he could not explain till after having passed through the tunnel, and even then he did not know how the failure to light it had been accomplished.

When the train entered the tunnel Starkweather was sitting in his own seat at some distance from the lady. Being plunged in total darkness, he naturally placed his hand on his dispatch, which was in the left side coat pocket, directly over the heart. The train had not been in the tunnel a minute when he felt a pair of viselike arms about his chest, pinioning both his own arms. Then he was held by one arm of his assailant while the other hand was thrust under his coat and grasped his hand which held the dispatch.

It was Greek meet Greek. Starkweather's grip was of iron, and his adversary's was of steel. But Starkweather had the advantage of holding the dispatch, though he was not in training for such an encounter. His opponent finally clutched his throat.

Starkweather before leaving his hotel had picked up a stiletto he had bought for a curio and hung it, American plains fashion, to the back of his neck. He just had time before losing consciousness to free one arm, draw the stiletto and stab in the dark.

When the train shot out into the light, revived by fresh air he saw the woman who had appealed to him for protection lying on the floor in a pool of blood. But her disordered apparel showed under it the clothes of a man.

Starkweather climbed out of the window on to the footboard, and as the train slowed up at the station near the mouth of the tunnel he jumped down on terra firma and ran like a deer.

At the time the world wondered why France took away her troops from the Italian frontier, sent them against the Germans and saved Paris. Now it is known that the prime minister of France received the message of the king of Italy at midnight and at once set free the troops held on the Italian border.

Canada Needs More Money to Carry on the War

Our armies must be fed, clothed, sheltered, provided with guns, ammunition, transportation, medical supplies, and a thousand and one other things. Our expenditures for this purpose are $1,000,000 a day and are constantly increasing.

Canada also needs money to establish credits for the purchase of Canadian produce and products by Great Britain, because Great Britain can now buy on this side of the Atlantic only to the extent to which she can obtain dollar credits.

If Canada wants this trade, she must grant credit.

If Canada does not give credit, Great Britain will be compelled to purchase where credit is available.

Canada needs Great Britain's business—our entire agricultural, industrial and commercial prosperity depends upon it. Consequently Canada must have more money to finance this business.

Because if the entire cost of the war were loaded on us to-day, in the form of increased taxes, the strain would be more than the people could or should be called upon to bear.

But, by selling Canada's Victory Bonds now, our children and our children's children (who will actually benefit most from the immense war sacrifices of this generation) will bear their share of the financial burden.

Canada's Victory Loan will be offered in November and you will be asked to buy the Bonds to enable Canada to carry on the war and help to preserve her agricultural, industrial and commercial prosperity.

Prepare to buy Canada's Victory Bonds to the limit of your ability.

National Honour Demands That You Prepare To Buy Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

Gen. Cadorna in the Limelight

IT is announced that German troops have been sent to support the Austrians, and the manoeuvre calls to mind the general character of the strategy that has been pursued by the Allies ever since the main Teutonic offensives were checked. An attack is made upon the East front, for instance, and it is pressed until reinforcements can be hastened from the Western front. Then upon the weakened Western front an offensive is launched, drawing back reserves from the East. Then Italy strikes, the Allie taking turns in delivering their sledge-hammer blows. Had Russia remained staunch Germany by this time would have had no surplus men to shuttle back and forth. Her armies would have been nailed in their positions, and there they would have had to die or conquer. Russia's defection, however, permits the Teutons to keep up their old tactics for some time longer, and may have the effect of limiting the great victories achieved in the past few weeks by the Italian army.

Gen. Cadorna again comes on the scene. There are two features about him that are of particular interest. In the first place he is the only Allied general who has been fighting from the beginning of the war on enemy territory. In the second place, he is the only Allied general in supreme command who has not been promoted out of his job or otherwise relieved of the responsibility of directing the armies in the field. This must mean that he has given satisfaction to his own king and parliament, and also to the representatives of the Allies. It means, too, that his armies have the utmost confidence in him. His recent victories, among the most striking in the war, show that this confidence was well bestowed. It is said that the Italian soldiers idolize their commander-in-chief and believe that for him nothing is impossible, but as all soldiers are supposed to entertain similar notions about their superior officers we do not dwell on the point.

Nevertheless, it is easy to understand why they have confidence in Cadorna, and why the Italian people should implicitly trust him. He has a fine personality, to begin with, a big, genial man with a sense of humor whom nothing disconcerts. He has also a crisp, decided way of speaking. For instance, last spring, when there was a good deal of talk about the possibility of a renewed Austrian offensive through the Trentino, Cadorna remarked: "Never worry about their coming or not coming. I have got ready as though they were to come, and a lot of them, too. That's all." They did not come, because, probably, they knew better than the croakers the preparations Cadorna had made for their reception. In the first days of the war, when the great military station at Udine was to be built, and the city was being raided by aeroplanes almost every day, it was most desirable that the work should be carried on day and night on a railroad. Yet to illumine the railroad at night would be to invite more hostile attacks. It was no doubt a perplexing problem. When it was finally carried to Cadorna he merely asked if the night shifts were necessary. When told that they were, he merely asked, "Well?" Thus the order was given in a word.

There is no important general living whom the ordinary intelligent civilian would find himself in closer touch with than Cadorna if the two were talking of military matters. Though a technician of the highest gifts, the author of standard text-books and the like, Cadorna acts on the principle that all military strategy and tactics can be reduced to a question of common sense. There is a famous legal saying to the effect that "if it's not common sense, it's not law," and this is Cadorna's belief with regard to military operations. No pacifist living could regard with greater detestation the officer who wasted the life of a soldier than Cadorna. Yet to carry out necessary operations he will unhesitatingly throw a hundred thousand men into a battle. If the counterpart of the German Crown Prince were in the Italian army he would have been shot for his activities about Verdun.

Though Cadorna's name was almost unknown outside of Italy before the war, he comes from a most distinguished family. His grandfather was Minister to King Carlo Alberta, who led the movement for Italian independence, granted the constitution to his kingdom, then limited to Sardinia and Piedmont, and abdicated in favor of his son when he thought the action would help the formation of new Italy. His father was the general who, in 1866, led the Italian advance on the Isonzo, which was cut short by diplomatic interference, and the subsequent granting of Italian lands to Austria beyond the Isonzo and the Adriatic. The present general was born in the army, and is said to know the northern frontier of Italy as one knows the palm of his hand. It is rarely he has occasion to study maps, an accurate and minute plan of the scene of operations being carried in his head.

Life on St. Kilda.

The chief occupation of the St. Kilda men is fowling. The St. Kildans eat vast numbers of the eggs of the sea-birds which frequent their islands, in addition to the birds themselves, which are not only eaten fresh, but dried and salted for winter supplies. The cliffs are equally divided among the inhabitants, and a man seldom or never poaches on his neighbour's property. Each year the cliffs are portioned out anew, the Saxon Mod, or council, assembling for the purpose. The adjacent islands and "stacks" are regarded as common property and are hunted at intervals by a party despatched in one of the boats, the proceeds being equally divided among the entire population. No fowler in the world is more expert than the St. Kildan. Armed with a long rod at the end of which is a horsehair noose, he climbs the dizzy heights and snares the sitting birds at will, slipping the fatal noose over their heads and dragging the fluttering captives to him.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns soft corns or any kind of corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

SITUATION ON ITALIAN FRONT SERIOUS

CANADIANS AGAIN IN THE THICK OF FIGHTING

CANADIANS REPULSE TWO HEAVY COUNTER ATTACKS

Further Progress Made by the British and French in Flanders and Ground Gained in Yesterday's Drive Has Been Consolidated Successfully---German Pressure on the Italian Front is Increasing

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON. October 27.—Two heavy counter attacks by the Germans yesterday afternoon on the positions captured by us in the morning west and south of Passchendaele were successfully repulsed by the Canadians who took prisoners. In the night the ground gained was consolidated by us without interference from the enemy. West of Passchendaele we made further progress in the course of which we captured eighteen machine guns.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 27.—The British troops have made further progress west of Passchendaele east of Ypres, says an official statement from Field Marshal Haig to-day. Two German counter attacks were repulsed during the night and the ground gained yesterday was consolidated.

(Canadian Fress Despatch.)

LONDON, October 27.—Two thousand German infantrymen at Cologne mutinied when ordered to the Flanders front last week and destroyed their rifles and equipment. A general who tried to calm them was stoned. The mutineers were arrested and twenty-six of the ringleaders were court-martialed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 27.—The Austro-German blow on the Isonzo is featured by the morning papers which comment rather anxiously.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 27.—On Tuesday Turkish columns moving on both banks of the Tigris from Terkit approached our positions at Samara on the Tigris above Bagdad, says an official report from the Mesopotamian front. The Turks retreated up the river during the night without fighting on advance of the British.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME,(Friday)—A semi-official statement issued to-night says the struggle on the Isonzo front is more than bitter, and that its alternatives are undecided. "The situation created by the power of the enemy," says the announcement, "is certainly grave."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 27.—The Russian advance in the Riga region on the front of the German withdrawal is being continued, and Russian scouts have gone as far as Annehoff without encountering the enemy, says to-day's official communication. Russian positions on the coast were bombarded by German naval forces including a Dreadnought. There was no fighting in the Gulf of Finland.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, October 27.—American troops are in first line trenches on the French front, and United States artillery fired their first shot of the war at six o'clock on the morning of a recent day at a German working party. There has been intermittent artillery fighting since. The helmeted infantry marched in, without the knowledge of the enemy, on the same night, through rain and mud. French soldiers in the trenches welcomed them enthusiastically.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 27. — Continuing their offensive in Belgium French troops have captured German trenches north of the objectives reached yesterday, the War Office announces.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 27.—The Admiralty announces that yesterday afternoon bombing raids were carried out by naval aircraft on Varssenaere airdrome and the Thourout railway junction in Belgium. Bad weather conditions rendered the observation difficult. All the machines returned safely.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, October 27.—The official statement says: After having crossed our boundary line between Monte Conin and the head of the Sucrio Valley, the enemy is attempting to reach an opening on the plains. On the Carso hostile effort is increasing. Strong offensive thrusts by the enemy were repulsed by our troops.

GERMANY FLOODS RUSSIA WITH COUNTERFEIT BILLS

PARIS, October 27.—Well authenticated reports that have reached here reveal that Germany has gone into the business of counterfeiting on a big scale. It will be remembered that she was proved to have forged American passports for the use of spies and agents. It now appears that she is flooding Russia with counterfeit Russian bank notes, issued to the amount of 3,000,000,000 roubles ($1,500,000,000). The notes are marvellously engraved and the initials is so perfect that only the most experienced experts can detect the forced from the real notes.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBOROUGH

His Majesty the King, the British Parliament and People, have sent out an urgent call to Canada for assistance to the British Red Cross.

The need is greater, the demand more insistent, than ever before. Toronto has just given $850,000.00, and other cities in proportion. Our own City Council has wisely and generously granted $5,000.00 as a start. Last year a similar grant was supplemented by private subscription to nearly $9,000.00. This year I am asked to urge our good people to make it at least $10,000.00. Will we do it? We can if we will.

No personal canvas will be made, but private subscriptions are urgently asked and sorely needed. Please send them to Mr. Peter Campbell, Treasurer of the local fund, who will be pleased to acknowledge all such, large and small, both personally and through the local press.

Yesterday saw fifty-three candidates examined by the local Medical Board, exactly the same number that went before the doctors on Thursday. The number placed in A category was also the same as on the previous day —thirty-two being pronounced suitable material for the firing line. The rejections yesterday were, however, six less than on Thursday, accounted for by the fact that yesterday eight men were graded in B or C category.

Nineteen were examined in the afternoon with the following results:

Category A	10
Category B	3
Category C	1
Category E	5

At the night session thirteen were boarded and the figures were as follows:

Mr. Christopher Huffman, 526 Sherbrooke street, to-day received official intimation that his son, Driver Albert A. Huffman, was in Victoria Hospital, Cobalt, suffering from illness. Driver Huffman enlisted with the 52nd, and later transferred to 1st Section, 3rd D.A.C., France.

Registration Slow.

Up to 11 o'clock this morning only eleven men have so far reported for service at the local post office. The exemption claims are still coming at the rate of twenty or so per day, but there is nothing like the rush there should be, with the time for registering rapidly dwindling away.

CANADIANS IN DRIVE

Dominion Forces Fresh From Lens Fighting Are Sent Into the Battle on Flanders Front and Capture Strong Points

A HISTORIC INCIDENT

Canadian Headquarters in France, Oct. 26.—Back again in the bloody salient, smashing forwards towards the Passchendaele ridge, the Canadians, fresh from destroying the enemy forces cooped up in Lens, advanced at daybreak this morning on the front extending roughly from Passchendaele, on the Zonnebeke road, to Wallemelen. They had many strong points in front of them, such as Wolfe Copse, Bellevue Spur, Augustus Wood, Heine House, Hillside Farm, and the higher land to the north-west, but the Canadian troops, avoiding the impassable swampy area known as marsh bottom, swept forward in two waves. First taking the higher ground to the north of the marsh, they launched the brunt of their attack against Bellevue, while the second wave to the south, advanced against Augustus wood, Heine House and Hillside farm.

An Historic Incident.

This morning's attack will rank as one of the most historic incidents in the war in the history of the Dominion, for the battalions engaged advanced from practically the identical trenches held by Canada's veteran division on April 22, two and a half years ago, when the Germans, launching their gas attack, captured St. Julien, and might have stormed through to the coast but for the desperately gallant fighting of the battered battalions of the Dominion. To-day those trenches are ours again, and Canada, in an advanced area has wrested from the Hun the only bit of the Dominion's trenches he has succeeded in holding in the war.

Preceded by over two hours of concentrated artillery barrage the advancing force to the north plunged forward through slime and mud to the Germans' advance positions before Bellevue spur which was the scene of desperate fighting on Oct. 12th and has extensive wire entanglements with many five foot thick concrete "pill boxes."

During the last ten days our artillery, moved up with the greatest difficulty through seas of Flanders mud, has been giving Bellevue hell, the daily effect of our fire having been demonstrated early in the week, when two prisoners wandered into the Canadian lines utterly dazed from the effects of our fire on their concrete shelter. To the south of the marshy ravine our outposts for the last week have been constantly encroaching on the German positions, Augustus Wood, Heine House and Hillside Farm.

The Battalions Engaged.

That the Canadian attack was a minor one is shown in the allied advance on, roughly, a 10-mile front from Houtholst Wood, in the north, to Gheluvelt. To-day, at the time of filing this despatch, the engagement is progressing favourably to the south, with stubborn fighting to the north.

Among the battalions engaged are those of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Central Ontario.

The Canadians have advanced over half a mile, capturing many fortified places. The formidable German positions at Deck Wood is dominated by our battalions, who are holding the surrounding higher levels, and away to the north our troops have advanced beyond the enemy's stronghold at Bellevue Copse and have carried this position. There was sharp hand-to-hand fighting at Laamkeek-Bellevue, but an attack of our battalions on the southern ridge, to the Marsh Bottom, found the enemy largely demoralized. We engaged him at close quarters with grenades and forced him steadily back beyond Decline Copse.

Signs Enemy Disorganized.

For a time the Hun artillery maintained their barrage over our forward area, but as the fire of our guns increased his fire gave sure signs of disorganization. The only severe shelling our infantry received was from the enemy position to the south. While our own guns poured lead into the Hun position, he largely failed to retaliate upon our batteries, only stray shots falling in the rear of our forward area. By noon over 100 prisoners had been captured by our men, and the reports indicated extensive enemy casualties.

The Canadian Medical Services worked desperately to evacuate the wounded. Inland, where every yard is a shell hole and every other yard mud, six bearers were required to each stretcher. The wounded had to be carried 2,500 to 3,000 yards to advanced dressing stations. The Canadian Red Cross and chaplain services co-operated with the medical services to relieve the sufferings of the wounded men, and provided them with hot coffee, biscuits, cigarettes and other comforts to help them over the period of their transfer to hospitals.

Huns Stripped Their Lines To Assist The Austrians

MacKensen Has Massed 300,000 Germans on the Italian Border in Effort to Pierce Cadorna's Lines and Bolster Up the Drooping Spirits of Austrian Army.

A COSTLY MOVEMENT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Gen. Mackensen has massed 300,000 of his German troops a bare twenty miles from the Italian border, holding them in the hope of striking a battering ram blow that will pierce the Italian lines and force the fighting on the Italian plains.

According to this information, which reached here to-day, all these troops are from the Russian front. To gather them, Germany has had to strip all her lines to the north, to retire at scores of places in order to construct twisting battle fronts, leaving a bare skeleton of trench defenders.

POLITICAL REASONS.

Political and military reasons both have apparently impelled the German staff to its efforts against Italy. First of all, Berlin has been impressed of late with the alarming loss of morale in the Austrian army. That loss was reflected at home, in the drooping spirits and the recurrence of nation-wide movements for a peace at any price. The situation must have been and may still be, far more serious, from the German point of view, than the heavily censored reports from Austria have yet hinted, if it forced the German High Command to the offensive. The inevitable loss of men and expenditure of ammunition required is a high price for Germany to pay in her effort to hearten her ally again. Germany is hard up for both men and ammunition.

Not only was the Italian offensive seemingly planned to revive Austria's military slump, but there is every evidence here that the Germans hope to deepen Italy's political differences. Every dispatch from Rome to-day emphasized that the drive was likely to have exactly the opposite effect.

CONFIDENCE IN CADORNA.

The British press to-day admitted the German campaign was fraught with grave issues, but every confidence was expressed in General Cadorna's ability to withstand the drive. Official dispatches indicated that the withdrawal from the Bainsizza Plateau was being effected in orderly fashion. The Italians in at least one place are now fighting on their own soil, endeavouring to stem the invasion.

BRITISH DROP TONS OF EXPLOSIVES ON GERMAN WORKS

Airplanes Carry Out Successful Raid Over German Territory, Attacking Burbach Factories and Also Four Hostile Aerodromes

DIRECT HITS MADE

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 26.—(Delayed.)—An official statement on aviation activities issued to-night by the War Office reads:

"During the raid into Germany, carried out by our airplanes Wednesday night, another ton of bombs was dropped on Burbach Works east of Saarbrucken, in addition to three and a half tons already reported, making a total of six tons of bombs in the course of the night's operations. Three machines which took part in the raid are missing.

Yesterday the weather was impossible for flying during the day, but at nightfall the sky cleared for a few hours and our bombing machines left the ground and attacked four airdromes Forty-five heavy bombs were dropped and in one case a direct hit was obtained on a group of hangars. Before all our machines had returned the weather became bad again, and those of our airplanes which were out had great difficulty in reaching their airdromes. One machine has not returned.

SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE ROYAL FLYING CORPS

Capt. Arbon, of the Imperial Flying Corps was in the city yesterday and met the Aero Club committee, composed of Messrs. G. H. Logie, C. G. Graham, Roland Denne and Jas. Lynch. At the meeting it was announced that the Royal Flying Corps would take over the work formerly done by the Aero Club of Toronto, and in future the local committee would be known as a sub-committee of the Royal Flying Corps, and an applicant to the local committee will practically be assured that his application will be accepted when passed by the local sub-committee, all he will require to do further is to pass the physical test in Toronto. Further particulars will be given Monday.

TROLLEY CARS IN COLLISION

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—Thirty-five passengers were injured, some having limbs broken, but mostly cuts from flying glass, when two trolley cars on the Lachine to Montreal electric road, collided at high speed this morning. There were one hundred people on one of the cars, which was backing up at the time. Passengers say the conductor was putting the car on a siding when the collision occurred, because one of the passengers persisted in smoking contrary to the rules of the company.

Board Of Works Has A Balance Of $2,689.87

The Board of Works has $2,629.87 left out of its appropriation of $22,800, and will finish the year without an overdraft. Such was the assurance given City Engineer Parsons last night at the meeting of the Board of Works.

PETAIN ROCKED THE WHOLE GERMAN LINE THIS WEEK

Teuton Leaders Had to Rake the Entire Western Front For Reinforcements to Bolster Up the Tottering Sector

SOISSONS LIBERATED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Oct. 27.— Gen. Petain rocked the German line with his uppercut to the jaw on the Chemin Des Dames, and the German command had to rake the whole western front to assemble reinforcements and bolster up the tottering sector.

A census of prisoners to-day revealed that these reinforcements were collected, not in units of divisions, but in such small military fragments as companies and battalions. And those companies and battalions were identified as of regiments widely scattered along the whole western line. Plainly, the German High Command, with its reserve forces waning fast, was compelled hurriedly to grab occasional units from everywhere to create a prop for its Chemin Des Dames line.

There was yet more emphatic evidence, as your correspondent was permitted to view it personally to-day, of Germany's dwindling man power. A tour through the prisoners' cages showed a majority of those captured by the French were boys, mere youths of the 1918 class. They were a gaunt, under-fed looking lot.

HUNGRY PRISONERS.

But the hungriest of all the prisoners were those who were still being hustled back of the line to-day from nooks and crannies of caves, where they had been crouching since last Tuesday. Detailed explorations of ground over where was fought the battle of the caverns, revealed quite a number of the enemy, but none of them had much fight left.

The total number captured reached the 12,000 mark to-day.

Petain's victory liberates Soissons from all possible menace of a German grip, and that fact should be of particular interest back in Detroit, Mich. The automobile city has "adopted" Soissons, and is planning to rehabilitate it.

The enemy has completely evacuated Filain. The Poilus now dominate the city.

The Germans are rushing up new artillery and new infantry reinforcements for the purpose of establishing their new lines north of the Oise-Aisne canal. The waterway will afford them a good defensive position.

From prisoners it was learned the German lines where the French struck so successfully were manned with seven full divisions, a trifle over 105,000 men.

Mr. Burnham's Views Of The So-Called Win-the-War Party

Federal Member Does Not Want a Monopoly of Good Intentions

To an Examiner reporter, Mr. Burnham, M.P., this morning, when questioned with reference to the so-called win-the-war meeting billed by the Third Party for Tuesday evening, said:

"Where the parties here are in favour of the Union Government, what objection can there be to any number of candidates? Unionism will not lose. To seek to suppress, without reason, the aspirations of the great Liberal party at such a time as this, is, to my mind, actually wrong. Let the two great parties and Labour or Independents, all go to it, since they are actuated by a single purpose, viz., the support of the war and of the Union Government that for the time being has joined together to prosecute it.

'I am sure that I am speaking for Conservatives generally, as well as for myself, when I say that we want no monopoly of good intentions."

SATURDAY, OCT. 27, 1917

"PLAY FAIR."

A correspondent in yesterday's issue carried into suggestion a logical sequence of the demand for representation of labour in the Union Cabinet—a demand for labour representation in Parliament. We had 220 members in the last Parliament, of whom only one was an elected representative of labour. In the present Ontario Legislature out of one hundred and eleven members there is only one elected representative of labour. If we were to have Parliamentary representation by numbers in either House, the proportions would be reversed—there would be two hudred and twenty Labour members and one representative of the classes—doubtless a lawyer.

Nobody, however, is demanding this or anything like it; but there is certainly room and reason for a demand that labour interests have a larger share in legislation for themselves—the mass of the people.

We are striving to get win-the-war conditions to support a government as a directorate for organizing and winning the war. But not for one moment do we consider that we should nominate or send to Parliament a representative of the classes that are called upon and are to be the real winners of the war. Of the soldiers to be enrolled, seven-eighths are to be taken from the working classes, and seven-eighths of our population, the working classes, are to be called upon to sacrifice and save food to feed the soldiers.

As it was from the beginning, is now and, it seems, ever shall be, the classes that are the backbone, or to refine the metaphor, "the soul of a nation," are regarded as political proletariats—regarded as only fit to vote for politicians who, when elected, forget their creators, even grudging the men that serve our governments a living wage; and, in the composition of a win-the-war Cabinet deny labour a representative, and only think of its interests as an after consideration.

We are to win the war in the interests of justice, fair play, and honourable dealing; yet in the very process of preparation we deny to those who will do the most to win the war, justice, fair play, and honourable dealing in respect of their representative rights.

Reflections like this will not probably do an iota of good, yet they are an act of justice as voicing the protest of those who suffer in silence and are asked to fight and serve, as they only can serve; and like good children, ask no questions.

To "Keep the home fires burning" and the big guns blazing is the great duty of Canada just now and hereafter.

PUNISHMENT.

With all the eagerness and enthusiasm for winning the war that are increasingly developing, an additional spur to our activities and an additional stimulus to our war spirit should consist in offering ourselves and our efforts as instruments for exacting the penalties that German cruelty and ruthlessness are inviting. We should win the war, if only to end the merciless sackage of Belgium by Germany. Germany has extorted money from the invaded nation to the enormous total of 1,600 million dollars, and outraged its people in every conceivable and inconceivable way. It has deported the population and forced them to work on starvation sustenance till they were so useless for work that they were sent back to their homes, where by foreign charity they may be saved from absolute starvation. The plunderers of Potsdam are living off the resources of not only Belgium, but of Serbia and part of Roumania. When we consider that, if Germany wins, Canada will be included in the murderous mulefactions of Germany, we should be incited, even goaded, to enlist our last ounce of strength and resource in helping rid the world of monsters, the penalty of whose outrages cannot be paid by human agencies.

The Union Government has abolished the partizan system as an expediency. Liberal Premier Brewster, of British Columbia, has abolished it on principle.

A WORK THAT REACHES BEYOND.

It is probable that a sum as large as $100,00 is invested or represented in the about twenty churches and appurtenant biuldings of Peterborough. These properties are exempted from taxation. This material and civic recognition of the churches implies a high opinion of their value and usefulness to the community. There can be be no denial of the high estimate, practically demonstrated of the benefit and importance of the church or churches in a community. It follows that the better the community contributes to strengthen the churches the better for itself and humanity.

While the saying that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church," is true as an abstraction and metaphor, it has come to pass that it is a greater truth in fact and reality that the germ of the church's true growth is the modern Sunday school. It provides means and opportunities for right and high direction and salvatory control of the child's life.

This consideration and others naturally following, emphasize the importance of the Sunday school and the importance of the convention of Sunday school workers to be held here in the last two days of this month. It represents a real and true church union, a union of the denominations in a co-operation that involves no sacrifice of church polity, nor doctrine, and indiscriminately distributes benefits, that conjoined, realize the dual object, the strengthening of the foundation of our civilization, the church, and the improvement and religious and moral development of Canadian childhood and youth—and, sequently, manhood and womanhood. It is only the graceless and unthinking cynic that holds the belittling and contemptuous attitude towards the Sunday school, and its tremendously important work and influence and potentialities that bridge and overlap the boundaries of a bettered world here and a better world beyond.

If the abolition of patronage is good for war purposes, it was good for the past three years as a help win the war measure.

Top Storey of Braund Building To Have A Nine Inch Wall

The Council last night approved the recommendation that Braund Brothers be permitted to use a nine inch, instead of a fourteen inch, wall in the third storey of their new building on Charlotte street. City Engineer Parsons said that nearly every building by-law in Canada permitted a nine-inch wall in the top storey.

Mr. R. C. Braund informed the Board of Works, by whom the request was granted, that the foundation was now complete and that the brickwork would be begun at once. The two low-er storeys will have the prescribed fourteen inch wall, but above it was felt that the lighter wall was sufficient, as it carried no weight but the roof.

The City Engineer was authorized to advertise for snow ploughing tenders at once.

A request for a concrete sidewalk on Clifton street, was left for next year's Council, as the sidewalk work for the present season has been completed.

Rents Unopened Street.

Jas. S. Stewart asked for permission to use for pasturage the unopened section of Cambridge street north of McDonnel street. The Board was willing to rent him that section of the street in front of his lots. Ald. Duncan pointed out that the part of the street near the Bonner-Worth factory was used by the company and should be retained by the city.

An agreement will be made with Mr. Stewart leasing him a stretch of the street at a yearly rental of one dollar a year. It was planted in potatoes during the past summer.

For Disposal of Ashes.

City Engineer Parsons reported the following places for the disposal of ashes this year— East City, the old sand pit on Caddy street and the ditch on Maria street near the C.P.R. crossing; in the west end, Bonnacord street will be filled up, and in the south, the west end of Wolfe street will accommodate a great quantity of ashes before it is filled up. The goose pond was suggested for the north end, but will not likely be used.

The city's land under water east of the Quaker Oats spur line and south of Simcoe street, will be convenient for the disposal of ashes from the central district. When filled up this property will be valuable, and will particularly afford advantageous wharfing accommodation if necessary.

The
Nordheimer Piano

The important Point to consider when you select a piano is not how it looks and sounds today, but how it will look and sound ten or twenty years from now, and what it will cost in tuning bills in the meantime.

Almost any piano will look well and sound well when it is new. That is what makes the selection difficult.

How can an inexperienced person choose wisely? Sometimes—but not always—by the reputation of the maker. ALWAYS by the reputation of the seller. There are some piano houses that will not sell an instrument that is not good all through.

This house is one of them. See the Local Representative.

NATIONAL SERVICE IMPLIES STEWARDSHIP, NOT OWNERSHIP

That public opinion in Canada is agitated by the disclosures in relation to war profiteering is not to be wondered at, having regard to the times in which we live and to all the issues involved. The refusal of the public to look at profiteering from the point of view of Sir Joseph Flavelle brings into sharp conflict opposing standards of conduct which are wholly irreconcilable. As Sir Joseph Flavelle is a public man who has set a high standard of conduct for others, it is not unreasonable that his individual standpoint should be critically examined in the light of the awakened conscience of the world. He represents the spirit of modern commercialism, which is in a transition stage, and which is out of harmony with the spirit of these war times. That he is able to square his actions with his own sense of what is right and just and honourable does not debar the public from joining issue with him in a matter that so profoundly affects the moral outlook of this country in days when conflicting ideals are tested in the fiery crucible of military strife.

* * *

The points in dispute between Sir Joseph Flavelle and the public relate primarily to the facts of the case as brought out in the investigation before the Cold-storage Commission. It is contended by the President of the William Davies Company that the profits were made in open competition. This is the turning point in the case. Was the bacon sold in open competition? The facts brought out in evidence show that the purchasing agents for the British Government were William Demay & Company, and that through their relations with these agents the Davies Company gradually acquired privileges which were denied to other firms anxious to do business with the War Office. These privileges were of a character that indemnified the Davies Company against loss, while leaving them free to take full advantage of a rising market. Having secured this guarantee against loss, the William Davies Company proceeded to make plans in anticipation of an abnormal extension of their business in Canada and the United States, and obtained from the purchasing agents of the War Office orders up to the full limits of the productive capacity which their plant and capital or credit warranted. It is seriously contended by Sir Joseph Flavelle that these exceptional advantages over all their competitors, which the William Davies Company enjoyed in their dealings with the British War Office through the purchasing agents, can by any stretch of imagination be regarded as open competition?

* * *

If, as the evidence shows, the orders were obtained by private arrangement on terms of exceptional advantage, and not in open competition, the relations between the Davies Company and the War Office assumed a character materially different from those that obtained between the War Office and other bacon contractors, and in return imposed upon the Davies Company moral obligations which they do not appear to have fulfilled. The peculiar circumstances of the times must be taken into account when questioning the motives of the War Office in making, through their purchasing agents, exceptional arrangements with the Davies Company for the supply of bacon. In addition to the pressure of military necessities there can be little doubt that the British Government, in making such arrangements with a Canadian firm, was actuated by friendly sentiments, inspired by the sacrifices which Canada was making in the war. To Canada the War Office sent orders for munitions and other supplies in order that Canada as a whole should reap the advantages from military expenditure. Sir Joseph Flavelle, in his dealings with munitions contractors, has not hesitated to draw this fine distinction between war contracts and the principles which governed trade relations before the war. In this he has performed a high service to the British Government as head of the Imperial Munitions Board at Ottawa, representing absolutely he has set his face against the munitions profiteer, claiming, and rightly so, that the abnormal profits that were made before he took over control, and which were pocketed by a few individuals, should, in the peculiar circumstances of these tragic days, be eliminated in the interest of the British people, who with such splendid fortitude are bearing the burdens of an unparalleled war. It was given to Sir Joseph Flavelle to interpret the business relations between his own firm and the British War Office in the spirit in which he interpreted the relations between the munitions contractors and the Imperial Munitions oBard at Ottawa, representing the British Government. In both cases open competition was eliminated. But while this was of advantage to the British nation in the case of munitions, the advantage went to the William Davies Company in the case of bacon exports. The failure of Sir Joseph Flavelle to apply to his own firm the higher ethics of war contracts which he imposed upon munitions manufacturers is not lessened in gravity by his inability, in his own case, to distinguish between the commercial traditions of pre-war days and the moral obligations of disinterested patriotism at a time when men are cheerfully surrendering their lives in the outer defences of civilization.

Stewardship, not ownership! This is the insistent call of War to the men of trade and commerce and Big Interests as the portals of a new era open before the gaze of a suffering and a reborn world. Ten years ago the Bishop of London stood before the "bulls" and "bears" and bankers of New York at Trinity Church, Wall Street. "To you all," was his ringing challenge to the New World—"to you all, whether you be financial king or pauper, I send out this message: 'Give an account of your stewardship!'" Stewardship, not ownership! This is the keynote of the new commercial dispensation.—The Globe.

GREAT DENTAL SUCCESS OF A PETERBORO' BOY

Dr. Wightman, dentist, has returned to the city after attending, in New York, the annual meeting of the National Dental Association, at which delegates to the number of five or six thousand, were present from all parts of the continent.

Dr. Wightman was greatly impressed with the important educative effects resulting from the exchange of opinions and experiences by the best men in the profession.

His local loyalty was particularly stirred by the prominent part taken, and the prominent position occupied in the proceedings of the convention by a former Peterborough boy, Dr. Elmer Best of Minneapolis, a Peterborough educated boy, son of Mr. John Best, 426 Donegal street.

Dr. Best gave a paper on the subject, "Is over-filling root canals a wise procedure?"

From a technical, as well as oratorical and literary point of view this paper was pronounced the best given at the meeting. Dr. Best is now regarded as an authority in this branch of the profession.

ARE BATHS NECESSARY?

This looks like a foolish question in this enlightened age, but there are nearly a million Americans who knew nothing of Internal Bathing a few years ago and are now eager to testify that they are fully as essential to health as External Baths.

By a purely natural process of properly using warm water, the "J. B. L. Cascade" removes ALL the poisonous waste from the Lower Intestine, which, physicians agree, is the cause of 95 per cent. of all human ailments.

It instantly relieves constipation, properly regulates the bowels and prevents all the dragging-down which Biliousness and Liver Troubles always create.

E. W. Southall, M.D., of Genesee, N.Y., writes:

"I challenged the doctors in this town last week in regard to what I can do with your 'Cascade'. I can say for a truth that I know the reason for my success with many serious illnesses was due to having the bowels washed out once and sometimes twice a day. I only wish I could make the people in general believe in the efficiency of a good bowel washing. Sincerely yours",

Warne Drug Co. have filled a tremendous demand for "J. B. L. Cascades" in the past few years, and will show and explain it to you on request. A free and interesting booklet on Internal Bathing. "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient," can also be obtained for the asking. If you prefer, write to Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, 163 College street, Toronto, for same.

DENTAL.

The Rev. H. A. Fish Failed To Appear

Patience which is usually associated with fishing was not found wanting last evening when several hundred people gathered in the Victoria Hall for the express purpose of hearing Rev. H. A. Fish deliver an address on certain matters relating to protestantism. Up until noon to-day no explanation could be offered for Mr. Fish's inability to be present. As it was, a well selected programme was carried out and lengthened out and shortly before ten o'clock when all prospects of Mr. Fish arriving in time to address the meeting had vanished, Mr. Hughson Johnston, President of the Peterborough Protestant Federation, proceeded to outline the object of the meeting. Committees have been formed in the city, said Mr. Johnston, to organize the eighteen thousand Protestants of the city for mutual benefit.

Rev. H. Bolingbroke, a Presbyterian minister from South Mountain, Ontario, who was present at the meeting, expressed his sympathy with the meeting and its objects. He approved of the idea of banding together for mutual benefit. In urging Orangemen and others to attend divine service more than once a year, the Rev. Mr. Bolingbroke deplored the lust for pleasure and the part the automobile plays in decreasing church attendance. Several excellent recitations were given by Master Johnston. Mr. John Smith contributed two well rendered solos, and the band of the Salvation Army provided several musical selections.

President's Address.

The President, Mrs. Matthews, read the following inspiring address:

We are here to-day to hear the report at the completion of the third year of our work as the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society. In this great war the Red Cross stan s out very prominently as an insignia representing the love of humanity in the midst of tragedy. The aim of our Society has been, and is, to furnish aid to the sick and wounded and bring comfort to the weary and exhausted men right up in the battle line. We in Peterborough have endeavoured to run our Society after good business methods, to systematise our work, and co-ordinate as many auxiliaries as we could in order to prevent waste and overlapping, and for economy in buying, packing, and shipping, thus to render to our men in France the utmost good out of the money Peterborough contributes.

Magnitude of the Work.

If we pause to think of the work we in Peterborough are aiding, it appals us. Think of 25,000,000 men under arms, whole towns near the battle lines turned into hospitals to care for the multitude of wounded. Canada has provided 13 casualty clearing stations in France, and continues to maintain them, besides building and equipping outright a splendid hospital at Vincennes, near Paris, costing over $100,000, as a gift to France. The Canadian Hospitals in England are too numerous to mention, but they number over 18,000 beds. In addition to this, the Canadian Red Cross Society, out of her supplies, has helped over 1,880 of the French hospitals, many near the firing line, whose stock has been so terribly depleted because of the great rush of casualties. For her own Red Cross purposes, Canada has raised voluntarily over two and a half million dollars, and Canada must spend at least $95,000 a month to keep up what she has undertaken.

The men who are fighting over there have given up their careers, are enduring wet, cold, wounds, and death---we who are here in comparative comfort must do what is asked of us conscientiously. It is not wise to overdo. This war may not end for years; yet even if it does, there will be still from two to three years' Red Cross work, for it will take at least that long for the wounded and sick to be returned to us and for the armies to demobilise. It is so necessary that in every way we conserve not only money, but time and strength.

Peterborough Doing Well.

I was recently told when in Toronto at headquarters that this Peterborough organization was exceedingly good, and might be an example to many cities. Peterborough is doing splendidly---our auxiliaries are an inspiration to us. The work comes in so well and is so highly commended from the other side. Our one little extravagance is Red Cross labels, which tell in England and France just where the supplies come from. We feel that this is worth while, for some Peterborough boys may see this label and bless our women; besides, it also helps the Council, perhaps more than they realize, in making for a Greater Peterborough. Your executive keeps closely in touch with headquarers and as soon as we learn what particular thing is needed besides the regular supplies, we estimate our share and have this carried through by the societies and auxiliaries who are willing to take up this extra work.

Next Week's Campaign.

We ask of Peterborough that the $18,000 needed to "carry on" without retrenching may continue to be given to us voluntarily by monthly subscription. It is a dignified, business-like way of maintaining our share of the Canadian Red Cross work. We do not ask more than two afternoons a week from any woman, except for some unusual effort. Indeed, we feel confident that if every woman who could do so would give us three full hours each week for the work, the store houses in England and France would be replenished as needed.

What is our responsibility? Duty is the standard of honour of the boys in France. The men and women of Peterborough have not fallen short, and if they will continue to support the work in the same large-hearted way, we will have done what is required of us.

Reports Read.

The following reports were read:

The Prisoners of War Department of the Canadian Red Cross Society was started in London, England, in the month of May, 1915, under the capable and enthusiastic direction of Mrs. Rivers-Bulkeley, so favourably known in Canada, and whose husband made he supreme sacrifice in the early days of the war. With a heart attuned by personal sorrow to sympathy with others who suffer by reason of this tragic struggle, Mrs. Bulkeley has thrown all her energies and powers of organization into the endeavour to render the lot of Canadians taken prisoners by our powerful and unscrupulous foe a little more bearable than it would otherwise have been. It is with deep gratitude in our hearts for the work she has accomplished that we pay her this humble tribute.

The majority of our local men were taken prisoners in June, 1915, and very soon after that our own Prisoners' Department was formed and a resolution passed that the sending of sufficient money each month to pay for all parcels for our own men be a first charge upon our funds.

Pledge Has Been Kept.

This pledge has been faithfully kept, and during the year the sum of $5,970.48 has been forwarded to London for this purpose alone. In the year now commencing, the cost will be greater, as the six parcels, weighing in all 60 pounds, the maximum amount permitted to be sent to each prisoner every month, now costs $15 per month, and this is exclusive of the 8 pounds of bread sent weekly and the box of rusks sent monthly from Berne, Switzerland.

When the Department was started the cost per prisoner was only $7.50; but as the price of food commodities advanced, the price of the parcels increased accordingly. Latterly we have been paying, for 41 prisoners, at the rate of $585 a month; but we have been notified from headquarters that four of the men for whom we have been paying have been fully paid up for by their friends and various societies and lodges to which they belonged, therefore further donations on their behalf are no longer required from us.

The executive decided that in view of the probability that more local men may be taken prisoners, that it

BLACK, GREEN OR MIXED. SEALED PACKETS ONLY.

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

In connection with the above quotation, we are going to deal with it only from what should be the viewpoint of those in this City who will not be in the firing line.

Daily Sacrifices Necessary

We believe there is hardly a family in Peterborough who has not a relative, friend, or neighbor, making daily sacrifices for them overseas, to whom their heart goes out in love and sympathy, and genuine good wishes for the boys' safe return. This is as it ought to be, but it must be supplemented by something practical. No doubt you are doing something practical in an individual way, but there is another way by which you can help through organized efforts.

Canadian Red Cross Society

The Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society is the safest, most economical and best medium by which you can feel certain that your efforts are getting the utmost results. Through its effective organization the Peterborough boys who are prisoners in Germany, are fed and nourished, enabling them to return in good time to their relatives. The sick are carefully looked after, and who knows but that it may be the boy you are most interested in.

From His Own Home Town

The wounded are tenderly cared for, and if it is not your boy in this case, don't you think you could apply the principle of the quotation heading this notice?. Other lines of work are courageously undertaken. Busy hands are making up in this city all the year round, thousands of necessary articles for use in case of sickness and wounds and thousands of other articles to supply comforts for the boy who is neither sick or wounded, but who greatly appreciates a package from his old home town.

But to do this, it requires money—money that is well spent, and if we could get double

$20,000.00

It would still be well spent. Our request is a very modest one for the demands on the fund, and we are looking to you to make it possible that next year sufficient funds will be on hand to show even a greater appreciation of the efforts of every Peterborough boy at the front.

Canvassers will see you on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Next

You are not giving to them, but for your own Boy's Care and Comfort or which is just as noble, for some other parent's boy's care and comfort.

HOW THE TROUBLE STARTS

If more people knew how Rheumatism and kindred ills started there would be infinitely less suffering.

It should be a matter of popular knowledge that the blood stream completes the circulation of the body in approximately three minutes, gathering up waste matters. It is the function of the Kidneys to remove these impurities or poisons from the blood and eliminate them from the body. Should there be any derangement of the Kidney action the poisons are not eliminated but are carried around again in the blood stream, to accumulate slowly and occasion sickness and distress. Then follow pains in the back, in the region of the Kidneys, Rheumatism, constant headaches, and the many complaints arising from derangements of the Kidneys or Bladder. First, the Kidneys must be put in order and until these organs are healed and regulated no real health is possible. Gin Pills contain the medicinal and tonic properties that the Kidneys require.

You can get Gin Pills at all dealers—50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50, or a sample will be sent free upon request to the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, or to the U. S. address, 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 124

How Blue-jay Ends Corns

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive, which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

Your Corn Can't Resist Blue-jay

Blue-jay is the gentle way—but certain. Relief is instant, then the corn comes out in 48 hours.

The little spot of B&B medicated wax covers only the corn itself. It is the dainty, clean way.

Harsh liquids are mussy and dangerous. Paring might bring infection.

Millions of people have used Blue-jay for years. At the slightest appearance of a corn they put on a Blue-jay Plaster.

One plaster is usually sufficient; once in a while an old, stubborn corn requires a second.

Try the Blue-jay way tonight. It means freedom forever from aching corns.

In the United States the "White" has been the foremost machine for many years. Since the Canadian Co. has been organized and a factory established at Guelph, Ont. it has taken its well merited place in the realm of sewing machines in this country. The greatest testimonial we can offer is the recommendations of women who have used our machine. Our advice is "ask the woman who owns a "White".

ANNUAL MEETING OF RED CROSS SOCIETY

would be unwise to adopt four non-local men, as requested by headquarters, preferring to reserve the ability to respond to the needs of any other local men who may be unfortunate enough to be taken captive. The packing of these parcels is done at the Civil Service stores, London, under the strictest supervision and censored, and thus, if all regulations were hoourably carried out by the Germans, should reach the men unopened. The contents of the six parcels are most carefully chosen and the contents varied as much as is possible in accordance with the desire to send food containing as much nourishment and as great a proportion of fats as can be managed.

Every six months the Department sends to each prisoner a complete outfit of clothes, underwear, socks, boots, shoes, gloves, and toilet articles. Books, games, gramophones are also sent at intervals, and are most highly appreciated by the men as many of the letters and cards received from them testify.

Many Acknowledgements.

We receive on an average about 23 acknowledgements a month. This, we think, is fairly satisfactory, taking into consideration the great restrictions placed upon their mail, and to which the boys frequently refer when expressing regret that they are unable to acknowledge all the parcels received.

Books of an educational nature are sent entirely free of charge to any prisoner requesting them, if the application is made in writing to A. T. Davies, Esq., Board of Education, Whitehall, London. This should be made as widely known as possible to the prisoners, as the monotony of the daily round would thus be greatly relieved for a man of studious habits. Music and other books may be ordered by private persons through the authorized firm of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son, Strand, London. A proportion of the parcels do go astray and often much is stolen, especially tin goods, but Ambassador Gerard bears testimony to the truth of the statement made by all escaped and returned prisoners, that they could not exist if it was not for the Red Cross parcels.

Ambassador Gerard says Canadian and British prisoners give their camp food to the Russians, who are literally starving.

Conditions are Bad.

Some of the German camp commanders are a little more humane than others, but in some of the camps the conditions are truly terrible. Gerard says the indignities, the filth, the want of space and air and of cleanliness make not only the lot of the men but of the officers well-nigh unbearable. The Allies are under a deep debt of gratitude to the former U.S. Ambassador to Germany for the inextinguishable zeal with which he worked in order to alleviate the hard life of the prisoners.

We tender sincere thanks to all the generous individuals and societies who by their gifts and by the kindly interest they have manifested in this most important department of our many activities have helped to make the lot of our men and boys, captives in a far-off and unfriendly land a little less lonely and sad.

All through the long, weary, and stretched-out weeks, months, and years these parcels have gone forth carrying their unspoken message of remembrance and cheer from friends in the home town to those who are enduring the "hardship and the toil" in order that we at home may go free.

We feel this department owes very special thanks to both the Examiner and the Review for the ever kindly and generous manner in which they have granted us the use of their columns in our endeavour to keep the citizens in touch with this department of our work.

We do not intend to plead for continued aid in this humane work, for we feel confident that it will be forthcoming. In spite of all the ugly and cruel facts of the present times, and in spite of the fact that man is slaying his brother-man, humanity never had so great a love for humanity. Genuine sorrow and distress will ever continue to find and strike a responsive chord in the human heart.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

Annie Forbes Allan, Convener.
E. Morrow, Treasurer.

Packing Committee.

In presenting the second annual report of your Packing Committee, before I give you the actual figures I should like to draw your attention to the fact that we have almost doubled the number of cases shipped this year. In November of last year we started to send our supplies via St. John's and Montreal. It has been most satisfactory in every way, as a receipt with the name of the ship is mailed the day the vessel sails, and we have never lost a case as yet. One society sending through us to the C.W.C.A. had an acknowledgement from Quartermaster-Sergt. Gordon, 2nd Batt., in France, who received the case of 126 pairs socks sent. As convener of the committee, I should like to thank all the faithful packers who have assisted during the year, also Mrs. Greaves, who has so carefully mailed the cases for shipment, and the following auxiliaries and societies sending in supplies:

St. Andrew's Patriotic League, Ashburnham Patriotic League, Berean Bible Class, Buckhorn and Hall's Bridge, Fifty-seventh Chap. I.O.D.E. Blood-Making Medicine

It took centuries for medical science to discover that the blood is the life. Now, it is known that if the blood were always abundant, rich and pure, very few people would ever be ill. It was not until the end of the 19th century that an instrument was invented for measuring the red part of the blood. Then doctors could tell just how anaemic a patient had become, and with medicine to make new blood the patient soon got well.

All the blood in the body is nourished and kept rich and red by the food taken daily, but when, for any reason, a person is run down and cannot make sufficient blood from the food to keep the body in health, then a blood-making medicine is required. The simplest and very best of blood-makers suitable for home use by anyone, is Dr. William's Pink Pills. When a course of these pills is taken their good effect is soon shown in an improved appetite, stronger nerves, a sound digestion and an ability to master your work and enjoy leisure hours. For women there is a prompt relief of, or prevention of, ailments which make life a burden. As an all-round medicine for the cure of ailments due to weak, watery blood no medicine discovered by medical science can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DEATH OF MRS. H. D. KENNEDY

Priscilla Henderson, beloved wife of Evangelist H. D. Kennedy, died in Chicago, October 23, following a severe and critical operation. Everything that medical and surgical skill could do for her was done, but of no avail. Mr. H. P. Kennedy at once hurried to his bereaved brother. The body was brought to the home of his father, Mr. Dawson Kennedy, 600 Water street, from whose home the funeral took place Friday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery, Peterborough.

When a young woman, Mrs. H. D. Kennedy attended the Deaconess

MRS. H. D. KENNEDY
(nee Priscilla Henderson.)

Training School, Toronto, from which institution she graduated with high honours, and at once accepted work as a Deaconess in Trinity Methodist Church, Toronto. The following telegram will speak for itself:

Toronto, Oct. 25, 1917.

To Rev. Jas. P. Wilson, D.D.,
Peterborough, Ont.:

We deeply regret that it seems impossible for Trinity Church to be personally represented at the funeral of Sister Kennedy. Kindly express to the friends gathered and especially to the sorrowing relatives, our deep sympathy and say that we surround them with our love and prayers in this hour of trouble. The pastors, Mr. Powell and Dr. Tovell, as representing the church, join with Mr. Ambrose Kent and Mr. S. W. Perry as representing the Sunday School in bearing testimony to the splendid work Sister Kennedy did during the years she was our Deaconess. Her faithful, loving care of the young people, together with her Christlike life, have left a very precious influence that is operating with us till this day. A special place will be given to prayer for brother Kennedy and the family during our service next Sunday morning.

With sincere heartfelt sympathy,
R. Newton Powell,
I. T. Towell.

For many years, the late Mrs. Kennedy and her husband have been successfully engaged in Evangelistic work across the American Continent. Mrs. Kennedy was a gifted singer, a capable organizer and preeminently a soul-winner. She has been instrumental under God's guidance in turning thousands of precious souls from darkness to the marvellous light of the Gospel.

Among the many floral tributes, which showed esteem for the deceased, and brought a message of sympathy to the bereaved family, was one from Trinity Methodist Church, Toronto, and one from The Great Commission Prayer League of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

Among the relatives from out-of-town were: Mrs. Kennedy's brother, Rev. Wm. Henderson, Ganonoque; her niece, Miss Olice Russell, Albert College, Belleville; her nephew, Mr. Henderson, Brampton; her cousins, Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Brown, Toronto; Miss Nina Sherin, Lakefield; Miss Millie Sherin, Omemee; Mrs. R. A. Ward and daughter; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Kennedy, and Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Kennedy and Maxwell, all of Toronto.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Jas. P. Wilson, D.D., pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, of which church Evangelist Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy are members. Revs. Thomas, Greatrix and Whattam assisted in the service.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Harry and Wesley Sherin, Lakefield; Wm. Madill, Geo. W. Mulligan, Dr. M. A. Morrison and R. J. Kidd, Peterborough.

"Weep not that their toils are over,
Weep not that their race is won;
God grant we may rest as calmly
When our work like theirs, is done,
Till then we would yield with gladness
Our treasures to Him to keep,
And rejoice in the sweet assurance—
He giveth His loved one, sleep."

A WARM TRIBUTE TO THE Y.M.C.A.

Winnipeg Soldier Says the Red Triangle Men Are Working Right in Support Lines

Following is an extract from the letter of Sergt. J. M. Richmond, 78th Canadians, to the Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., Winnipeg:

"I read that article in Jack Canuck knocking us, and I came near writing the editor of the paper telling him something he ought to know.

"If we hadn't the 'Y,' out here, we would enjoy hell proper. There is the only place we have to go when we want anything to eat, outside of rations. They come right up to our support lines, under shell fire, with the many little luxuries they have for us. The one closest here is so close that the other night I came so near being near being that I had to tell my men to beat it for cover. The officer in charge had to fall flat three times in as many minutes to save himself.

"They give coffee and keep a stock of sweets for us there just where we need them. I tell you this to prove that the 'Y.' serves us where we want to be served, and where there is extreme danger, and, what's more, where no one else does.

"The 'Y' is only open during darkness, because it's under direct observation."

"Fred Sims, a pal of mine, said to me when I asked him for his opinion of the 'Y': "The 'Y' has saved more fellows' lives on the Somme than the doctors." Every one says the same and those fellows who knock were either in France about a month or in France when the 'Y' was just getting started. For myself, I always enjoy the packets of biscuits and hot drink ten strong, through the early morning when going out or coming in. On the 9th, the 'Y' gave us everything we wanted free of charge."

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined Federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION ARE WELL UNDER WAY

Preparations for the Sunday School Convention to be held in Peterboro on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next are progressing very favorably. The local Sunday School workers are very anxious to sustain the reputation of Peterboro as a convention city, so are leaving no stone unturned to provide for the comfort and the pleasure of the convention delegates.

A meeting of the Reception and Courtesy Committee was held at the Y.M.C.A. last evening, with the following members present: Chief Thompson, Mr. R. J. Kidd, Mr. T. W. Robinson, Mr. Wm. Madill, Mr. Ingall, Mr. A. Mowatt, Miss Lees, Mrs. R. H. Parsons, Mrs. C. N. Meserve, Miss L. Scott, Mr. W. G. Shiner, Mr. Robt. Sutherland, and Mr. C. N. Meserve, Convenor.

Other members of the committee who have agreed to work but who were not present at the meeting are Mr. Hughson Johnston, Mr. H. W. Stock, Mrs. C. C. Parsons, Mrs. C. E. Sisson, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. J. John.

The committee will have four of its members at each of the C.P.R. and G.T.R. trains on Tuesday, starting with the C.P.R. train, which arrives from the east at 5.59 a.m., up to the G.T.R. train arriving from Toronto at 9.14 p.m. The committee will be assisted by 50 boy guides who are to be provided by the young men's Bible Classes from the various Sunday Schools. The Committee Members and guides will be distinguished by badges and will conduct delegates to the convention church, where registration will be made, and from the church to the billets.

Several members of the Committee will be stationed at the church auditorium doors to extend any courtesies possible to the visitors. The committee will also provide a check-room at the George street church, where baggage only will be checked, believing that this will prove a convenience to delegates who will be attending the day sessions, before going to their place of entertainment.

The other committees, especially the Billeting Committee, are actively engaged in preparing for the convention, so that those who are able to attend are assured of a period of pleasure and profit.

SAMMIES ARE IN THE FRONT LINE TRENCHES

(By J. W. Pegler.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMERICAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, FRANCE, Oct. 27. — American troops are in the front line trenches and American artillery is behind them.

Official announcement of this fact was made in the following statement from headquarters to-day:

"In continuation of their training as a nucleus for the instruction of later contingents, some battalions of our first contingent in association with veteran French battalions, are in the first line trenches of a quiet sector of French front.

They are supported by some batteries of our artillery, in association with veteran French batteries.

"This sector remains normal. Our men have adapted themselves to actual trench conditions in a most satisfactory manner."

With the American Sammies fighting in the trenches side by side with the French poilus, a red-headed artillery captain and his husky gunners, will share the fame of firing the first shell sent by an American battery in the fight for democracy.

The captain gave the gunner a command—the gunner jerked the lanyard, and America's first shot against German autocracy screamed toward a German battery. It was precisely at six o'clock.

The morning was a misty one. The American infantry restlessly waited during a certain day while the American gunners were at their part of work. They remained in their billets behind the lines until evening. Then they swung through the rain swept muddy street of a tiny village, their shadowy forms disappearing down the road toward the trenches.

Some attempted to sing "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." It was just starting when others shouted—"Shut up the Boche will hear you."

Then silence fell—except for the rumbling of the rolling kitchen that kept pace with the soft shuffle of the feet of the marching detachment. The shell case of the first shot fired for America in the world's greatest war is en route to President Wilson today. Major-General Sibert ordered that it be preserved for him.

Just five civilians — all newspaper correspondents — witnessed the first American troops marching to the trenches.

A COMMITTEE TO CONFER WITH MANUFACTURERS

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—That he would appoint a committee to confer with the manufacturers, was all that Food Controller Hanna would promise a deputation of breakfast food men from various parts of Ontario and Quebec, who waited on him to-day and asked that some elasticity be given in the operation of his recent order prohibiting the selling of cereals in packages of less than twenty pounds.

The manufacturers said that millions of cartons would have to be sacrificed, and the health and digestion of thousands of people affected if the law regulations were carried out.

93RD BATTALION BAND INSTRUMENTS SHOW NEED OF CARE

A special meeting of the Council was held last night, following three committee meetings, and as a final to a busy evening.

Ald. Saunders read Mr. F. W. Miller's report on the condition of the band instruments formerly used by the 93rd C.E.F. Battalion Band and now stored in the garret at the city hall. The valves of the brass instruments have become stuck, and while the clarionettes have not suffered, they should be moved to a warmer part of the building to prevent the splitting of the reeds. Mr. Miller added that band instruments are better when kept in use.

Mayor Duffus remarked that he had been told recently that the Depot Battalion at Kingston would be glad to secure the instruments for a time, but the Council was unmoved by the suggestion.

Ald. Saunders suggested that Mr. Miller be given a gratuity to remove the instruments and take care of them. The Council approved his proposal and instructed him to sound Mr. Miller as to terms.

May Buy Rifles.

The rifles the city bought for the Home Guards may find a purchaser in Mr. Moore, who had charge of the Government ranges. He will inspect them to-morrow. There are twenty-two of them and the Council values them at about five dollars each.

Mayor Duffus stated that he understood the Board of Education was prepared to take all or part of them for the Collegiate Institute Cadets. This matter will be decided at the next meeting of the Board.

City Hall For Exemption Board.

A request that the city provide accommodation for the two local exemption boards was answered by the Mayor, who stated that Judge Huycke's chambers and the Council chamber would be used.

A War Loan Banner.

Formal consent was given to the erection of a banner at the Hunter and George street corner to help advertise the new Dominion war loan of $150,000,000.

On Ald. Duncan's motion the G.T.R. will be asked to provide a drain on the east side of Bethune street between Wolfe and Dalhousie streets. He also pointed out the need of planks across Lock street and Ware street and was promised that this disrepair would be remedied.

Dogs Unleashed.

The dog by-law was amended, removing the clause that required the use of a leash when dogs are at large. It is sufficient now that they be under competent control.

Sir Adam Too Busy.

Sir Adam Beck wrote that owing to the pressure of business he would be unable to visit Peterborough for some time, but would notify the Mayor as soon as an open date presented the opportunity.

The Dominion Railway Board asked for suggestions to increase the protection to motor and other vehicular traffic at level railway crossings. The Board of Works was instructed to discuss the question and report to the Council. This request has directly followed the recent representations made by the Ontario Motor League to the Railway Board. In order that the most efficient protective measures may be adopted for use at military crossings, the Board desires the widest deliberation on the desired safety first devices.

SITE FOR A NEW CHURCH

Three lots have been purchased at the corner of Lansdowne street and Western avenue, which ultimately are destined to become a site for a new church that will take the place of St. Alban's mission. The building itself will be delayed until such time as sufficient funds are forthcoming to erect the new structure. Mr. C. A. G. Spence is in charge of the mission.

Citizen Gets 156 lbs. Of Pork At 16 Cents From His Own Pig

Have you a little packing house in your home? One of the city officials has, and his experience offers a solution of the national problem of reducing the cost of the Flavelle product. Early in the year he bought a six weeks' old pig on the market, and raised it to be a real porker that weighed in at slightly over 200 lbs., before the butcher dressed it down to 156 lbs. of ham, sides, shoulders and the other parts that are now in brine. With these 156 lbs. stowed away for winter use this particular official is not losing much sleep worrying about his meat bills, outside of his Christmas turkey.

For the benefit of those citizens who contend that in these strenuous times the ban should be lifted on the old economy of keeping several pigs, a practice that was quite common in Peterboro until about ten years ago. This particular pig cost just $26.50. It is a simple matter to determine the cost per pound of securing 156 pounds at a total of $26.50, and the answer is 16 cents. Thus, the city official has a winter supply of the very choicest pork that has cost him a ridiculously small sum in comparison with the charges in the retail meat stores. It isn't a big idea, but it presents a suggestion for next year's greater production campaign.

Normal Students Were Entertained

Last evening the Normal school students were entertained by the members of George street Epworth League. About three hundred were present. The programme consisted of an instrumental duet by Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Sanderson, solos by Mrs. Renwick and Mr. Charles Parsons. Miss Parker gave a recitation. Rev. Mr. Thomas who presided, gave a brief address. Miss Alice Elson, president of the League, and Mr. Parson, also gave addresses.

The platform was appropriately decorated for the occasion with autumn leaves and evergreens. Refreshments were served at the close.

City Will Deliver Coal First To The Urgent Cases

The city has twenty-eight cars of coal on order, and last night decided to get ten more if possible, in the proportion of seven cars of nut to three cars of stove. The problem of the delivery of small quantities, such as quarter-ton lots, will be dealt with in the manner followed by the retail dealers. If the city has sufficient supplies on hand when an order for part of a ton is received there will be a twenty-five cent extra charge, but if the conditions are reversed and only part of an order can be supplied, the additional charge will not be made.

Furthermore, if a city driver finds that customers have sufficient coal on hand, their orders will be held back until more urgent demands have been filled.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee also deputed the supervision of the replacement of the arc lamps by incandescents to a sub-committee composed of Ald. Dobbin and H. O. Fisk. Forty-five incandescent lamps were installed yesterday.

October 26th, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Some of the so-called leaders in Peterborough of the good old Liberal party are writing themselves up in a vain endeavour to impress the Liberals of this riding with the fact that their leaders are amongst them looking after their interest. And getting ready to ride them down to the water trough. Now the rival jockeys are doing good work. Mr. Pardee, the chief Liberal whip was nominated by his party at a party convention at West Lambton on Wednesday, as a Unionist Government supporter, and was accepted. In Peterborough the political situation is just the same but if the Liberal party wants a new man instead of the present one it ought to meet in convention, and not be represented by a few scribblers in the local press, who are more concerned with keeping before the public than with the interest of the Union Government. Let us have a convention if necessary and no fooling about it.

Yours truly,
LIBERAL.

Peterborough, Oct. 27, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In last night's issue of the Review, "Unionist" is wrong in his statement that the aim of the "win-the-war League" is, or intends to be a third party. If he had read the reports of the Council meeting held in Toronto, more carefully, he would see that the intentions of the League were to eliminate party for the duration of the war, and to give its hearty support to the present Union Government and its accepted candidates in all constituencies, that their efforts should be directed to bringing the present parties together on a common platform, urging them to choose a candidate that would be acceptable to both parties. This is in accordance with the desire and expressed wish of Sir Robert Borden, and he has stated that such candidate would receive the endorsation of the Government, but the Government will not endorse the candidature of any single party convention nominee. The Win-the-War League platform is the platform of the present Union Government. For the past two years it has been working for Union Goernment, military conscription, conscription of wealth, and war porfits, active prosecution of the war, etc. The League is out to support the Government in an active prosecution of all war work. The meeting here on Tuesday evening is not to choose a candidate, but to place before the electors the reasons why both parties in this riding should get together and choose a candidate who would be acceptable to both parties, and who would support the present Union Government in an active prosecution of the war. There is no intention on the part of the League to dictate to either of the political parties, or to assume any authority for the calling of any convention. The sole purpose of the meeting on Tuesday night is to propagate the idea that for the object of winning the war all parties should unite in supporting the present National Government.

Yours truly,
Non-Partisan.

EGGS FOR U. S. ARMY RATION.

Unless Government Asquiesces, Chicago Packers Will Lose Fortune.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The use of cold storage eggs as army rations will be suggested to the Government, it was learned here to-day, by representatives of the butter and egg exchanges of Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and New York, and the Mercantile Exchange of New York. A committee, consisting of one member each of these markets, plans to go to Washington with the further suggestion that the federal food officials fix a price which would be on the usual basis of cost plus 10 per cent.

Chicago packers are said to own millions of cold storage eggs, for which there is no demand, because the supply to-day greatly exceeds the supply which existed at the time the eggs were put aside. The holdings are said to be 13.2 per cent. greater than a year ago in 440 storages throughout the country. Their market value to-day is considerably less than when they were put in storage, and wholesalers are said to be facing millions of dollars in losses unless a cost-plus 10 per cent. price is fixed arbitrarily by the Government. It was pointed out to-day's action making these eggs an army ration would take care of the oversupply.

MISSISSAUGA INDIANS DO NOT WANT THE VOTE

Some members of the Mississauga Indians, who have reserves at Chemong, Rice Lake, and Scugog, emphatically state that they do not want the right to vote—at least not for the present. The Government owes them very considerable sums for boundary rights, islands, and other properties in the province, and they believe tha if they received the franchise now they would have to surrender these financial claims, and they would lose this money, which has been owed to them for a long time. For the present they are content to enjoy the privileges granted them by treaty.
